"The necessary understanding has not been displayed," Fedorenko said. "On account of such a negative position of the United States and others . . . violence was done to the principle of unanimity."

U.S. ambassador Arthur Goldberg countered that the U.S.S.R., not the U.S., had brought up the time-limit issue.

"We have tried to co-operate in a spirit of compromise," he said. "I did not accept the view of the Soviets as they did not accept ours."

Delegates noted that Fedorenko took another polabot at Secretary-General U Thant. He repeated an earlier charge that Thant had violated the UN charter by beefing up the observer force, which includes Canadian troops, on the subcontinent without checking first with the Security Council.

Viet Cong Now Including Snakes in Deadly Arsenal

SAIGON (Reuters)—Viet Cong guerrillas now are including snakes in their deadly arsenal of anti-personnel weapons for use against American and South Vietnamese forces here, it was learned today.

The Communist-backed forces recently hung several snakes from the roof of an underground tunnel before it was over-run by an American unit.

One U.S. soldier cautiously entered the tunnel, carefully scanning the floor for signs of any of the Viet Cong's vast catalogue of booby traps.

As he moved with head down he ran into the snakes which bit him all over the face.

This was just one of the crude but effective booby trap devices the guerrillas have been using more and more lately as the American and South Vietnamese troops have stepped up the pressure against them.

The Viet Cong still maintain large-sized units equipped with sophisticated weaponry, recently reinforced by crack North Vietnamese units.

But they are falling back on their familiar hit-and-run guerrilla tactics.

Booby traps include holes dug in jungle trails with metal or sharpened bamboo spokes at the bottom.

The Americans fitted metal plates to their boot soles to protect them from spiked foot traps, so the Viet Cong elaborated the traps so that metal jaws clamped onto the victim's ankle.

Coconuts with metal spokes stuck in them are hung in the trees, balanced so as to fall on anybody touching a trip-wire below. Grenades are another common trip-wire booby trap.

USE GROUND GLASS

Glass is ground up and put into soft-drink bottles. Cigarettes are poisoned and then sold on the market to the Americans.

Grenades can also be set to go off as the heat of the sun melts an elastic band holding the firing pin down.

Fields are filled with six-foot bamboo spikes to prevent helicopters from landing.

In one instance, an American ground unit found a huge crossbow fitted with an eight-foot arrow designed to hit a helicopter if it landed nearby.

The Viet Cong tactics are the same they used against the might of the French army in one of the greatest-ever displays of guerrilla warfare.

The eight-year indochina war was climaxed with the defeat of the French at Dien Bien Phu in 1954.

I'M VOTING FOR LEE GRILLS
PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE

DR. JOHN STOCK
BELLEVILLE

I have studied the platform of all parties and feel that the policies of the Progressive Conservative Party are much superior. These are designed for a modern world. Income tax concessions, educational program, the formation of a new youth department and a medical health plan are only a few of the reasons why I feel that clear-thinking Canadians must vote for Lee Grills and the Progressive Conservatives on November the 8th.

Police said a crowd advanced on the combination restaurant and residence when a shot was fired and three persons were struck by pellets.

One of the three, Duane Brooks, 19, of nearby Moscow, is in satisfactory condition in Kingston hospital after being hit in an eye by pellets. Two others were released after treatment.

First of Its Kind
Flying Club Lease For Mountain View

The Prince Edward Flying Club at Picton has been granted a long-term lease for civilian use of the runways at Mountain View at Shannonville, it was learned today.

The lease, effective November 5th, was announced today by flying club president Don DeMille, following confirmation from Robert Temple, Liberal member for the last House of Commons.

It is the first time that the Department of Transport has approved the lease of military air station runway facilities for civilian use.

This gives the Quinte district what is believed to be one of the longest runways in Ontario for servicing private and executive aircraft.

Use of executive aircraft by Canadian and U.S. businessmen visiting the area has grown in recent years.

The club has had temporary weekend use of the Mountain View landing field for the past twelve months. Since the club started using the field, negotiations have continued, however, for a permanent lease arrangement.

Under the terms of the lease the Picton club will be "custodian" of a 16-acre tract of land north of the runways to be used as a civilian ground use area. Ultimately a club headquarters and service facilities will be constructed at the station.

Club officials stated that every co-operation had been received from the RCAF, while local members of parliament, both federal and provincial, as well as the Belleville Industrial Commission, had also assisted.

The club will have full time use of the three paved runways at Mountain View. The runways, up to 5,000 feet in length are long enough to accommodate the largest executive and civilian aircraft, it was stated.

Club flying and charter service will also be operated from the Mountain View field.

Napanee News

Three Planks Added to PC Platform in Pr.-Ed. Lennox

NAPANEE — The Progressive Conservatives held a large rally and pie social in the Napanee Armoury Thursday evening.

The platform planks were piped and read by a Scotsman in full Highland dress. Miss Kay McFarland introduced the guests, Mr. L. Smart, mayor of Napanee; Mr. Norman Wilson, chairman of N.D.S. School Board; Mr. Norris Whitney, MPP for Prince Edward-Lennox; Mr. Clarence Milligan, former MP for this riding; Glen Herrington, former mayor of Napanee; Mr. W. Briscoe, campaign chairman; Mr. Allan Anderson, president of the association; Mrs. A. Brown, president of the women's association; Mr. Douglas Alkenbrack, P.C. candidate; Mrs. Alkenbrack and Mr. Grant Campbell, guest speaker and former MP for Stormont.

Mr. N. Wilson introduced Mr. Alkenbrack, telling of Doug's past work in the area. He was a councillor from 1952-53, deputy - reeve 1954 and '55, reeve 1956, 1957 and Napanee 1957 - 58, M.P.-in 1962 and 1963 and in 1965 is seeking re-election to the House of Commons. He said Doug is a man who remembers the past, acts in the present, and looks to the future, who spoke 39 times on matters of interest to Prince Edward - Lennox in the House of Commons.

Mr. Alkenbrack began his address by telling the audience of over 200 people of the problem which besets Canada. This is the corruption which exists in the government, and the answer to the problem is Conservative government in the future, he said. The Liberal regime has turned Canada's finest institutions to evil use, he charged.

ANSWERS CHARGES

Mr. Alkenbrack answered recent charges made by his opponent, Mr. L. Woolsey who called Mr. Alkenbrack's newspaper advertisement "political garbage," ("I spoke on behalf of the plight of the canning industry in this riding and Mr. Woolsey calls that garbage," said Mr. Alkenbrack. "I spoke on behalf of the poultry men when eggs were only 31 cents a dozen," and I spoke for dairy interests, cheese, cheese factory and milk producer problems, life damage, water pollution, pensions, export of hay. This he calls political garbage. I spoke for the cherry growers in Prince Edward when they could not sell the cherries and Mr. Hay interceded by saying the cherries were poor in quality and color. This was a falsehood. Criticism is okay but one must have something better than that to stand on. We have much more to offer."

NAMES THREE PRIVATE PLANKS

Mr. Alkenbrack outlined the general policies of the Conservative party, and named three of his own private planks. They are income tax exemptions for the drilling of farm wells, assistance of cheese factories that export, and assistance for fruit growing and canning export businesses.

Mr. Alkenbrack said that one man cannot act alone, he must have contact with his constituents. "We will use what we have found good and employ it for the benefit of Prince Edward-Lennox," he said. He added that the Armoury, which was closed, will be re-opened. This was announced by Mr. Diefenbaker while at the East Coast. This is a sign, he said, that the Conservatives will build up, not tear down as the Liberals have.

Mr. Alkenbrack was thanked by Mr. A. Anderson. Mr. Whitney spoke briefly on the issues at hand.

LASHED LIBERALS

Following a musical interlude by the Deltones of Napanee, Mr. Clarence Milligan introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Grant Campbell. Mr. Campbell lashed out at the Liberal party on the drug issue, provincial right, corruption in Montreal and the question of national disunity.

Mr. Campbell said he was sick of hearing it said that Mr. Pearson is all right, but he is no politician. "That's the trouble with the whole party," said Mr. Campbell. "It is filled with amateurs." John Diefenbaker is an honest man and will not sell out to Quebec or the U.S.A. or the underworld, Mr. Campbell said in closing, and urged election of a Conservative government.

Temple Holds Final Rally of Campaign

Robert Temple told the Canara Club crowd of people last night they were the most enthusiastic he had ever experienced in his 14 years of campaigning.

The wind-up rally and Chinese food party for Liberal candidate Robert Temple last night attracted more than 2,000.

Grown-ups of all ages started arriving for the climax to Mr. Temple's campaign at 8.30 p.m. although the final meeting was advertised to commence a half hour later. By 9.00 o'clock the upstairs auditorium of the Club Canara was filled while well wishers and supporters converged on the place from all directions and in varied conveyances. A great many walked rather than go to the trouble of finding parking space within blocks of the recreation building.

Candidate Temple made his entrance to the speaker's platform around 10.00 p.m. He had to shove and push and squeeze his way up the stairs like hundreds and hundreds of others. He was greeted by an exuberant crowd who cheered and sang "Hello Bert" as he waded to the well-known show tune.

Don McAlpine, who will be 21 on November 9 and is voting in Hastings South for the first time at this election held by Canada's Chief Electoral officer spoke on behalf of Mr. Temple. He from Marysville and his case received attention after he brought the matter to a newsman's attention two weeks ago. He is a student attending the University of Toronto. He disclosed last night that he feels Mr. Temple a polite and intends casting his ballot for Mr. Temple in the Hastings South riding on Monday.

Valve Closing Called Act Of Sabotage

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—A gas company official said Friday the closing of a main gas valve which left 7,200 homes and businesses in Port Arthur and Fort William without heat for 2 hours is considered "an act of sabotage."

About 70 workers were busy Friday manually resetting pilot flames in furnaces and stoves, a job estimated when loss in pressure occurred.

Mr. Schultz said the main valve, about a mile away from the cities, was closed by someone "familiar with the operation of natural gas." The loss in pressure affected all users.

STRIKE IS ON

About 20 Twin City employees are on strike seeking higher wages and greater job security.

Mr. Schultz said ii would be unfair to assume this act of sabotage was caused by a striking employee of the company. However, it would be unlikely that someone without a knowledge of gas equipment could have turned off the valve in question.

The valve requires a special wrench that is never left at the site and needs a key to shut it off.

A company official said provincial police have launched an investigation.

The company's master station at North Bay noticed the pressure drop and corrective action was taken about an hour later. But at homes and businesses where thermostats acted to cut in furnaces and stoves during the period of no pressure, pilot flames were extinguished.

Since all had to be reset manually, the company used aircraft to bring in several workmen to aid regular employees.

Liberals Will Get Most Seats Says CBC

TORONTO (CP) — CBC's radio and television divisions, forecasting the outcome of Monday's election, agreed Friday night that the Liberals will get the most seats. But they differed in the allotment for each party.

Both radio and TV networks carried Election '65 shows with the estimates of the number of seats each party is expected to win in the 265-seat House of Commons, based on reports from separate teams of correspondents across the country.

Consensus of radio network correspondence was: Liberals 137; Progressive Conservatives 95; NDP 22; Social Credit 4; Creditistes 7.

TV network correspondents: Liberals 140; Conservatives 86, NDP 22; Social Credit 4; Creditistes 3; Independents 6.

The TV estimate added up to only 265 seats. Broadcaster Norman DeFoe said the network had no information on the Yukon and Northwest Territories seats.

Standing of the Commons at dissolution: Liberal 127; Conservative 92; NDP 18; Creditiste 13; Social Credit 9; Independent 2; vacant 4.

Kiwanians and Firemen Ready to Repair Toys

With less than two months to go it's that time of year again when the Belleville Kiwanis Club and city firemen are again on the look-out for good used toys to gladden the heart of deserving kiddies on Christmas morning.

The Kiwanis-Firemen Christmas Toy Project has, of course, been a joint effort on the part of the two organizations for the past 12 years.

Kiwanians collect the toys, repair them at their Kiwanis Centre workshop, get them repainted, and on Christmas Eve, Firemen distribute to kiddies in the Belleville area.

This year's toy project has been underway now for some days and Kiwanians are beginning to run out of toys to keep their repairmen busy.

Local householders with usable toys they would like to donate to the cause may leave them at any Shell service station, drop them off at the firehall on Moira Street or take them to the Kiwanis Centre on Dundas Street.

"It is good used toys that are required," stated Fireman Ted Wessells who is in charge of toy collections, "principally large toys such as wagons, cars, which many families find to expensive to buy."

As is the repair job itself, the toy painting also is a volunteer job, and is usually taken care of by one of the local auto repair shops.

This year, Bob's Auto Body and Refinishing Shop at 11 Geddes Street is doing the toy painting. Local paint firms have donated most of the paint and the auto body employees do the painting in their spare time.

And already they have started on a couple of truck loads of repaired toys.

Belleville Electronic Firm Is on the Beam!

Thanks to a last minute cooperative effort on the part of local plant employees and a lumber firm called in to do crating, a Venezuela university is going to receive its Belleville-made electronic equipment on the expected delivery date.

Several months ago Electronic Controls Ltd., 11 Water Street, contracted to supply electrical components for a teaching centre at the University of the Andes.

But because a delivery date at Montreal was set to co-incide with the sailing of a Venezuela bound freighter and firm technicians had been working overtime to meet the deadline.

RUNNING OUT?

With time running out and the equipment still not ready, there were hopes for a delayed ship sailing from Montreal. But such was not the case. Almost at the last minute word was received that the ship would sail a day early.

Then there was a real scurry to complete the contract and Thursday night to get the job off. While Lumber Company was called in to crate the equipment and Friday the shipment was on its way to Montreal.

The equipment is destined for a new electrical engineering department at the Venezuela university, the Belleville firm contracting to supply the main power distribution centre and motor generator sets.

Although a relatively small firm, the local company does considerable export business with Far East countries through the Colombo plan.

The Venezuela contract however, was acquired through its own initiative and the firm expects to increase its export business.

Gas Company Trying to Restrict Pickets

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Union Gas Co. Ltd., strikebound since Wednesday in Essex and Lambton counties, has applied for a court order to restrict picketing at its Windsor service depot.

In Hamilton Friday about 200 employees of a Union Gas subsidiary, United Gas Ltd., returned to work after a one day wildcat walkout.

More than 100 Sarnia and Windsor service employees struck after contract talks failed to reach a settlement. They are members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union (CLC).

The Hamilton service workers, members of the same union, walked out protesting that Hamilton supervisors had been sent to Windsor to take over the work of the strikers.

In Windsor, company officials said they would seek an injunction to "compel pickets to demonstrate peacefully and to allow supervisors to cross picket lines unmolested and free from intimidation."

Soviet Embassy Picketed While Party Goes on

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — While a lively party celebrating the 8th anniversary of the Russian revolution went on at full tilt inside the Soviet Embassy Friday night, 15 shivering pickets paraded in front of the iron gates of the austere building. The pickets carried placards reading "The Ukraine and other enslaved nations will rise to bury the Russian empire" and "Freedom yes—Russian imperialism no."

They said they represented immigrants from Communist countries. Most came here from Toronto where, during a neighboring Northumberland, attached the government for seeding a majority as a poor issue for election.

He said in a recent talk with John Diefenbaker the party leader said prospects were even better than in 1957.

Decision on Monday

On Monday Canadians go to the polls for the fifth time in eight years. They are being called upon to decide whether the Liberals under Mr. Lester Pearson should be given another chance or the Conservatives under Mr. John Diefenbaker returned to office.

In the last election, in April 1963, the people —in the words of a distinguished observer of the Canadian scene, Bruce Hutchison—"simply decided that the Diefenbaker government had failed, that a liberal government of experienced men might do a little better."

"The decision then," says Hutchison, "was wise, though reluctant and incomplete . . . and the decision of November 8 will be made, one way or another, on the same basis, a Hobson's Choice between two alternatives, neither of which possesses the people's full trust."

Gallup poll predictions of the outcome of Monday's election are unconvincing, though it is entirely possible that the country may be in for another bout of minority government.

One fact which must be grasped by the electorate is that while this is to some extent a contest of personalities, between Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker, the main objective is an administration, formed by one party or the other, which can be counted upon to run the affairs of this country efficiently and honorably. For Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker this is a crucial test. For both it is virtually the "last Hurrah." Even for the victor, whoever he may be, his political days are numbered as the advancing years and inevitable changes within the parties take their course.

In Hastings South the contestants are Conservative candidate Lee Grills, Belleville dairyman, who has represented the constituency three times; Bridge Temple, city lawyer, who has served ably during the last two-and-a-half years as Liberal member, and New Democratic Party candidate Thorold Hoskin.

Mr. Temple, who emerged victor in the 1963 election in a close contest with Mr. Grills, is an authority on defence matters. Recently he defended the government against charges by Mr. Grills that the integrated armed forces represented a "headless monster." He pointed out that integration had helped reverse a drift to obsolescence that made possible the re-arming of the services with modern equipment.

Mr. Temple has served as an executive member of the Commons defence committee. He was leader of Canada's 1964 NATO political committee. As co-chairman of the Commons justice committee and as member of the Veterans' Affairs committee, he introduced during the Liberal administration a bill for the abolition of capital punishment, as well as other measures.

On the local scene, when drought threatened rural areas during the summer months Mr. Temple visited farms and subsequently made representations to Agriculture Minister Hays. Hastings was one of eight counties included in drought aid plans.

Recently he secured a $350,000 federal contribution toward the building of a new high level bridge at Trenton.

The Liberal party has pledged it will implement its nation-wide Medicare plan by July 1, 1967, and provide $500,000,000 over 15 years to aid medical and dental research and training.

In the sphere of education, Prime Minister Pearson has promised a Liberal government will establish a $40,000,000 university scholarship program over four years, as well as providing higher university grants.

Major plank in the Conservative campaign is the pledge for a united Canada. Mr. Diefenbaker's main personal ambition is to lead the country to fresh heights of national awareness and unity by centennial year in 1967.

The Conservative Party has promised that the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials and production machinery will be removed. It also proposes that homeowners' municipal taxes up to $500 should be deductible for federal income tax purposes.

On the farming scene, the Conservatives would establish an Eastern feed grain agency, acreage payments on crop losses to Eastern farmers and a long-term reforestation program for secondary Eastern farm land.

Other Conservative plans put before South Hastings voters by Mr. Grills include establishment of a national power grid that will make energy resources available throughout Canada, and an increase in the old age pension from $75 to $100.

Two other important areas of development embraced by the Conservative platform are education and water resources. The party says it will increase per capita university grants from $2 to $5 and allow students tax deductions for private gifts to universities. It promises a national water conservation policy, including diversion of water from the north to deficient areas.

Now the decision rests with the voter. As Sir Winston Churchill once observed, no amount of rhetoric or discussion can diminish the overwhelming importance of the individual citizen's exercise of his voting perogative.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 8th, 1945

There was a brief reference in Monday's Collegiate News which stated there has been some agitation started in one of the upper forms for initiation of newcomers to the school. The item went on to suggest that the matter be referred to the Students' Council.

This is a matter which should receive much consideration before being approved by any student group. If the proposal will promote any form of rowdyism and humiliation to "freshies" then initiation has no place in the Collegiate. It serves no good that we have ever been able to discern and the tendency has been to curtail these activities in universities.

The forms initiation takes in some schools, colleges and fraternities, descend to a rather low level of humor even if it is done "only in fun." If there could be some form of ceremony devised in which the participants could enter with some degree of pleasure, it would be alright. But if the boys and girls who enter secondary schools have to make fools of themselves for the entertainment of senior students then we think initiations have no place here or elsewhere.

Every Vote Will Count

Ottawa Journal

The United Church Observer speaks of it rightly as "that famous slogan, 'Vote as you please, but vote.'"

The catchphrase is an invitation not to a conscientious study of issues and party, but to a mechanical, uninformed and self-defeating exercise.

The Observer's editorial contains this good paragraph:

"Canada could be in trouble with its multi-party system and regional and provincial pressures and interests, and parties making promises they know they will never have to keep. This country needs good government and good opposition. We are not likely to get it if we continue to harangue the uninformed to get out and do their duty by voting for hockey players, wrestling champions, orators, pretty-faced politicians, Bible-quoters, or men with depression-complexes and big promises."

But then it concludes, "here and as it may seem," with a slogan of its own, "Vote or not, such a patch test. While beauty operators usually are — or certainly ought to be — aware of the need to be sure before using these preparations on an individual, perhaps we can alert more women to the idea of a patch test for bleaches or dyes they may use at home.

For the specific questions:

1 — Ordinarily such allergic reactions run their course in from 10 days to several weeks. Your troubles three months later may be secondary rather than primary consequences. That is, the severe original reaction may have altered your normal defence mechanisms in some manner so you do not combat ordinary infections as readily.

2 — Vision is not affected by such allergic reactions, but eyelids at times can become swollen and inflamed.

3 — Ordinarily no permanent harm is done to other parts of the body. However, knowing that you have a tendency to such an allergic reaction, be doubly wary of new things applied to your skin.

In fact, patch tests should especially be used by anyone who knows she has allergic tendencies of any kind.

Dear Dr. Majner: Is it harmful to take mineral oil indefinitely? I take two tablespoons a day to keep me regular. Could this be bad for the gall bladder, or for colitis, which I have? — Mrs. G.

Mineral oil appears to be able to absorb Vitamin A in the intestine. It is not absorbed, by taking it regularly you deprive yourself of the full benefits of this vitamin.

I'm not totally opposed to mineral oil. It will not affect the gall bladder, and it decidedly does have its uses in treatment of colitis, but not daily in large amounts.

Tire Squeal Nets Big Fine

Windsor Star

Those pee-wee league daredevils who make a specialty of tire-squealing have collided head-on with the law in some places. More trouble, it's indicated, lies ahead.

One of the fraternity, in Leamington, has had a $30 fine slapped on him and just escaped losing his licence. Whether or not this put some sense into his head is for him to establish.

Perhaps the most persistent of the tire-squealers perform on residential streets. It could be a small neighborhood sufferance of showoffs like themselves that they're trying to impress, but often there are little people in the vicinity that they endanger.

The $30 price tag on their driving conformity should have a therapeutic effect.

Hunters Must Show Licence

Kingston Whig - Standard

For many years farmers and other rural land owners have been forced to undergo the annual unpleasantness and disturbance afforded by irresponsible hunters form the cities. Those vandals, or worse, seem to believe that all lands beyond the municipal limits are theirs for the walking upon. That they are in the minority is little consolation to farmers who have had fences and crops damaged, property strewn with empty bottles and all sorts of filth, livestock killed or injured and even their own lives threatened. In the past, also there have been countless reports of people being verbally or physically abused when they attempted to order trespassers off their land.

The responsible hunter will need no telling that, before he enters private property that, he should ask the permission of the owner. Many farmers are willing to permit hunting on their property and their permission is sought and providing that hunters take pains to act with propriety and common sense during their stay.

The authorities are hopeful that the new system whereby hunters must wear their hunting licence numbers on the back of their jackets will help to discourage the selfish minority for one thing it will be easier for the property owner to make an identification in any complaint.

Some People Allergic To Hair Dyes, Bleaches

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: When I first had my hair dyed blond (stripped from virgin light brown) there was a slight breaking out around the hairline.

The second time, my body broke out all over with a severe rash. The doctor gave me medication but it took nearly three months to clear up. In the meantime I have broken out with sores, and have had injections in my stouth and eyes.

Please stress that every woman should have a patch test before she bleaches her hair. Ignorance of this certainly made me miserable.

How long does one usually have these symptoms to an allergy?

Can this affect eyesight?

Can it do permanent harm to other parts of the body? — Mrs. G.

Your experience should be a warning. I have mentioned quite often that some people can be sensitive to bleaches, hair dyes and other such cosmetic chemicals.

A patch test is a very wise precaution, in fact, most careful beauty operators give a patch test routinely for every customer on whom such chemicals are to be used, and repeat the test every time a switch is made to some different formula. (A patch test involves applying a little of the chemical to the hairline to see whether redness of the skin develops. For surest results, wait a day or two.)

Anyway, Mrs. G., the first application of bleach "sensitized" you, as indicated by the redness at the hairline. Then the second time, you were actively allergic to it, and the generalized reaction set in.

Diefenbaker Responds With Laughter to Good Headline

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Notes from the Campaign Trail, — Best heckle of all, Conservative, Liberal, New Dem or assorted Socreds, in this campaign came the other night, flying up from the crowded floor of the Richmond Hill Collegiate at Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

He was sounding off in fine fashion about the lack of the true decision in the political spines of his enemies, the despised Grits, and how, as he saw it, compromise, appeasement and retreat had led from one disaster to another.

How different, he cried, had been his way of administering life in his six years as Prime Minister.

When the prickly problems were faced, with the dicey decisions to be made, there was no lilting and butting.

"I stood," he trumpeted. "I stood."

In emphasis, perhaps for the dramatic effect, he paused, and in that moment of silence, a gifted heckler with beautiful timing, feather-hurled it out with a great rafter-rocking bellow from the back of the high school auditorium:

"You should stood in bed!"

Unfortunately, Diefenbaker didn't catch it, with the usual forest of microphones sprouting from the podium in front of him serving as a sort of sound curtain.

Too bad, because Dief, storyteller par excellence, would have loved it — and laughed with the rest.

GRIN AND BEAR IT

Few have been the hecklers who have managed to get under the old warrior's hide which, after a life-time in the rough and tumble of prairie, then national politics, must be a political skin with the armor - plated consistency of a rhinoceros.

Long ago Diefenbaker learned the best way to squelch a heckler is to laugh with the crowd at himself — provided, of course, the heckle shafted at him is cleverly sharp enough to be ha - ha - worthy. . .

Laugh, he has discovered, and the sting is gone.

Share in the merriment at his own expense, and so purchase with a warm sense of humor the support of the crowd.

He turned just such a trick in the last campaign one night in Hamilton.

It was a tough crowd.

And it was giving him a rough ride.

To change the pace — and perhaps the mood of some of the more hostile of a noisy mob of New Dem hecklers — he swung from policies, platform and issues to chat about a personality about life as Prime Minister on Parliament Hill.

A Prime Minister's correspondence, he confided, never failed to entertain him.

"The ordinary people write," he said in honest amazement.

They send letters of funny letters."

Then, as he paused momentarily between sentences to draw a breath, up from the floor it came — a heckle sharpened to pierce toughest hide.

"Yeah, and send thousands of funnier answers."

Diefenbaker laughed, and the crowd laughed with — not at — him.

WELL, HELLY WALLY!

Bit odd, isn't it, what a normally properly dignified pillar of political society will do and say under the pressure of an election campaign?

Take Finance Minister Walter Gordon.

Millionaire, Charter member of Toronto's business and financial establishment. Old school tie, Royal Military College. Dedicated public servant.

Should make for all that is dignified.

And does, most of the time.

But during election campaigns it seems, when he's knocking on doors, he no longer is Hon. Walter Gordon, Minister of Finance.

Oh dear no. He's "Wally."

"I'm Wally," he says, "Wally Gordon, your Liberal candidate." And away he goes into the vote-for-me-please spiel that every campaigner must make.

Well, hello Wally!

And Hon. Mitchell Sharp, Trade Minister, has been making a ruthless uncharacteristically syncopated approach in his campaign.

For with the Honorable, the Minister of Trade and Commerce, a public servant who understandably takes himself very seriously — and has every right to — the word is "Swing along with Mitch."

And there he is, in one of his election pictures, arm-in-arm with a bevy of young and good-looking girls, merrily swinging along, looking very much like you might imagine a beardless Mitch Miller.

Thomson Has Made Only 'Minus Contribution' to Paper Field Says Rival

TORONTO (CP) — Cecil King, Lord Thomson's toughest newspaper rival in Britain, said Friday the Canadian-born baron has made a "minus contribution" to that country.

"Anyone who declines to take the responsibility for the social and political stature of his newspapers is regretable," the publisher said in reference to the free editorial rein given Thomson publications.

"The only contribution Thomson has made is to his own bank account."

Mr. King, interviewed here on an inspection visit to his Canadian newsprint holdings, defeated the Canadian in 1961 in a huge take-over fight for the Odhams Press. He said it cost him $108,000,000.

The visiting publisher also expressed the view that Canadian newspapers are dull and that laws preventing foreign ownership of Canadian papers are unrealistic.

"We've suffered from Canadian ownership of British newspapers," he said. "... Perhaps the Canadians want to protect themselves from a counter-attack."

WASN'T INTERESTED

But he was not interested in going into the publishing business in this country.

"Canada is only a small market—too strung out—and very much dominated by Americans," Mr. King said.

He said the late Lord Beaverbrook was "keen that I make a bid" for the Toronto Globe and Mail. "I just didn't want it," Mr. King said.

Mr. King said of Canadian Newspapers:

"You should hire someone who could lay out a page. You could make better use of pictures. Most good pictures end up in the waste basket.

"Your editorial content is too long. You fool around too much before you get to the point of the story. You have dull headlines and meaningless (picture) captions.

Mrs. Rivard and Eddie Lechasseur at Gignac's office June 22, 1964, the day he and Gignac came to the capital. Gignac gave him $1,000 to pay expenses and compensate for interrupting his vacation to see Denis about Rivard, Mr. Masson said.

MENTIONED THE $50,000

At a motel in neighboring Hull, Que., he introduced Gignac and Denis. After Gignac withdrew to the next room, he had told Denis that Gignac had informed him of the availability of the $50,000.

He said that Gignac wakened him about 3 a.m., June 23 when leaving for Montreal and dropped an envelope with $800 to $1,000 on his motel room bureau for him.

The purpose of his trip, Mr. Masson said, was to learn from Denis details of the charges against Rivard, possibilities of bail for Rivard and Rivard's chances of being extradited.

Denis had told him extradition was a matter for the justice department, that he didn't know about the Rivard case and that he would try to find out about it.

At a later meeting Denis informed him Rivard's case was "serious" and that bail was not usual in narcotics cases, Mr. Masson said.

After explaining extradition procedures, Denis had said he had never heard of a justice minister refusing to sign extradition papers where a judge had granted an extradition application.

The division took light casualties and killed at least five Viet Cong, spokesman said.

South Vietnamese troops were reported to have killed 12 Viet Cong and captured five in a day-long sweep south of Saigon Friday.

A shell fired by an American artillery battery fell short into the central highlands Viet Nam special forces camp last Saturday, killing 11 South Vietnamese civilians, it was reported today.

Delayed reports reaching Saigon said seven Vietnamese were wounded.

The casualties were said to be all women or children dependents of the South Vietnamese troops defending the U.S. special forces camp.

ANNOUNCE LOSSES

In Washington, the Pentagon announced Friday 133 U.S. airplanes of combat type were lost in action over North Viet Nam through Oct. 31.

Six were downed by Soviet-built anti-aircraft missiles and most of the others by conventional anti-aircraft, the Pentagon said.

American planes began bombing North Viet Nam Feb. 7.

A woman anti - Viet Cong fighter known as the Tiger Lady of the Mekong Delta was reported shot to death. The Saigon Post reported Friday Ho Thi Que, 39, was shot last Thursday after a heated argument with her soldier-husband.

The newspaper said one source described the shooting as an accident but it speculated that jealousy might have figured in.

Krupp Plans To Double Size Of Concern

ESSEN, West Germany (Reuters)—Alfred Krupp, sometimes known as West Germany's industrial emperor, is planning to double the size of the coal-and-steel concern which he is supposed to sell by next summer, it was learned today.

The giant Rheinhausen mining and foundry works of which Krupp is sole shareholder next month will formally take over the Bochumer Verein steel - smelting works, in which Rheinhausen has a 75-per-cent control.

Rheinhausen has had a "for-sale" sign on it since 1953 when Krupp—just two years out of an allied prison for using slave labor during the Second World War—agreed to sell his coal-and-steel interests as the price for keeping the rest of his war-battered but enormous empire.

He was obliged to sell Rehinhausen by 1963, but a mixed German-Allied commission was unable to find a suitable tender and the deadline for sale has regularly been extended.

It is due to expire again in the summer of 1966, but the chances of finding any one who can afford to buy a concern which would probably cost more than 1,000,000,000 marks ($250,000,000) seems extremely remote. No serious offer is ever known to have been made.

Smith Says

to accepting the findings of the commission, Smith said:

"At the very outset it appears there is no likelihood . . . of your accepting its conclusions and advocating its acceptance by (the British) Parliament unless the proposals and conclusions are entirely satisfactory to your government and in accord with your inclinations, irrespective of the wishes of Rhodesians.

"We, for our part, did not and would not have reserved our position had the commission been allowed to function as envisaged."

Smith asked what conceivable grounds could exist for denying the validity and unjustness of the Rhodesian government's claim if the royal commission found in its favor.

Smith's letter said an agreement by Britain that the proposed commission should test Rhodesian opinion was "hedged with such conditions as to make it difficult to believe that it was seriously intended."

REJECTS PROPOSAL

Smith also turned down a proposal which the British premier sent to Salisbury this week that the Rhodesian government's case for independence be put to a referendum by the people of Rhodesia as a whole.

"Such a suggestion at this stage would be a negation of the understandings we had with you," Smith said.

Wilson had proposed that before the three-man commission—one Briton and two Rhodesians—went to work, there must first be agreements on how the soundings were to be made. He reserved Britain's position about the final outcome.

Today's message came only 24 hours after the government declared a three-month nationwide state of emergency, giving the authorities sweeping powers of detention and restriction.

SPECULATE ABOUT MOVE

Speculation was rife here today as to why the government chose to impose the state of emergency if it was not a prelude to a unilateral declaration of independence.

General feeling was that although a declaration might not be absolutely imminent, there could be no other valid reason for the state of emergency than to allow the government to prepare for a seizure, bargaining with British breaks down completely.

Some observers believe Smith and his government are deliberately trying to keep tension at boiling point to prove to their supporters they are not inactive following Wilson's dramatic visit here last month, seen by some to have averted a declaration of independence.

Sunny, Cool For Most Voting Areas

TORONTO (CP)—Below normal temperatures are forecast for most of Canada for Monday's election, but snow is expected in only a few areas.

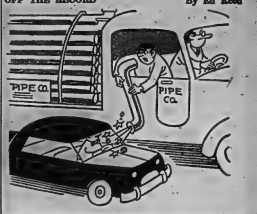
The weather office in Toronto today predicted that Monday would be sunny and cool in most of Eastern Canada and cloudy in much of the West.

British Columbia was the only province where mild temperatures were expected.

The only precipitation predicted was snowflurries in the Yukon and northern Prairies and in northern Nova Scotia and southern Newfoundland.

Sunny cool weather was expected in Ontario and Quebec, with temperatures ranging from the mid-40s in southern Ontario to the mid-20s in the extreme north.

Southern Manitoba and Saskatchewan are expected to be sunny and a bit cooler than normal. Alberta is expected to be quite cool and cloudy.



Overcast weather is expected in coastal areas of B.C., with some sunshine in the interior.

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLAONE

THE - HAGUE, Holland — Madurodam is a miniature city park with a scaled-down representation of Holland's salient features: its windmills and harbors, villages and palaces, terminals and sports stadia, tulip fields and meadows, dikes and highways, canties and breweries, all hand-fashioned, right in the heart of the Hague. It's the most original and fool proof way to preview a country we've ever seen. Every visitor to Holland should head straight for it, and every country should have one.

Madurodam was the idea of Mrs. B. Boon-van der Starp, who envisioned it as a fund-raising charity. It was endorsed by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. L. Madurc of the wealthy Curacao shipping magnate family in memory of their son who died in a Nazi concentration camp in World War II.

Opened in 1952, Madurodam has drawn a steady 1,000,000 visitors a year, most of them Hollanders who have limited opportunity to travel in their own country. Though the footpath is winding through this world's smallest city is only two miles long, the exhibit had cost more than $2,000,000 by the time it was built. It has been added to regularly since then (there are now 117 attractions in the area), and plans are unestimated for future to maintain. There are no fences around anything, and a periodically blind children are taken through the park and permitted to feel what an airplane, a skyscraper or a tree is like, scaled down 25 to one.

HARBORS HOLD EVERYTHING

In miniature replica, the harbors of Amsterdam and Rotterdam hold everything from ships in dry-dock and repair to giant freighters and the Holland-America Line's flagship the Rotterdam. An Amsterdam's Schiphol airport, faithfully reproduced below the dikes which made it possible, jets taxi back and forth as a tape recorder announces departures.

In the courtyard of Parliament, the Queen emerges from her golden coach to open the latest session, as she did in real life a few weeks ago. From a model of the Hague's concert hall, canned Beethoven emerges. Motor vehicles include a superhighway alongside an elaborate railway system that runs the complete gamut of villages, city stations, and even mountain precipices (there are a few in Holland). There are complete refineries, a trimmed-down forest of Canadian woods donated by a Canadian lady, a take beach with a boat towing water skiers — in all a complete of about everything that goes to make up Holland.

Most of the exhibits have been paid for by commercial firms and bear their mark, but commercialism hasn't been allowed to take over. In fact, one tower, full of grave doubts about the potential commercial success of Madurodam, donated a model of his brewery only on condition he receive the rest assurant concession and exclusive beer rights in the park. At last count, he was making more money out of Madurodam than his regular run of business.

The Hague's most famous institution is, of course, the Peace Palace, home of the International Court of Justice, or World Court. The first organization of modern times to attempt settlement of international problems on a just and impartial basis, the court traces its origins to 1899, and actually has become llama.

stronger and more influential since being reorganized under the United Nations after World War II.

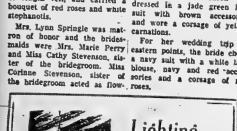
GIFTS AND TREASURES

The Peace Palace, built largely with funds donated by Andrew Carnegie in 1903, is an imposing edifice of great marble halls and paneled court and conference rooms. It is filled with gifts and art treasures of all the participating nations, and counts among its furnishings, priceless Ming vases, elephant tusks, and a series of Japanese tapestries embroidered with magnifying glasses from 5,000 different kinds of silk. The world's largest internation al law library, 350,000 volumes, is here.

The Hague's parliament — confusing arrangement amounting to three legislative houses — also is open to the public, perhaps in hopes of making the system more clear A note-worthy exhibit in the lobby of the Second Chamber is a book, beautifully hand-inscribed by a girl in a 10-year labor of love, listing the names and records of 18,000 Dutch World War II dead.

Three of Holland's most colorful towns surround the Hague. Delft is open to the public, with Delft is Blue, with a capital B. The true Delft Blue porcelain is supposed to be purer than its imitators, is supposedly Royal Delft Blue, made only by a 300-year-old firm known as De Porseleyne Fles.

That means The Porcelain Bottle, but the first thing they'll admit to you at the factory is that it isn't porcelain at all, but ceramic. The secret is out, but no one ever learned the Chinese puzzle of making true porcelain.



Some 1,500 tourists per hour are made here — the largest such operation in Europe — in 11 buildings, and the process is and in styles ranging from the traditional painting of a windmill on a Delft vase to the most far-out experimental ceramic art.

SECRET OPERATION

If Delft-isn't picturesk, it isn't blue either. It gets that way after being painted black, then a glazed and baked at 1,300 degrees for 10 hours. They import clay from England, but that's as far as Dutch assistance goes: most of the rest of the operation is secret, except De Porseleyne Fles' sales room.

Adjoining the Hague on the ocean side is the world's most unpronounceable resort, Scheveningen (it's a rough cli. the accent is on the first syllable, and if you can pronounce it you're Dutch). With its wide sandy beach, its broad promenade, its fishing fleet and its Victorian hotels, Scheveningen was until a few years ago Holland's most exclusive resort. But times change, royalty dies out, the motorcycle and potato chip revolution is on, and so goes. But there's still a lot of Old World grace left about the old girl.

The only thing Old Dutch about Holland's poshest suburb, Wassenaar, is a kind of quaint Dutch reverse English. Once poor farmers put thatched roofs over their houses to keep out the cold. Now rich people can afford the workmanship of thatched roofs, with the result that Wassenaar has 8,000 mansions with thatched roofs. Since these have become common, the latest affluence is private zoos, which is why you can drive down the street and be starled at by a

VALUE OF STICK-TO-IT-IVENESS

When India gained her independence from Great Britain in 1947, Nehru became her first Prime Minister, and remained in that office until his death 17 years later.

Nehru was born into a remarkable family of Kashmiri Brahmins. He was educated in England, at Harrow and at Trinity College in Cambridge. Nehru was called to the English bar in 1912. But not until he met Mahatma Gandhi in 1916, did his destiny become clear. From that time, he struggled incessantly for India's independence, and this earned him nine prison sentences from the British in 25 years. But he was not deterred. He last came out of jail in 1945. Two years later Nehru was Prime Minister of India.

Someone has said that the secret of a postage stamp's success lies in its ability to stick to one thing until it's destination is reached. This also applies to people. Stick-to-it-iveness, or persistence, is nothing but patience in action. So, if you are trying to accomplish a good thing, keep everlastingly at it.

TEXT FOR THE DAY: "But let patience have her perfect work, that you may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing." (St. James 1:4)

MR. AND MRS. MAURICE M. WHITMORE

Whitmore – Wannamaker

Bronze and gold 'mums adorned the altar of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling on Saturday, October 30, when Sandra Diane Wannamaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wannamaker of Stirling was united in marriage to Maurice Melbourne Whitmore, son of Mrs. Wesley Whitmore and the late Mr. Whitmore, of Belleville.

The maid of honor, Miss Nancy Hay, Toronto wore a full length sheath gown with light heire skirt and Empire style bodice of gold bonded taffeta. A train of the same material fell from a bow at the shoulder. The matching headpiece was of brocade taffeta to match the gown in a wedding ring design with a tiny gathered veil at the back. Mr. Jim Tanner, Stirling was the best man and Mr. Michael Culhane, Belleville and Mr. Wayne Wannamaker, Stirling, brother of the bride were ushers.

As if Wassenaar, with its wealthy refugees from Indonesian rule, weren't rich enough, they've discovered oil in the town, and a common sight is a rig pumping away on a manicured lawn behind a great hedge. Anyway, it helps keep the land from being flooded.

Gentler Sex Has Big Say In Outcome

OTTAWA (CP) — Although there are only a handful of women candidates, the gentler sex will have just as much to say about the outcome of Monday's federal election as men. It wasn't always so.

When women got the vote in 1921, they made up 47.6 per cent of the population of voting age, 21 and over.

For Monday's election they made up 51.3 per cent. The feminine share of the over-21 population runs 49.99 per cent.

Only for one election—in 1963—have the women had a numerical edge since they got the vote. At June 1 that year women made up 50.04 per cent of the population 21 and over.

THE ELEVENTH MONTH

No warm nights,
No dabbled fields,
No distant sights,
No thunderous peals
No soft breeze, .
No jewell'd leaves —
November !

The November landscape about Belleville seems to favor all charcoal artists !

"The fact is," says one Belleville artist, "the countryside now is but a sleepy child just home from a party. Its colorful party-dress folds away carefully, the flowers plucked from its hair, now done up in curlers. A drowsy child that snuggles 'neath grey fluffy coverlets of clouds that fend off the fury of wild winds that nip with icy fangs. Thus November's child settles down peacefully for its long winter's nap."

To preserve this mood, perhaps best explains why November is the month whereby we begin to explore fresh avenues of enjoyment; avenues that embody the quiet joys. Such as the ones that involve the using of one's hands: knitting, sewing, designing creative toys and articles for future gifts. One need we know makes charming and original Christmas tree ornaments for her Church bazaar out of cardboard egg-cartons.

This is the time to assemble warm clothing and lay away summer things — for keeps now, until the next warm season. To sort out shelves, dresser drawers and clothes closets; to send unused clothing to the Opportunity Shop.

How quickly wearing apparel dates and accumulates! Do you remember those thick platform shoes we wore not many seasons ago; how comfortable they were? These, we're told, never lost favor with Manchu Princesses of Imperial China who used to wear platform shoes made of cork and covered with white satin. Also, members of Chinese and contemporary of Queen Victoria wore them as high as six inches to give their height. They were wondrously wrought with jewels and adorned with a wide fringe of pearls which swayed as she walked. One looked from her Palace after the Boxer Rebellion raid for over $100,000 in art in Europe . . .

But how did we come by this? Declares writer Dorothy Thomkin: "The rarest thing (about working with one's hands) you get to thinking of everything except (what your hands are doing). All your best thoughts arrive in."

Perhaps November's quiet enjoyment of sharing with our family the coziness, warmth and the comfortable chairs in which to settle and read ,watch TV hockey, football, drama and listen to fine music is largely due to the fact it possesses the number eleven in the calar year.

"The number eleven," explains one numerology source, "represents knowledge and the sharing of knowledge." And any student will agree November is the month for serious study, due to the semi-final examinations held in December.

Why it seems only yesterday when it was September And only yesterday when the number of teachers that staff one Belleville High School today, was sufficient to fulfill the needs of the entire community of Belleville.

Today is a far cry from the days when education was frowned upon (especially a college education) by business men who declared: "It's a waste of time."

"However, not all felt this way," says Richard Hostetter in his book dealing with education in North America. "The famed millionaire, Cornelious Vanderbilt when brought to the cutaway virtue of the wealth in a society of culture, declared: "Folks may say I don't care about education, but I do! I've been to England and seen them lords and dukes and I know that I had twice as much brains as they had maybe. But I had to keep still and say nothing for fear of exposing myself."

Later he exclaimed to his clergyman, "I'd give a million dollars today, Doctor, if I had your education."

Sometime afterward he gave fifty cents to assist in support of what later became Vanderbilt University (which we had the pleasure of visiting some years ago) in Nashville, Tennessee.

Then lastly — one has only to look at the streets, the shops and places growing in readiness for the bright wonderful event of the year — Christmas — and know that November also shares in the greatest of all joys — anticipation!

Women First Graduates In BGH Operating

The first graduates of Belleville General Hospital Operating Room Technicians' Course received their pins and diplomas during a graduating ceremony at Education Hall Friday evening.

The course, a concentrated four months period of lectures and study of operating room techniques, saw four Belleville women graduate. All will continue on in jobs at the Belleville hospital.

They are Mrs. Marie Duguay, Mrs. Myrtle King, Miss Sheila Switzer and Miss Heather White.

Last night's ceremonies were presided over by A. Malcolm Haig, chairman of the Hospital Board of Governors, who, with the assistance of Mrs. M. Barrett, acting director of nursing service, and Mrs. O'Connor, supervisor of nurses, presented pins and diplomas to the four graduates.

Dr. J. R. Birchard, president of the hospital Medical Staff Association, addressed the graduating class with congratulations being added by Dr. D. M. Scott, Chief, Department of Surgery.

Dr. Scott said he was pleased with the result of the training course and assured graduates would play an important part in surgery.

The Belleville hospital operating room technicians' course is one of the first in Ontario. Although not registered nurses, technicians may do anything in the operating room that a trained nurse can do with the exception of administering drugs.

Following last night's ceremonies a buffet dinner was held in Education Hall.

Will Hold Silver Cross Mother's Tea

In conjunction with Remembrance Day, the Col. Ebay Wills Branch or the Royal Canadian Legion are holding a Silver Cross Mother's Tea on Sunday, November 7, at 3 p.m. in the Legion Hall, Belleville.

Personal invitations have been mailed to 23 mothers in the city and district, but it is felt that some may have been omitted, so any mothers who lost a son or daughter while serving their country are cordially invited to attend.

Girls Blame Pollution for Stocking Runs

TORONTO (CP) — Career girls in downtown Toronto are pettied. Their stockings are running. They blame pollution.

The stockings break out in pock marks, like buckshot wounds, girls say, and then they run.

Toronto's public works commissioner, Ross Clark, sympathizes with them.

"This is not a general air pollution problem," he said. "We are investigating intensely to find the location of the difficulty. It's a nuisance that cannot be tolerated.

"It's one of the environmental problems we are seeing in our society as a result of technological advances."

"We'll stay with it until it's solved."

Office worker Sybil Lefebvre says her nylons run every second time she goes outdoors.

"It's getting so I can't afford to leave the office at lunch time."

Mary Longmuir buys six pairs of stockings each week. When interviewed she was wearing a pair with 15 runs, some more than two feet long.

Honor Couple Wed 25 Years

Last Sunday afternoon relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Brown, Quinte View Acres to honor Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jones on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

The afternoon was spent in a time of visitation and fellowship. Bill Jones recorded the event with his movie camera, the films will be shown at a later date.

The decor of the living room was in keeping with the occasion. Pink and white streamers together with silver bells adorned the room. A three-tiered anniversary cake centred the table, which was attractively decorated with a white linen cloth and white tapered candles.

The honored guests opened gifts received from their family and friends. Both expressed sincere thanks to everyone for their gifts and also for their presence in making this such a memorable occasion.

Mr. Clifford W. Hineman, Jr., proposed a toast to the happy couple. Refreshments were served by the young women present.

QUESTION:

In the magazine section of a newspaper I found a recipe for Brownies that had an orange icing. I made them and they were good, but have misplaced the recipe. Do you have a recipe that answers that description?

Maggie G.

ANSWER:

I think the following may be similar.

BROWNIES WITH ORANGE ICING

½ cup unsifted flour,
½ teaspoon single-acting baking powder,
½ teaspoon salt,
1 egg,
½ cup sugar,
1 teaspoon melted butter or oil,
2 teaspoons hot water,
one 6-oz. package chocolate chips,
1 teaspoon grated orange rind,
½ cup chopped walnuts,
½ cup chopped stoned dates,
½ teaspoon vanilla.

Orange Icing Ingredients:
1 cup icing sugar,
1 tablespoon butter (room temperature),
1 teaspoon grated orange rind,
1½ to 2 tablespoons orange juice.

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg and gradually beat sugar into it. Add butter, hot water, chocolate chips, rind, walnuts, dates and vanilla and mix well. Fold in flour mixture until blended. Turn into buttered 8 x 8" pan and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. until done ; about 30 minutes, or until top is golden and batter is set. Cool. Combine icing ingredients until smoothly blended and spread evenly over cooled brownies. Cut into squares or oblongs and serve from pan. These are popular with my son and grandson.

QUESTION:

Please give recipe for candied pineapple. Alice W.

ANSWER:

CANDIED (GLAZED) PINEAPPLE

One 28-oz. can best quality sliced pineapple, 2 cups granulated sugar, ½ cup light corn syrup or Rogers Golden (Sugar) syrup. Drain pineapple slices and dry them. To reserved pineapple juice in heavy pan add the sugar and corn syrup or Rogers Golden syrup and bring to boil. Add pineapple rings but do not crowd. Simmer until fruit is transparent. Skim out and drain and allow to dry on cake racks at room temperature. When dry, store in single layers between sheets of heavy wax paper.

BUGLED FAMOUS ATTACK

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Starr M. Wetmore, 20, credited with bugling the attack on San Juan Hill by Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders, died at a veterans administration hospital Friday night. The Spanish - American War veteran was wounded in that battle.

The Holmes family got rid of tepid showers, staggered bath days and cold water wash days when they installed the Cascade 40 electric water heater. You can too.

"CASCADE 40 SOLVED ALL OUR HOT WATER PROBLEMS"

Mr. & Mrs. Woodrow Holmes of Winchester, Ontario, say this about the Cascade 40 superfast electric water heater:

"We used to have problems with our old water heater. When I wanted to take a bath, the water just wasn't as hot as it should have been. Cascade 40 solved that problem. It's giving us great satisfaction."

"I do a big washing at least once a week. With our old water heater I never had enough hot water left on washdays to do the dinner dishes. Now, with Cascade 40, I can do everything in one day."

Party Leaders

peal to the crowd to "stand with us again."

At Vancouver, Mr. Thompson said there were no major national issues in the election other than that the election should not have been called.

At Quebec City, Mr. Caouette repeated his charge, frequently denied by Mr. Pearson, that the government has made an agreement with the U.S. to send Canadian troops to Viet Nam.

The electorate has 1,011 candidates to pick from, 13 fewer than 1963's record, in the fifth general election in 8½ years. Three of these elections—in 1957, 1962 and 1963—resulted in minority governments, two for the Conservatives and one for the Liberals.

The Liberals and Conservatives are contesting all 265 seats with a minimum of 133 required for a bare majority. The NDP has 255 candidates, Social Credit 86 and the Quebec-based Creditistes 77. There are six other 43 running under various other labels.

WILL BE CLOSE

In at least 60 of the 265 seats, the contest is expected to be extremely close. These marginal seats are scattered across the country but most of them are in Ontario, which returns 85 MPs, and Quebec, which elects 75.

The main battleground throughout the campaign has been Ontario where the Liberals won 52 seats in the 1963 election compared with the Conservatives' 27 and the NDP's six.

Mr. Pearson called the election Sept. 7 with the statement that he wanted a majority government to provide stable government for four or five years. He never wavered from that theme throughout the campaign and in some speeches weighed on little else.

He said at one point that if the Liberals didn't get a majority there would be another election in 12 or 18 months. The opposition accused him of threatening the electorate. He denied any threat.

Mr. Diefenbaker predicted that his party would win a majority.

One of the Conservative leader's campaign themes was honesty in government and he hinted the Liberals were the Rivard affair.

Mr. Diefenbaker also dwelt on the issue of national unity, promising a new Confederation conference to bring about needed changes in the constitution.

Mr. Pearson said only the Liberals could achieve such unity and he asked for a strong central government to deal with the legitimate but growing demands of the provinces.

Top three minor party chiefs argued that most of the better legislation passed by Parliament in recent years resulted from compromises forced on a minority administration.

Mr. Douglas pledged to back a minority winner if agreement could be reached to include NDP policies in the legislative program. He came out for free university education, a universal medical care program, $100-a month old-age pensions at 65 and legislation to protect consumers.

Mr. Thompson called for an end to patronage and for a voluntary medical care program.

One of Mr. Caouette's main themes was aid to Quebec farmers.

The Liberals promised a compulsory medical care plan by July 1, 1967, and increased pensions for needy old-age pensioners.

MAKES PROMISE

Mr. Diefenbaker said the letter meant a means test and he promised $100-a-month pension at age 68—the present pension is $75—to be paid out of the Canada Pension Fund. Mr. Pearson said Mr. Diefenbaker's plan was unworkable because pension fund money couldn't be spent without the consent of the provinces.

Mr. Diefenbaker, in an attempt to recapture the big-city vote which he lost in 1962 and 1963, promised deductions of up to $500 to home-owners who pay municipal property taxes.

In the 1963 election, the Liberals won 129 seats, the Conservatives 95, Social Credit 24 and tre NDP 17.

At dissolution in September, the standings were: Liberals 127, Conservatives 92, New Democrats 18, Creditistes 13, Social Credit nine, independent two and vacant four.

The advance polls, to be counted election night, were held Saturday, Oct. 30, and Monday Nov. 1. The results of the service vote, held this week, are expected to be announced Saturday, Nov. 13.

As required by law, radio and television appeals by candidates ended at midnight Friday night.

Patient Praises Work Of Physiotherapists

DEAR DORIS: It is comforting to know that busy people like yourself are thoughtful enough to give the right information to people like Vic (the boy with arthritis.)

Our physiotherapist received a call from the doctor to treat a patient who had formerly been a teacher. Her condition was not arthritis but because she received good care and renewed courage from her therapist, she was impelled to write the following paragraphs:

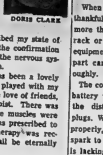
"Physical therapy or physiotherapy is defined as 'the treatment of disease with the aid of physical agents including radiation, light, water, heat, massage, and exercise.' This is far too mundane a description for that which is, at its best, a new way of life for its recipients.

"Forlorn is the word that best described my state of mind as I lay in my hospital bed awaiting the confirmation of the doctors that I had a rare disease of the nervous system, cause unknown, cure likewise not known.

"This was a year ago, and yet today has been a lovely day! I have walked in the sunshine, I have played with my small son, I have known the laughter and the love of friends, and I have had a visit from my physiotherapist. There was no miracle; the diagnosis was confirmed, the muscles were wasted, the strength was ebbing. A drug was prescribed to aid in retarding deterioration, and physiotherapy was recommended; for this recommendation, I shall be eternally grateful.

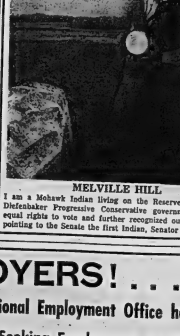
"As damaging as disease itself is the emotional stress which goes with it. Depression, even self-rejection, are only too often experienced. One is prone to reject oneself, and is convinced of being rejected by others, even one's nearest and dearest.

"Into this situation comes the physiotherapist. Never is there any question of the patient being accepted. The warmth of her smile, the devotion of her entire attention, the competency of her administrations, bring a flicker of hope where none seemed to exist, a stirring of a desire to respond and give effort a fling once more.



"The physiotherapist ensures that there is some small triumph; be it only the raising of an arm, the flexing of a finger; there is some measure of achievement, and some recognition of effort. But she is more than that; she never causes her patient to think that she is giving credit where none is due; thus is the affliction recognized, thus is born the determination to fight the battle. And thus there comes some degree of peace as the inner conflict is eased.

"With improvement, the patient begins to reach out to those around him. The barrier of illness which has separated him from his family and friends can be broken down. If, through love and understanding, they are able to reach out to him, their help becomes another source of strength, and life begins to be, once more, the precious thing which he knew.



"Physiotherapy — a treatment. Blessed physiotherapy! It can be an inspiration to better and to happier lives."

I am hoping that if you can find room in your column for this message from a university graduate, you may inspire many girls to think of this career and many patients to go to their doctors for the kind of care which can save them from becoming crippled and raise them from the depths of despair. — DIRECTOR, B.C. Division, Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

DEAR DIRECTOR: I agree with every word. This new helping profession can bring — and is bringing — new hope to many thousands.

Say Motorist Ran Over Boy

TORONTO (CP)—Police are seeking a middle-aged driver who they said ran over a 6-year-old boy here Friday night, got out of his car, looked at the injured child then drove off.

Ronald Griffin was in serious condition in hospital with concussion, internal injuries and a broken leg. The accident occurred as he was crossing a street.

Faulty Coil Can Cause Hard Starting

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

When the coil acts up, be thankful your service station is more than a place with grease rack or lift. With modern test equipment, this vital ignition part can be checked out thoroughly.

The coil is designed to step up battery voltage routed through the distributor to the spark plugs. When it fails to do this properly, the necessary fat spark to ignite the fuel mixture is lacking.

Although it's not often an immediate source of trouble, the coil can be to blame if points are burned or pitted, if the engine is missing, if starting is difficult . . . or if you cannot start at all, even with a push.

Sometimes, a failing coil acts up only on the road, after it has been working for some time.

Sometimes it is unjustly blamed when the fault actually lies with a loosely connected high tension lead which permits arcing. This condition can cause heavy confusion, and of course, excessive resistance at the coil terminal socket.

W. G. asks: "Why do they say it's harmful at any time to idle the engine for an extended period?"

Because at idle, engine oil isn't under sufficient pressure to fully lubricate all engine parts.

From M.V.: "I read your advice about distributor point gaps. What about the effects of incorrect spark plug gap settings?"

A gap that's too wide causes hard starting and rough performance on acceleration. Too narrow also affects starting, and causes rough idle and poor low speed response.

C. P. asks: "Suppose there's too much free travel on the brake pedal and a pedal adjustment doesn't change it — what then?"

A damaged or broken master piston spring can also cause excessive brake pedal play.

The Golden Years

Man Over 65 Can Find New Job If He Will But Use His Wits

By THOMAS COLLINS

"I think I want another job after I retire.

"I'm not sure of this. My vocation (the modern fool word) should see me through it what you and everybody else say about retirement. Appears to be true. But I have some worries. My job has been my stuff of life for 42 years. It's a little frightening to think of being without a job. I think on amounts of pension could ever quite stop this fear.

"And one other thing bugs me . . . the idea that at 65 I am on valve anymore. Everyone has my vanity, but I have some. And it rebels at the idea. I have a world of knowledge in my head. I have skills, and my vanity cries out against the presumption of our society that I am through. I want a job. I think, just to prove I'm not through, I may call a job in three days. I want to get some thought . . . just to lay my vanity to sleep.

"Can you tell me, frankly and without platitudes, whether a 65-year-old retired man can get a job?"

The man who wrote this sums up the anxiety and thoughts going through the heads of many people now coming up to retirement. And the answer to his question is:

A 65-year-old retired man can get a job . . . there are thousands of them waiting for him, and some of them carry secretaries and mahogany desks.

AVOID PATTERN

But a retired person has to use his or her wits more than any other age group ever used them. He or she must get away from the usual job-getting pattern. For example:

This column in the last year has come across a man who contributed $2,500 of his $11,000 savings to a charitable organization and got the job . . . its executive secretary at $7,000 a year; two men — one an Army Colonel and the other a retired man — who got jobs with "development" programs of community colleges which are now sprouting all over the land; one man who appealed to the lonesomeness of a co-manager just before he retired and landed a job as 'sales advisor' with a firm that was selling his company $150,000 worth of merchandise a year; a woman schoolteacher got a job as a 'consultant' with an Eastern publisher of school textbooks who employed her to talk to high school; an insurance man who got an executive job in a private university's fund-raising program — a salesman, you see.

AGENCY ROUTES

Apart from such cases as these, where a person applies in person or her wits to a particular situation to get a certain job, there is the "agency" routes to gainful employment.

Part-time employment agencies, such as Manpower, Inc., have offices in most of the major cities of the country. Some of these offices are placing retired people in a vast variety of jobs.

Conventional employment agencies are placing retired people in fitting jobs, though not all of them accept applicants above certain ages. Go see a couple of them, and ask.

There are three pitfalls you face when you seek retirement job: (1) You act like you know it all, and great employers will be sure that in his particular arena you don't; (2) you want a title and status in line with your former job, which the employer is holding back for about a dozen of the present people who have been fighting for same; (3) you already have a pension and so may take your baseball and run home the first time somebody raises you.

A Lift for Living

Says 'Hopeless' Is World's Worst Example of Profanity

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

In my lifetime I have heard a great deal of ear-blistering profanity. During summer vacations in my boyhood I sometimes worked with a circus crew, putting up tents, bleachers and other equipment.

One was a tough gang, and mishaps and minor accidents led to outbursts of cursing that severely shocked me at first, since I came from a home where profanity was never heard. Also, in those days I frequently visited the farm homes of relatives and friends, and when a cow kicked over a bucket of milk, or a ram butted a farmer carrying a basket of eggs, the creature was sometimes rebuked with withering blasphemy.

Like you, I am still exposed to the frustration, anger and outrage of men, and hear their crude irreverence profanely spoken. But the most profane word I've ever heard is usually regarded to be but an innocent expression, and not at all blasphemous. The word is "hopeless." It is profane because of what it implies. It represents a attitude defiled by futility and polluted with a Godless pessimism. It is a God-denying word. "Hopeless" means "Godless," for only a person, situation or a world without God can be without hope.

NEVER HOPELESS

The Christian never sees the world as hopeless because he cannot believe the world is Godless. The person of faith is aware of the God who has worked throughout history, whose power and influence are manifested in the creation of the universe, in sustaining the world, in freeing the Hebrews from Egyptian bondage, in the moral guidance of the Ten Commandments, in speaking through prophets and poets. The man of faith knows the God revealed in Jesus Christ, whom Herod's hordes failed to destroy when He was but a babe.

He remembers the event that some must have thought utterly hopeless — a Cross between two other crosses on a lonely hill, and the dead Man nailed there.

The Christian recalls that three days after Christ died His tomb was empty and He was alive among His disciples, and so real that He shattered their despair and replaced it with an unfailing faith that nothing is too hard for God. Christians are conscious, too, of the history of the Church, beginning with what men thought to be a "hopeless" little band of disciples, struggling against persecution on all sides, pitted against the power of Rome, and in spite of the odds against it spreading throughout the world.

So the Christian lives in hope because he is ever aware of God's victories in the past and dares to believe these triumphs portend God's final conquest of evil. It is a simple logic, mixed with faith: what God has done, God can still do.

Hopelessness means forgetting God's action in history. It means remaining emotionally in Egyptian bondage long after God's children have been freed. Hopelessness means living on the wrong side of Easter.

Hope is the confident trust that God still has good plans for us, and that He is capable of realizing them. Such a faith brings order out of chaotic living, holds life together and is a preventive against mental and spiritual shiftlessness.

Several years ago a small town in Maine was condemned by engineers. A great hydro-electric plant was proposed for the area, and this development meant a dam would be built across a nearby river. The waters would rise, submerging the town which was located in a stream from the dam site. When the project was announced the villagers were given many months to arrange their affairs and prepare to move.

But one interval, before work on the dam was started, a receding situation developed in the town. All improvements ceased. No painting was done. No repairs were made on the buildings, the roads or sidewalks. Day after day the town grew shabbier. Long before the dam was built and the waters rose or the people moved away, the town looked uncared for and abandoned.

One citizen explained, 'Where there is no faith in the future, there is no power in the present." The town was cursed; it was "hopeless."

Every generation and every people needs hope if it is to avoid moral shabbiness. This distressed world needs it. Christian hope is the assurance that God has not abandoned us. It is the faith that a loving God has all the universe and our own private destinies in His capable hands, and He will, in His own good time, work out His wondrous plans with them.

Such a faith in the future has power into everyday living.

Diefenbaker Appeals for Nov. 8 Votes

By KEN CLARK

REGINA (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker Friday night came home to Saskatchewan for his campaign windup and asked the support of "my own people" in the Nov. 8 election.

A crowd of more than 3,000 jammed Exhibition Auditorium and stood in the corridors to hear a frankly nostalgic appeal.

"You've been with me over the years," Mr. Diefenbaker said. "In the darkest years, you've stood with me. We've marched together. Don't be misled."

Sharing the platform with Mr. Diefenbaker was Alvin Hamilton, his former agriculture minister who helped turn the Prairie farm belt into Diefenbaker country in the late 1930s and early 1940s.

Conservatives held the bulk of the Prairie seats in the last Parliament including all if from Saskatchewan.

FOURTEEN MPS PRESENT

Fourteen of the party's candidates in the wheat - growing province were also on the platform.

Mr. Diefenbaker flies to Saskatoon for a reception today, then goes by plane to Moose Jaw in Prince Albert to await the election outcome.

Friday was a typical, long hard campaign day for Mr. Diefenbaker. It started in Edmonton with an early walk and a press conference. Then he flew to Vancouver for a rally.

Here, he renewed his attack on the Liberal minority government that turned him out of office in April, 1963.

He said if Prime Minister Pearson is returned to office, people other than of English and French origin would become second - class citizens. The Liberals are turning Canada into two nations, one English and one French.

WOULD PROVIDE CASH

Mr. Diefenbaker promised a Conservative government would suggest to the Canadian wheat board a distribution of money on hand to farmers unable to sell their wheat. This "move would give the farmer some cash."

He did not elaborate, but the proposal was interpreted as giving farmers advance payments on grain marketed by the wheat board.

The Liberals, if returned to office, would smooth over the Lucien Rivard and other scandals, he said. Canada's domestic and international reputation would be stained.

"We believed honestly in government was a necessary attribute of good government," he said.

"We'll clean up the mess," he promised.

The Liberals, he said, are trying to encourage votes for "third parties" to defeat Conservative candidates.

'FIGHT MONEY COMING'

Because of the Liberals tight money is coming to Canada, he said. The evidence is already here.

Mr. Diefenbaker repeated his promise for a $25-a-month increase in old-age pensions.

A vote for the Liberals, he said, meant a vote for a party that forgot the western farmer from 1935 to 1957. Only in the Second World War did farm prices reach acceptable levels.

The Liberals have not made good on their promise in 1963 to sell wheat at $2 a bushel. Nor has their promise of a two-price system for wheat—one domestic and one export—been fulfilled.

The only thing the Liberal leadership is agreed on, he said, is that bagpipes smuggler Lucien Rivard get the velvet-glove treatment.

ASKS WITHDRAWAL

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—Francis X. Morrissey of Boston, whose nomination to be a U.S. district court judge stirred a storm in the Senate, asked President Johnson Friday to withdraw his nomination. Johnson said he would comply. Morrissey, a long-time friend and political adviser to Kennedy family, made his request in a letter received Friday.

Would Go To Viet Nam If Necessary

- - Pearson

By STEWART MacLEOD

HAMILTON (CP)—Amid the biggest display of razz-ma-tazz in the election campaign, Prime Minister Pearson Friday night delivered his last major speech before Monday's vote with an undertaking is go to Viet Nam, if necessary, in search of world peace.

The prime minister climaxed his campaign in a jammed downtown theatre where he was given roaring approval for nearly every paragraph of his 35-minute speech.

For organization, the rally topped any he has held, with cheerleaders, bands, majorettes, placards and confetti. All 2,000 seats were filled and the standing-room areas were jammed. The crowd spilled out into the street.

Scattered heckling was drowned out by cheers.

In the midst of all the noise, Mr. Pearson quietly said:

"We must ensure that our children and grandchildren don't have to go through the hell of war.

WILL TRAVEL

"I would go to any part of the world . . . if I thought I could help."

"What about Viet Nam?" someone shouted.

"And that includes Viet Nam," replied Mr. Pearson.

Most of the heckling wasn't clear because of the strong voice amplification by loudspeakers. But one heckler was heard to shout: "Yankee, go home."

"While the United States is not a war-mongering or imperialistic power," said Mr. Pearson, "Canada cannot make a contribution to world peace simply by snitching the U.S."

Local organizers had attached much importance to this final rally. Since it was given television coverage, it could have been seen in 40 Ontario ridings.

While the prime minister talked about employment figures, industrial expansion and his government's achievements, he followed a prepared text but later abandoned it, pocketed his spectacles and talked off the cuff.

"Do you want to return to the type of government we had between 1958 and 1962?" he asked.

"No," shouted the audience.

"You decide who you want to have as your government," he said.

"You, Mike, you," was the shouted reply, which developed into a prolonged chant of "We want Mike, we want Mike."

INCREASES CHANCE

Even a vote for the New Democratic Party can only increase the chance of a return to the Diefenbaker government, he said.

"No matter what you think personally of a Conservative candidate, I urge you not to forget that a vote for him very definitely is a vote for John Diefenbaker," he said.

Despite the crowds, before the rally began, about 30 youths paraded with placards reading: "Ban the Pentagon puppet," "Gangster rule," "No Gagman troops on Canadian soil," "Medicare, not warfare."

The prime minister, who entered the theatre from a side street, did not see the demonstrators.

He told the audience that next to voting for the most important issue in Canada involves national unity.

WON'T SPLIT

"But we are not a country which is going to split apart. We won't allow that to happen."

In a reference to Quebec, he said: "We must make them feel they are partners in Confederation and they must make us feel they are going to make a contribution to Canada."

Earlier, Mr. Pearson spoke to about 400 at a reception in Kitchener. He had been suffering from a flu bug and appeared slightly flushed and perspired freely as he spoke. Mrs. Pearson, who spent two days in Ottawa with the flu, rejoined her husband for the Hamilton rally.

Today they drive to Ottawa from Toronto, stopping at Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg, Belleville and Brockville.

NDP Leader Predicts Win For Party

By MICHAEL GILLAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — T. C. Douglas Friday night predicted victory for his party in Monday's federal election and accused Prime Minister Pearson of using "scare tactics" to frighten voters away from the New Democratic Party.

Before a near-capacity crowd in the 6,000-seat Agrodome, Mr. Douglas rejected the prime minister's statement in Kitchener, Ont., that a vote for the NDP is really a vote for the Conservatives.

The prime minister said the most a heavy NDP vote could accomplish "is another Diefenbaker minority government."

The NDP leader retorted that "Mr. Pearson knows that Mr. Diefenbaker has no chance of forming any kind of government.

"The choice in this election is between the New Democrats which have a program and the Liberal party which has none."

The prime minister is desperation is resorting to scare tactics as he "sees his hopes of triumph crumbling before his eyes."

"I believe we are marching to victory," Mr. Douglas said.

For his last major rally of the campaign, the party introduced an extravaganza including a brassy dance band, majorettes, hundreds of balloons and thousands of placards.

For a half hour candidates from the 11 lower mainland ridings took turns parading to the platform with their supporters noisily following.

At least four RCMP officers and extra city police were on hand. Extra security precautions were ordered by B.C. Attorney - General Bonner because of recent assassination threats to Mr. Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

A search for bombs was made.

One heckler was tossed out of the rally during a scuffle with a couple in the audience. There were no other incidents.

Mr. Douglas today tours rural Fraser Valley riding which the NDP hopes to take from the Social Credit. He has an evening meeting at Port Coquitlam and a Sunday evening meeting at Maillardville. Both communities are in his Burnaby-Coquitlam riding.

Danger of Tight Money Looms Over Canada

- - Caouette

By GERARD ALARIE

QUEBEC (CP) — Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Friday night the danger of tight money and Canadian troops in Viet Nam looms over Canada.

Both of these opinions have been recurring themes all through his campaign for the Nov. 8 general election.

Speaking to a crowd of 1,500 persons who greeted his arrival with a three-minute standing ovation, the Creditiste leader repeated his accusation that "the Pearson government has made agreements with the American government for the sending of Canadian troops to Viet Nam."

On the subject of tight money, Mr. Caouette said the Liberal government wants a majority so as to be able to ram through the "unpopular" tight money policy.

Any reference to the war in Viet Nam followed a query from a member of the audience who asked: "Is it true that conscription will be instituted in Canada?"

HE SAYS: 'THAT'S IT'

The question, handwritten on a scrap of paper, was read aloud and Mr. Caouette answered: "That's it, that's unfortunately it."

He added that "this is undoubtedly why they are enlarging the platform with their supporters noisily following.

At least four RCMP officers and extra city police were on hand. Extra security precautions were ordered by B.C. Attorney - General Bonner because of recent assassination threats to Mr. Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

A search for bombs was made.

One heckler was tossed out of the rally during a scuffle with a couple in the audience. There were no other incidents.

Mr. Douglas today tours rural Fraser Valley riding which the NDP hopes to take from the Social Credit. He has an evening meeting at Port Coquitlam and a Sunday evening meeting at Maillardville. Both communities are in his Burnaby-Coquitlam riding.

MARCHAND HIT

Jean Marchand, former president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Liberal candidate in Quebec West where Gabe Credilore also took place, came in for some criticism.

He was attacked by his Creditiste opponent, Lucien Plourde, who said: "Jean Marchand has betrayed the workers and is preparing to betray the French-Canadian people by making himself a defender of the Fulton-Favreau formula."

The constitution - amending formula has run into some vigorous opposition in Quebec which wants certain groups maintain the prospect that it does not give the province special status.

Mr. Caouette's audience of 1,500 persons was the largest he has spoken to. They have been able to attract to the hall during this election campaign. Mr. Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker spoke in the Quebec West hall several weeks ago.

WANTS CONTROL

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) Dan Campbell, British Columbia municipal affairs minister, wants jurisdiction over labor affairs in B.C. transferred to the provincial government.

He said in an interview Friday transfer of jurisdiction from federal authorities "will solve the problems of split jurisdiction in West Coast Indian affairs."

Says Medicare Statements Contradictory

CALGARY (CP) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Friday night cabinet ministers have been making contradictory statements about the proposed government medicare plan.

While Health Minister Judy LaMarsh was telling political meetings that the plan was a universal one — everyone must be included in it whether they wished to or not—other cabinet ministers were saying this was not so.

"It makes me ashamed of my fellow politicians," said Mr. Thompson.

The Social Credit leader spoke to about 400 persons in the Jubilee Auditorium here. It was his last speech of the election campaign.

Mr. Thompson visits Banff today before returning to Red Deer, where he will remain in his farm home for the election results Monday.

He said in Vancouver earlier Friday the same old security men with national party leaders is further proof that "things are not right in Canada."

IT'S SAD COMMENT

He said that the need is a "sad commentary on the state of democracy" in Canada.

In a speech before about 300 delegates at the annual convention of the B.C. Social Credit League, Mr. Thompson commented on orders that RCMP police be present when national leaders are speaking in B.C.

The threat against other leaders may have been from crackpots, he said. But they could have been caused by the fact that crime and espionage have not been dealt with properly in Canada.

He repeated past demands for a thorough investigation of the inroads of international crime syndicates in Canada.

He said there are no major national issues in this election other than the fact that the election should not have been called. However, he said issues have emerged "from region to region, province to province and this is indicative of the state of affairs in Canada today."

Motel Owners Want Change in Liquor Laws

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Recent revisions to the Ontario Liquor Licence Act were criticized at the annual convention of the Ontario Motel Association Friday.

Association President Rolland G. Doucet of Ottawa said:

"Basically all we ended up with was a bill which favored bars, beer parlors open through supper hour . . . and the privileges of theatre licences."

The convention decided to request that the Ontario government the requests made last year for the revision of "the antiquated Liquor Licence Act."

The association asked that:

—Banquet permits be granted in dry areas for all purposes not weddings alone;

—Tourist establishments in dry areas be granted licences to supply their own guests liquor in their establishments;

—The local option under the act be deleted, thus placing all areas of the province on an equal basis and establishing a foundation for province-wide legislation;

—The sale of liquor, beer and wine be allowed in licensed dining lounges during prolonged meal hours on Sunday.

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The gesture of Alabama Governor George Wallace probably is higher than ever among those Americans who back his white supremacy line.

But the presidential aspirations of the stocky little former bantamweight boxer have been blighted in his own back yard.

On Oct. 27, the Senate of the Alabama legislature refused his request for an amendment to the state constitution to permit him to run for a second four-year term next year. The Alabama constitution limits governors to a single term.

Had he won that bitter battle, there is little doubt that he would have been elected and would thus have gained the launching pad he desired to seek the 1968 presidential nomination, probably as a third-party candidate.

But the political choices facing him now seem limited and less rewarding.

The likeliest seems to be a bid in the 1966 off-year congressional elections to replace his fellow Democrat, John Sparkman, in the U.S. senate. Even that would require Wallace to sidestep a Alabama law forbidding a governor to seek any office for one year after retiring.

STIRRED UP STATE

Wallace, the 46-year-old lawyer son of an Alabama farmer, did just about enough support to succeed himself. Certainly he had public support, stirred up by statewide and state-financed appeals.

His critics say that Wallace wanted the second term because he could have used Alabama funds, as they say he did last year, in carrying his message across the U.S.

Wallace entered three state presidential primaries in 1964 — Maryland, Indiana and Wisconsin—and got enough support to spare Democrats. Yet the white "backlash" against the growing demands of Negroes for equality, on which he leaned, didn't mean much when it came to a choice between Lyndon Johnson or Barry Goldwater.

But the shift of party allegiance in the South, with Republicans on the move at the expense of the Democrats, creates a fertile situation for Wallace in the eyes of many observers who see this possibility:

Unless the Republican party in 1968 comes up with a candidate meeting the approval of the southern right wing — and this does not seem possible after the Goldwater experience —Wallace will have the entire field to himself.

SEEKS SUPPORT

The growth of right-wing organization memberships — from the Ku Klux Klan to the John Birch Society and others less extreme—testified to the support Wallace could harvest in the South, plus northern reaction which he believes will follow some race riots, continued civil right pressure from the Negro and even the frustrations of fighting a prolonged and difficult war in Viet Nam.

To Wallace supporters, the issues are "niggerism and communism."

Wallaces views have changed little, apparently, from those he expressed in Toronto in July, 1964, in an address to the International Lions convention.

"I've never been against Negroes," Wallace told reporters. "God made us separate and different."

Today, as he addresses meetings of the Citizens Council, dedicated to preserving segregation, Wallace brandishes the other main trademark of today's southern segregationist—a steady playing up of a Communist threat to the U.S.

There is "too much coddling and petting of communism," Wallace told a recent rally.

He backed a bill to ban Communist speakers from Alabama-supported colleges "to let the world know we are intent on remaining free from the curse of communism."

"If the 'beat-in' professors and the 'marching preachers' cry that we are violating academic freedom," said Wallace, "let our answer be that the ballots be cast and let us be counted out of the side of those who know that liberty is never bought by appeasement, paci-fism and timidity but is wrought on a thousand battlefields by the blood, sweat and tears of man."

He consistently complains of misrepresentation which was founded and has been perpetuated.

Whatever Wallace does politically in the next year, he is expected to draw support from all Alabama Republicans and most Democrats but — as he keeps saying—"let 1965 speak for itself." Race riots, Viet Nam and similar issues will continue to represent his hopes for enough support to obtain—or at least influence—the 1968 presidential nomination.

Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, Leader, Progressive Conservative Party of Canada

These men of integrity, working in harmony will assure the growth of Canada and its provinces.

To the service of our country, I have given the full span of my years. I would like to think and hope you will believe that whatever my shortcomings these years were not unworthy.

In the coming years I want to see young men and women take their full part in public life. I want to see the mobilization of the idealism of youth within this land.

Having crossed this country three times during this campaign, I am convinced that Canadians will support the Progressive Conservative Party on Monday next because they believe that we can restore integrity to public life and can preserve the spirit of the future of this land we love.

My appeal is to the conscience of the nation, to all Canadians. This nation has come to a place of greatness. That greatness—the kind of Canada you and I hope for—cannot be achieved unless the conscience of the nation is aroused, unless men and women place the necessity of maintaining unity with integrity in this land ahead of party loyalty.

In the years to come let us be worthy of the land for which in days not long past, so many gave so much, and so fulfill the dream of our founding fathers.

TORONTO — Four hundred cheering Ontario Minor Hockey Association delegates in convention here, stamped their approval of their next two-years' president this morning.

He is R. D. (Doug) Patterson of Stirling, who succeeds past-president Albert Watkins of Peterborough.

There is no doubt about the popularity of the choice. Fifteen years of faithful, dedicated service from the executive level earned a just reward. There was not a dissenting voice.

President Watkins handed the presidential torch to competent hands. One of the best "chairmen of the board" in the line of presidents, he retires with a record of long efficient service.

President Patterson is a graduate of the early school of minor hockey counters-de-bois ancestry and trained in the wilds of Lower Canada by the late Sam Corry, the first OMHA executive member from the western Ontario - labled eastern jungles.

DOUG PATTERSON

His record of service and achievement has a touch. Figuratively he rose from an association "drumsergeant" to "general" completing years of service in all interim ranks.

In fact he holds the record of being the first OMHA president who played hockey in the toddling ranks of the Association, and he has his registration card to prove it.

He didn't get an invitation from NHL scouts to further his hockey education but he graduated from the minor ranks and played a season in junior "B." During his college days he was with the University College U. of T. team with his prowess.

His minor hockey-playing experience left a lasting impression on him. There were many empty niches to be filled in the ranks of managers, coaches and referees in these days.

He knew that hockey is the heritage of every red-blooded Canadian youngster. He also knew that men, dedicated to boys and the sport, were needed to train, coach and inculcate the spirit of sportsmanship in the youngsters.

He saw his duty—and he did it. He started from "scratch" so if speak and served as an OMHA coach, manager and referee.

This part of Eastern Ontario was, and still is, a sprawling district, hockey - wise, not to be compared with the closely-knit communities of Western Ontario.

He noted, with admiration, the terrific job being done by the late Sam Curry in organizing the small hamlets and communities that dotted his territory. Distance called for many hours of sometimes weary travel. But the job was being done and "Lower Canada" was becoming a recognized entity in the ranks of the OMHA.

He lent willing hands to the task. His work and ability soon became recognized and he was elected an OMHA executive member dedicated to the furtherance of minor hockey in his native district in particular and to the province in general.

A natural executive type, Doug by sheer hard work and ability slowly mounted to vice-presidential ladder getting an acclamation in every step. He brings to the presidential chair a wealth of experience, and ability gained the hard way.

Born in Stirling the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Patterson, Doug graduated from Stirling public and high schools, later getting his B.A. at the University of Toronto. During the war he served as a telegraphist in the Canadian Navy.

But his community interests are not confined to hockey alone. He has served Stirling well in other capacities. He was secretary of the village Chamber of Commerce for six years and of the Legion branch for four years. He is the public relations chairman of the Legion and the village arena board. He was a member of the Stirling Library Board for four years.

Doug married attractive Phyllis Evans of Toronto in 1948 and has five young Pattersons rounding out the family. They are Judy, 16; Patsy, 15; Melinda, 8; Bob, 5, and Kim, 4. A brother, Dr. T. A. Patterson resides in Toronto.

He says he is somewhat worried about his ability to step into the shoes of such ex-presidential veterans as Herb Parker, Mike Welchel, Frank Doherty and Albert Watkins.

But the OMHA needn't worry. Its future for the next two years is in excellent hands.

Bruins Meet Habs ★★★★★

Schmidt Joins 'Think Positive' Band

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Early in the 1963-64 National Hockey League season, right-winger Bobby Rousseau of Montreal Canadiens was in a slump. He credited a book with helping him out of it.

The book was The Power of Positive Thinking.

Rousseau, who finished that season with 28 goals, obviously is still thinking positive. With four goals and eight assists, he is the top point-getter this season.

Now, coach Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins has jumped on the "think positive" bandwagon. He says that's what his last-place club has to do tonight and Sunday when it meets the Canadiens.

With the Canadiens tied for first place with Chicago Black Hawks, it appears it would be wise for the Bruins to keep thinking positive Sunday night, when they play Montreal again in Boston.

RANGERS PLAY LEAFS

In other weekend games, New York Rangers meet Toronto Maple Leafs in Toronto Saturday and Sunday. Toronto is at Chicago and Detroit Red Wings are at New York.

Schmidt said that if the Bruins lose tonight's game "I wouldn't be for a lack of trying."

"We played our best game against Chicago Wednesday (a 2-2 tie) and we could have won. Then we had a complete reversal of form (a 9-1 loss) against Detroit the next night."

Bernie Parent, 20 - year - old rookie, is the nets for Boston both Wednesday and Thursday, will get the starting assignment again tonight. Boston's regular goaltenders, Ed Johnston and Gerry Cheevers, have been sidelined with injuries.

New York is in fifth place, a position it has occupied the last few years, but is only two points back of Toronto and Detroit, who are tied for third.

SHOOT FOR PLAYOFFS

The Rangers will again be shooting for a playoff spot, but a big difference this year is that they appear to be closer than they have been in a long time.

Gilbert, who scored 23 goals last year, and Ratelle played junior hockey together in Guelph. Robinson, who played half of the season with Chicago before being traded to New York last year, has replaced Camille Henry of the Rangers' first line.

For tonight's game, Toronto coach Punch Imlach has recalled centre Peter Stemkowski from Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.

Imlach said Stemkowski, 22, will be used to bother Leafs' attack against New York. His addition gives Toronto a 17-man roster, one under the limit.

SITE STAYS

MEXICO (AP) — The 1968 Olympics will be held in Mexico and cannot be moved, the Mexican Olympic committee said Friday in answer to a Norwegian doctor who urged a change because of the altitude. Dr. Hans Jacob Nerdrum had said Mexico City's 114-mile-high altitude is harmful to athletes, and the site of the 1968 Games should be changed.

Vancouver, Seals Get WHL Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

San Francisco Seals lost a defenceman but won the game Pittsburgh Hornets lost a goaltender and gained no consolation prize.

The Hornets, second American Hockey League team to reach the coast in the newly established interlocking schedule with Western League clubs, opened their tour Friday night by dropping a 5-3 decision in Vancouver Canucks and finished with goalie Bob Champoux on the sidelines.

The Seals edged Seattle Totems 2-1 on Wayne Connelly's goal with 3½ minutes of overtime remaining, even though they played all but the first four minutes without defenceman Larry McNabb, who crashed into the boards while chasing a loose puck and suffered wrist and neck injuries.

Jean-Marc Picard opened the scoring for San Francisco in the third period but Gerry Ehman's backhander sent the game into extra time.

Champoux was hurt while attempting to block Billy McNeill's second-goal of the game at Vancouver, the last score of the night. He was replaced by George Gardner.

Bob Cain, Buddy Boone and Larry Popein fired the other Vancouver goals. The Pittsburgh marksmen were Gary Jarrell, Andre Pronovost and Duke Harris.

Laker Rookies Spark Victory

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Los Angeles Lakers inserted rookies Gail Goodrich and Darrall Imhoff into their starting lineup Friday and the shuffle paid off with a 118-116 victory over St. Louis Hawks that moved them into a one-game lead in the National Basketball Association's Western Division.

San Francisco Warriors, previously tied with Los Angeles, dropped back with a 133-115 trouncing at the hands of Philadelphia 76ers, the eastern leaders.

Cincinnati Royals stayed off a late Detroit rally to down the Pistons 120-114 and Sam Jones sank all four of his last-quarter shots to lead Boston Celtics to a 128-118 decision over Baltimore Bullets.

Chuvalo Eyes Overseas Crowns

Heading For London

TORONTO (CP) — George Chuvalo is heading for England where he has a fight scheduled for Dec. 7 and hopes to get a chance at the British and European heavyweight boxing championships.

GEORGE CHUVALO

Irv Ungerman, Chuvalo's manager, Friday confirmed that British promoter Mike Barrett had signed Chuvalo for a Dec. 7 fight in London.

His opponent has not been named.

Ungerman said he had spoken to Barrett about bouts in England, Italy, Germany and Sweden. Chuvalo, Ungerman and trainer Ted McWhirter will leave for England Nov. 20, return to Toronto for Christmas then go back to England for three or four months.

Ungerman said Chuvalo was having difficulty getting bouts with top-ranked British fighters.

"We wanted Henry Cooper (British and British Empire champion) but he ducked out. Then we tried for Billy Walker, Britain's third-ranked heavyweight but he is in the midst of litigation or something or other."

Chuvalo will be paid $10,000 for the Dec. 7 fight. "This may sound cheap," said Ungerman, "but we want to establish a beachhead in the Old Country.

Chuvalo lost a 15-round decision here Nov. 1 against Ernie Terrell for the World Boxing Association version of the world heavyweight championship.

'Cannot Go On' Player Ousted By Pain

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (Reuters)—Injury forced champion golfer Gary Player of South Africa to withdraw from the $8,960 Willis Masters tournament Friday. He said it may be weeks before he can play again.

Severe pain in his back and shoulder prevented him from having a workout on the practice range Friday.

"I've been living on painkilling pills for five months and feel I just cannot go on at the moment," he said shortly before he was scheduled to tee off in the third round.

Player is the current U.S. and Australian Open champion.

Player was in a good position to win the tournament, only one stroke from the leaders, Bob Charles of New Zealand and Peter Thomson of Australia.

Player had moved into a tie for second after two rounds of the 72-hole tourney before he pulled out.

Charles and Thomson shared the halfway lead at 139. Charles, the New Zealand left-hander, had a five-under par 67 in the second round. Thomson, the British Open champion from Australia, had a 70.

Player, his swing hampered by severe back and chest pains, battled to his opening round 70 for a tie at 140 with Australians Bruce Devlin and Denis Sullivan.

Jack Nicklaus, the top U.S. entry, fell back in the pack with some putting troubles.

Colts Hope To Muffle Bear Bombs

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Bears soon will learn whether their two-pronged time bomb will explode again or turn into a dud.

Baltimore Colts will find out, too, and for the sake of their five-game winning streak and their title chances, they hope they'll be able to muffle the Bears' bombs.

The Colts play Chicago Sunday and must win to retain at least a share of the lead in the National Football League's Western Conference.

Green Bay Packers, currently tied with Baltimore, will try to rebound against Philadelphia Eagles after Chicago mapped their six-game winning string last Sunday.

In the rest of the NFL line-up for Sunday, it will be Philadelphia at Cleveland Browns, Los Angeles Rams at Minnesota Vikings, Pittsburgh Steelers at St. Louis Cardinals, Washington Redskins at New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers at Dallas Cowboys.

JETS TACKLE CHIEFS

In the American League, New York Jets play Kansas City Chiefs, San Diego Chargers meet Denver Broncos, Oakland Raiders battle Houston Oilers and Buffalo Bills take on Boston Patriots.

Green Bay and Bart Starr will try to make another winning streak against Detroit.

Cleveland also will try to start another winning streak when Pittsburgh broke the Browns' four-game streak last week, but the Browns remain one game behind of their closest Eastern Conference competitors, St. Louis and New York.

St. Louis has lost its last two games while Pittsburgh has won the last two, but Cardinal quarterback Charley Johnson should be ready to play.

Dallas has a good chance of ending its five-game losing streak with San Francisco quarterback John Brodie a doubtful starter. Don Meredith will quarterback the Cowboys after apparently winning his battle with Craig Morton and Jerry Rhome.

Golf Title To Devlin By Stroke

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Bruce Devlin of Australia won the Wills Masters golf tournament today when Bob Charles of New Zealand, who started up a five-stroke lead after 54 holes, soared to a seven-over-par 80 on the final round.

Devlin shot a 73 over the Kensington course to go with his earlier rounds of 67-71-74 for a 286 total in the $8,960 tourney.

Peter Thompson of Australia finished a stroke back with rounds of 69-70-74-74-287.

DAVIDSON DIES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sam Davidson, former secretary-manager of the Dominion of Canada Football Association and manager of a football park in Winnipeg, died Thursday. Davidson, 79, was born in Belfast and came to Canada in 1911. Before the second World War, he arranged annual tours of Canada for old country soccer clubs.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Niagara Falls Flyers downed Oshawa Generals 4-3 Friday night in the initial encounter of Boston Bruin farmhands in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Some 3,700 fans, biggest local crowd of the season, watched the Memorial Cup champions, unbeaten in seven games this year, move two points ahead of the Generals to stop the nine-team circuit.

Ted Snell, Don Marcotte, Steve Atkinson and Bud Brody scored for the winners while Bill Heindl and George Babcock replied for the Generals.

Oshawa defenceman Jim Whittaker suffered a broken left arm in a pile-up during the second period.

Aces Grab Top Spot With Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kingston Aces, playing at home, took over first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series with a 4-2 victory Friday over Oakville Oaks.

In the other OHA Senior game, Guelph Regals posted a 6-3 score over the last-place Galt Hornets.

The win enabled Guelph to climb over Oakville in second place, Oakville, undefeated in four games this season, have 10 points, two less than Kingston, which has a record of three wins and one defeat.

Games with Kingston, which plays a partial schedule with the other teams because of travelling distances, are worth four points for a win. The extra points account for Kingston's higher position in the standings.

Kingston racked up its win on goals by Charlie Convery, Dave Dick, Dick Cherry and Garfield Ball. Oakville scorers were Grant Moore and Norman Pribbles.

Goalie Harold (Boat) Hurley was the star of the Guelph victory, turning aside 39 shots. He had a shutout going until midway in the third period.

Guelph goals were scored by Butch Martin, Joe Malo, Bob Pole and Jim Robertson. Galt's goals went to Joe Hogan and Ron Brian.

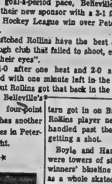
Four-Point Triumph

Rollins Hand Peterborough 3-1 Loss

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)



Travelling at a goal-a-period pace, Belleville Rollins Construction presented their new sponsor with a 3-1 four-point OHA Eastern Junior "B" Hockey League win over Peterborough Don Byes here last night.

A fair crowd watched Rollins have the best of it all night against a Peterborough club that failed to shoot, even when they "saw the whites of their eyes".

Belleville led 1-0 after one heat and 2-0 after two. The visitors finally scored with one minute left in the game and six attackers in action but Rollins got that back in the dying seconds.

The victory was Belleville's second in three four-point starts and the club has another crack at the Don Byes in Peterborough Monday night.

CARL BOOMHOWER

Carl Boomhower, one third of the flyweight line, with Stewart and Summers, notched two goals and assisted on the third to pace the winners' attack.

Grant Hagerman fired the clinching goal while Bob Boyle, who played a fine game going both ways, earned two assists, Ray Summers and Larry Stewart one each.

Peterborough shoved six attackers into the fray at 18.55, down 2-0. Right winger Terry Blewett blasted a point shot that hit goalie Wayne Brant and deflected off him into the net for the Don Byes' first goal in two games

Belleville steamed right back with opposing goalie Randy Reid back in action for the faceoff. Hagerman clinched it, with Boomhower and Boyle helping, at 19.18 from in close.

Boomhower teamed with Boyle, starting the play in the centre zone and finishing it with a short, hard drive after Boyle, potted the rebound from the Lions' zone at 13.38 of the first.

He made it 2-0 at 2.30 of the second period, arriving at Reid's doorstep just in time to steer home Stewart's pass without breaking stride.

Reid raced almost to the Muelins twice to beat Stewart and Fleming to loose pucks. Rollins held a 24-10 shooting edge overall and Brant had most of his work from scramble spots in the goalie. Earlier he came up with several fine glove saves and appeared headed for a shutout.

Belleville missed some good scoring chances but at the other end the visitors refused to shoot, overpassing or misfiring time and again. Midway through the game, Blewett and Al Sal-

Madoc HS, OSD Volleyball Champions

MADOC (Special) — Madoc High School and the Ontario School for the Deaf captured Quinte COSSA district "B" volleyball championships here.

Madoc H.S. won the senior title for the second year in a row sweeping four consecutive victories.

A three-way tie for second, among Tweed, Albert College and OSD, brought about extra play which saw Tweed cop the runner-up honors.

OSD Juniors captured their division with consecutive wins over Marmors, Tweed, Stirling, and Madoc in an impressive display of volleyball.

This forced a three-way tie for second but Madoc defeated Tweed and Stirling to grab second place.

Today, the Central Ontario District Secondary Schools Association championships are being played here at OSD.

Moira, OSD and Madoc will represent the Bay of Quinte with two teams each while other district champions competing are from Peterborough, Fraser Falls, Port Hope and Oshawa.

WFC Semi-Finals

Bombers 7½-Point Favorites

WINNIPEG (CP)—The bookmakers aren't paying much attention to the opinions of the opposing coaches in the Western Football Conference sudden-death semi-final Sunday.

Friday, they established Winnipeg Blue Bombers as 7½-point favorites to defeat Saskatchewan Roughriders and advance to next Saturday's start of a best-of-three final against Calgary Stampeders.

The odds were set after statements such as:

Roughriders' coach Eagle Keys: "Basically, I think we have a better football team than Winnipeg. We have a few weak spots than they do, but then we have more strong spots too."

Bombers' coach Bud Grant: "We fear Saskatchewan as much as any team we've ever played. In a one-shot game, they can beat anybody—and make them look bad."

The semi-final is a one-game affair for the first time since 1961. The revised format is a game total-pointing series was made a bid to reduce a physical condition-attrition factor that times held by the East in the Grey Cup game because of its maximum three-game playoff, two fewer than the western maximum.

GRANT PREDICTS

"Everything points to a tight, low-scoring struggle," Grant said. "We've played each other three times now and this gives the defences an edge."

He has been working on getting his charges in the right frame of mind for Sunday's encounter, to be televised by the CBC beginning at 3:30 p.m. EST.

Grant says he knows what to expect from Saskatchewan: Fullback George Reed, flanker Hugh Campbell and quarterback Ron Lancaster.

"We know Reed will carry two out of three times and half their passes will be directed to Campbell."

Both teams are in good physical condition: The exceptions are a bruised instep for Rider linebacker Ed Hoerner and sore ribs for Winnipeg defensive halfback Henry Janzen. Grant thinks the Bombers have the edge on defence.

"We've been set since midseason. In the early season they're been in a sort of a fluid state, shuffling people in and out. Now we're set."

The Bombers, back in the playoffs after a 13-game losing streak last year, won seven of their last eight games, one last five in succession, and defeated Saskatchewan 17-0 in their final regular-season clash.

COSTS DROP

TORONTO (CP) — Welfare costs have dropped in Ontario this year, James Band, deputy minister of welfare, reported Friday. In a memorandum to welfare administrators, Band said there was a 13.5 per cent decrease in the number of persons receiving social assistance in 40 Ontario municipalities between August, 1964 and August this year.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — If there was any doubt that Hugo Ditfach would finish on top of the leading rider standings at the end of the Ontario racing season Nov. 27, he dispelled it Friday.

Ditfach, 29, rode four of the eight winners on Friday's card at Greenwood Raceway, increasing his total for the year to 154. Hugo was Canada's leading rider in 1959, bringing home 195 winners that year.

Ditfach's first win came in the second race when he guided longshot Gun Artist home in front. Gun Artist returned $54.90 and combined with Accompanist, an easy winner of the first, for a $175.80 daily double.

Hugo was blanked until the fifth race when he rode Cruise Festival, a four-year-old gelding, to a popular $2.80 victory. Chinese Festival, odds-on favorite of the crowd of 6,831, and runner - up Royal Embassy, made for a $13.30 quinella.

Hugo then rode Barleycorn to a $47.30 victory in the sixth race.

Absent Son gave Ditfach his fourth victory in the eighth race, paying $6.30.

The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Kintoo Colby was an easy winner of the seventh race at Morhawk Raceway Friday night, bolding off belated bids by Woo Symbol, who finished second, and Sis Herbert who ran third.

Bill Wellwood, 25, of Stratford was up behind the St. Mary's, Ont.-owned trotter for his fifth victory this season.

Kintoo finished the mile in 2:06 4-5, and paid $4.60 for the win.

Fabway, owned by the Wallenberg, Ont., partnership of Harold Carr and William Babcock, strutted to a four-length victory in the first race.

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Emmy Way, best of the two-year-old trotters, moved a bit closer to the official title Friday night with a close victory over stablemate Mary Dundee in the $56,643 Westbury Futurity at Roosevelt Raceway.

For her ninth stakes success and 16th victory in 26 starts, Emmy Way earned $28,321.55 to boost her bank account to $116,549.55.

HULL, Que. (CP) — Frank Magic broke a losing streak to take the $300 featured pace by four lengths Friday night at Outaouais Park Raceway.

It was only the third victory in 28 starts this season for the four-year-old horse owned by Morley Fleet and Bernard Hunt of Tweed, Ont.

BATAVIA, N.Y. (CP)—Hawk Hanover, owned by Roy C. Rowcliffe of Elba, Ont., won the $2,500 Invitational Handicap Trot in 2:06.1 at Batavia Downs Friday night.

TRY AGAIN

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Sooners will be making their sixth annual bid for a berth in the Eastern Canada Junior football finals Sunday when they meet Notre-Dame - de - Grace Maple Leafs at Carleton University here. The winner meets the Windsor Wheelers champion for the eastern title.

I'M VOTING FOR LEE GRILLS
PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE

DON CHISHOLM - ROSLIN

I feel that the 11% Sales Tax on building supplies that the present Liberal Government instituted, has done more to curtail the building industry and undermine the tremendous expansion program instituted by the former Progressive Conservative Government, than any other single action. I know that when the Progressive Conservative Party is again elected, they will repeal this tax.

Bruce Thompson, R. R. 1, Bloomfield, is shown sharpening the teeth of the circular saw of his new mill, one of two sawmills in Prince Edward County.

Melville Mill Is Rebuilt, Now One of Two in County

PICTON — Bruce Thompson, 31, of R. R. 1 Bloomfield, is proud owner of the county's newest sawmill. This makes a total of two mills in the county at the present time.

This mill, previously owned by Earl Bradley, has been known for years as French's Mill and was located at Melville on the eastern end of Consecon Lake. Purchased last fall, the mill has been in the process of reconstruction for two months. The circular saw has been reconstructed nearly the same as it was in the old mill. Basically the equipment is the same, but new bearings and other fittings have been added. At the moment the mill is ready for production and sits in the open on Thompson's property on Schoharie Road. It is hoped to have the mill completely enclosed in a new building in the near future.

Mr. Thompson expects that most of his material from farmers who are at present cutting pulp for other mills outside the county.

Mr. Thompson at the moment is being assisted by his father, George, who was previously employed in Edson, Alta. Both mills are manned, however, two men, at the moment, comprise all of the help but when operations begin, Mr. Thompson may employ as many as five or six person. Two trucks are at present also connected.

Mr. Thompson, originally from Oxford, N.S., where the mills are made, has been in Prince Edward County for eight years, and he is married and has six children.

Carroll Baker Prepares for Viet Nam Trip

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Carroll Baker may not end the war in Viet Nam but she's certain to cause a stir when the troops get a look at the gowns she's taking along.

Carroll is going to the war zone with Bob Hope's annual Christmas entertainment. It will be the word, she immediately called on Balmain and Lanvin in Paris and got herself about $10,000 worth of gowns.

One number is so transparent that it makes the nude look look like a Mother Hubbard.

"I figure those boys over there don't want to see me in battle fatigues," says Carroll. "So what if the dresses don't last the trip, it's worth it."

Carroll, the screen's Harlow, has one bright orange number that has more feathers than a chicken ranch. It outlines the Baker figure to perfection.

Another is a going-away dress that has mostly left town.

Does the shooting war scare her?

Picton Losing Bid to Keep Its Job Insurance Office

PICTON — Picton and Prince Edward County appear to be losing their bid to retain the Unemployment Insurance Commission office and staff here. Town Council have received a reply to a petition mailed out last month concerning the future of the office, after obtaining a report that the work would be centralized in Belleville. The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce had also passed a resolution that the office be retained here.

The commission replied that it is reviewing its procedure and methods of operations in this area and recommendations made by the Glassco commission. It noted that 65 to 70 percent of claimants in the Picton area are already receiving their unemployment benefits by mail. The system has been extended to all claimants and filing of claims by mail is being extended to a larger number of persons.

The commission fi trying to keep administration costs under control and to achieve this goal the cooperation of the public and the understanding of public agencies is needed. The letter assured council that a move of the Unemployment Insurance Commission office will not affect the functions of the National Employment Service branch here.

INVENTS 'BIRD PLANE'

MOSCOW (AP)—A Soviet inventor claimed Saturday anyone can flap the-wings of his new flying machine and soar like a bird. Ivan Vinogradov said he hopes to have the machine ready next year. Tass news agency described the machine as "a moopplane with wings mounted on the frame of a scooter or motorcycle at the level of the pilot's shoulders." Vinogradov said an engine of 10 to 12 horsepower would give the device a speed of 13 to 70 miles an hour at an altitude up to 200 yards.

At the Belle

William Wyler's suspenseful drama "The Collector"

"Polkerfal" is one word for William Wyler's "The Collector", which opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre, with Terence Stamp and Samantha Eggar featured in Technicolor. "Memorable" is another word, "Haunting" a third. Addiction adjectives may also be applied: "The Collector" is a truly brilliant example of motion picture entertainment as its absorbing best.

Story of an insignificant London bank clerk who kidnaps a vibrant young art student and holds her captive for months, "The Collector" is based on the John Fowles novel whose originality and daring kept it on the best-seller lists of England. William Wyler's production of "The Collector" will certainly be among the more-honored films of the year, but as either of his pictures have been: films like "Mrs. Miniver," "The Best Years of Our Lives" and "Ben Hur," to cite three for which he won Academy Awards.

The screen comes alive with the intensity of the performances of Stamp and Miss Eggar. Their meetings of difficult roles is eloquently brought out by Wyler's sensitive, understanding and persuasive directorial hand and his obvious enthusiasm for the story they put on the screen.

The very professional work of this threesome is reflected in a motion picture that is constantly all-consuming.

For their performances in "The Collector," Terence Stamp and Samantha Eggar won the "best actress" and "best actress" awards at the Cannes Film Festival.

Ed Sullivan Tagged Wills Poker Face

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ed Sullivan, known as "old poker face" on television, reveals it was he who first hung the poker-face label on Helen Wills Moody, the great tennis star of the twenties.

"I was a sportswriter for the New York Daily News in those days," recalls Ed "Helen's face never changed expression, no matter how crucial the match. It was a natural tag — Little Miss Poker Face.

"Then a quarter-century later, the television critics started calling me poker face.

"So I wrote Helen noting the comparison. She played it straight and wrote back that she had watched me on television and said that was my personality — and I deserved to be called 'old poker face' "

FORECASTS NEGRO MAYOR

NEW YORK (AP) — James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said Friday it may be possible for New York to have a Negro mayor in about a dozen years. He also said he figured that Mayor-elect John V. Lindsay received 40 per cent of the Negro vote in fashioning his Republican - Liberal victory in heavily Democratic New York.

Hero in Jesse James Series Attracting Big Fan Club

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—How do you make a telefision hero out of a real-life criminal?

ABC and 20th Century-Fox have fashioned a half-hour television western series on the life and bad times of Jesse James. Although the real nature of Jesse has been dimmed by a parade of movies romanticizing his deeds, the plain fact is that he hesited many a bank and train in a highly unlawful manner.

Yet every Monday night The Legend of Jesse James shows Jesse and Frank as misguided Missouri boys who are out to do good by robbing banks. The formula seems to work, since the series has been lodging in the lower reaches of the top 40 shows in audience ratings, and anything in the upper 40 is considered safe.

Jesse is played by Christopher Jones, a 24-year-old graduate of an orphanage, the U.S. Army and the New York stage. He is a strong-minded chap of the actor's studio school—he married the actor's daughter, Susan Strasberg—and he has his own ideas about how the role should be played.

"There are enough incidents in the history of Jesse James to supply stories for two or three years," he pointed out. "I don't think they use that material instead of trying to make him a Robin Hood all the time!"

The actor admitted that Jesse probably will go on Robin-Hoodwinking for three viewers.

Meanwhile, Jones is the beneficiary of a growing number of fan clubs. He is the fifty of the younger group who seem to identify with him as a rebellious youth.

AT THE PARK — Ann-Margret stars in "Bus Riley's Back in Town" in Technicolor starting today at the Park Theatre. The popular actress first made the brilliant screen debut in "Pocketful of Miracles" in the title role. On the same program Joan Crawford and John Ireland star in William Castle's newest shocker, "I Saw What You Did."

BIRCH CHIEF UNHAPPY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Welch, founder and head of the John Birch Society, says this week's U.S. off-year election results show "Liberals have now got a stranglehold on both political parties." "It doesn't make me happy, but it doesn't make me want to give up, either," Welch said at a press conference Friday.

COSSA Junior Playoff

Moira Ousts Brighton 24-13

By HARRY CAMPBELL

Moira juniors remained unbeaten this season by defeating Brighton 24-13 on Friday. The victory gave them the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. championship.

Moira opened the scoring when they capitalized on a roughing - the - kicker penalty. From the Brighton 30-yard line quarterback John Holgate completed a pass to David Loder for Moira's first major. The convert was missed and the score stood at Moira 6, Brighton 0.

Brighton retaliated quickly and in two plays moved 60 yards, which placed them deep in Moira territory. The defence for Moira tightened and forced them to give up the ball on downs.

Moira was also unsuccessful in moving the ball and their kick was blocked on their own one-yard line.

Brighton was unable to score on two attempts but finally halfback Francis Blink carried it over to tie the game. The convert was good and Brighton moved into a one-point lead.

The defences for both teams improved in the latter stages of the quarter and neither team made any significant advances.

Finally Holgate broke loose on an end sweep and ran 75 yards for the second Moira touchdown. The convert was missed and Moira's lead was 12-7.

In the second quarter Moira was pushed deep into their own territory by a determined Brighton team before Peter Bishop romped 26 yards for a Moira touchdown. Excellent blocks by Lorne Blatchford and Dalton Lambert enabled the success of the run, relieving the pressure.

Moira dominated the play through to the end of the half, and carried the 18-7 lead into the second portion of the game.

Moira received the second half and once again Francis Blink scored for Brighton on an eighty yard run. This made the score Moira-18, Brighton 13.

The game developed into a see-saw defensive battle with the offences able to do very little.

Brighton continually fought back and moved deep into Moira territory late in the game. Then a fumble concluded their drive and proved to be the most decisive factor in their game.

"We were on our way to a homecoming."

QUESTION: Could you please tell me where the Middleton Gardens are situated in South Carolina? I understand that they are the oldest landscaped gardens in the United States. Could you tell us something of their history and also when the camellias will be in bloom? — E. G., Belleville.

ANSWER: The Middleton Gardens are 14 miles northwest of Charleston on State 61, 14 miles from Junction with U.S. 17.

They were begun in 1741 by Henry Middleton, later President of the Continental Congress, who sent to England for a landscape gardener to direct the activities of 100 slaves. The work is said to have lasted 10 years and the garden became famous, even in England before the Revolution. Arthur Middleton, a signer of the Declaration of independence, is buried in the family tomb on the estate. His son, Governor of South Carolina, obtained through his friend, Andrey Michaux, celebrated French botanist, the first camellia japonicas ever brought to this continent. Of the four plants set out by Michaux, three still live and bloom after more than 150 years. The camellias bloom from December to early March, the azaleas during March and April.

The Gardens are open all year from 8 to 6. Admission is Feb. 1st to end of full blooming season By end of full blooming season to Feb. 1st $1.10. Servicemen half price, children under 12 free with parents.

QUESTION: I am leaving on a trip to Germany and expect to be driving a car while there. Will I require an International Driving License? — Mrs. D., Picton

ANSWER: If you are going to be driving only in Germany, an International Driving Permit will not be necessary. You will, however, require a German translation of your Canadian licence. Forms for this purpose may be obtained through the Ontario Motor League in Belleville or the O.M.L. office in Cataraqui.

QUESTION: We are going south this winter and, not having decided where to go, we were wondering about the Gulf Coast section of Mississippi. Have you any information about resort areas in this section? — D. W., Trenton

ANSWER: There are many delightful spots in this area with beaches and salt-water fishing and boating.

Biloxi is the largest city with a population of 44,000. With its old world charm and perennially mild climate, it is one of the most delightful resort cities in the South. One of the oldest Mississippi towns, it is on the low ridge of a narrow peninsula bordered by the Gulf of Mexico, Biloxi Bay and Back Bay, in the older section are time - worn moss-covered oaks and huge cross-hung oaks, while Beach Boulevard is an exceptionally beautiful drive. Roses bloom all year and there are magnolias, crepe myrtle, dogwood, camellias and azaleas in season. It was founded by Pierre le Moyne, Sieur d'Iberville, in 1699. It has a 27-mile sand beach and facilities for practically every sport.

DID YOU KNOW —

There is a report that a sharp eyed chauffeur is responsible for a new safety device. Frank Anderson, chauffeur to Hon. C. S. MacNaughton Ontario Minister of Highways, noticed how the headlights of a car struck an open trunk lid one night and suggested using this built - in surface as a night warning signal of emergency road stops to motorists cars.

In a recent test conducted by the Ontario Department of Transport, reflectorized sheet aluminum panels, in solid red and red-and-white designs, were attached inside car trunk lids. Reflective intensity was found to be excellent throughout the test when headlights were on high-beam. When on low-beam reflection was good at 1,000 feet and steadily improved at closer ranges. Most officials favoured the solid red panel for visual impact.

Britons Give War Arms To Police

LONDON (CP) — Britons by the hundred are laying down their unlicensed arms, surrendering without fear of prosecution souvenirs of war service they may have held illegally for 20 years.

The third firearms "amnesty" since the Second World War, announced by Home Secretary Sir Frank Soskice Aug. 5 and effective for three months, is expected to harvest at least as many weapons as its predecessors in 1961 and 1946 — about 70,000. Both previous amnesties also gleaned around 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition.

After Oct. 31, possession of unlicensed weapons will mean fines up to 10 times stiffer than at present, and double the period of imprisonment — £200 fine or six months in jail, compared with the present £20 to £50 fine or two months.

The idea behind the latest amnesty—three were held in the 1930s—is to "get all the amateurs" out of circulation before firearms, which has British police worried. These have increased in crimes of violence, since many firearms are stolen or otherwise come into the hands of people with criminal intentions.

Police are said to be worried that if hanging is abolished, as seems almost certain under the Labor government, the public may feel even less inhibited about using firearms unless penalties are increased up.

WAR SOUVENIRS

Why do so many respectable British homes have unauthorized guns lying about? Most are wartime souvenirs, say police. Many householders also feel their army service is a useful thing to have around in case of burglars, but have never bothered to license it because it isn't handy.

The Home Office, which is running the amnesty in conjunction with local police forces all over Britain, has reminded the public that all firearms and ammunition issued for war service or captured from the enemy are government property and should not be regarded as "trophies of war."

In previous amnesties, many people have handed in antique weapons, in some cases worth hundreds of pounds, without realizing these are immune as long as they cannot be fired and are kept purely as ornaments.

At the end of each amnesty, weapons are sorted out and the antiques sent to museums. The unwary former owner doesn't get a penny in compensation. Other weapons are dumped in the sea.

Some odd weapons have been handed in during past amnesties. In 1961 a man with a truck drove up to a Hertfordshire police station and unloaded an anti-tank gun, six rifles, 12,000 rounds of ammunition and two boxes of still-lived grenades. No questions were asked.

A while - haired Lancashire woman walked into a Southport station bearing a Sten gun, and at Bath two women surrendered a loaded Colt automatic with the safety catch off.

In the first two weeks of the current amnesty, the 1,272 weapons handed over in London included five sub-machine-guns, an assortment of revolvers, pistols, Very pistols, gas - discharging pistols and an 18th Century muzzle-loading musket.

FUTURE UNCERTAIN

TORONTO (CP)—The fledgling Company of Young Canadians faces an uncertain future when the federal government isn't involving the public in it, says a former staff member of the group's organizing secretariat, Jean Newman, who resigned last month to work for the Student Union for Peace Action, said in an interview Thursday that lack of public involvement in the company's development could lead to disinterest among the young persons it is being set up to attract.

Geoffrion Case
Leafs' Tampering 'Not Proven'

MONTREAL (CP)—The verdict's in.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, Friday acquitted Toronto Maple Leafs of tampering charges brought by Montreal Canadiens in the case of Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion.

"The only result possible in these circumstances is a Scottish verdict of 'not proven,'" Campbell announced upon completion of his investigation.

Geoffrion, now coach of Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League, was placed on Montreal's voluntary retired list when he hung up his skates 18 months ago.

The Canadiens' complaint alleged that Geoffrion had been offered a five-year, $35,000 annual contract to play with the Toronto club.

—The initial complaint referred to an offer alleged to have been made at the reception preceding the Frank Selke testimonial dinner in Montreal Oct. 18. The inquiry was extended to cover two other occasions when similar offers were alleged to have been made.

"There is no dispute that he (Geoffrion) talked with Toronto club officials on three different occasions, but that is about the only point of agreement between the witnesses," Campbell's statement said.

"The conflict of testimony between the witnesses makes it impossible to resolve on any disputed issue and the matter of relative credibility of the witnesses cannot be determined effectively in this type of informal inquiry, without the benefit of cross-examination."

Motel Seller Ordered to Pay $10,000

TORONTO (CP) — Kenneth Joseph Ferren of Chatham and formerly of Peterborough, was ordered to pay $10,000 and costs in a court action here Thursday over the sale of a motel he had owned.

Mr. Justice William D. Parker of the Ontario Supreme Court ruled that Ronald Joseph Belton of Peterborough and Robert Byers Webb of Parry Sound suffered damages in that amount when they bought the motel.

Evidence showed Belton and Webb bought the Brentwood Motel and Restaurant near Bowmanville for $90,000 in July, 1963, relying on what Ferren told them the business made.

They lost $3,000 the first year. Mr. Justice Parker found that the business was operating at a loss at the time of the sale, that its fair market value is $80,000, and that Belton and Webb are entitled to the $10,000 difference.

Mr. Justice Parker said Ferren now is director of special educational services and psychological testing for the city of Chatham.

JUST DIG AND PAN

EDMONTON (CP) — Though not in plentiful supply, gold can still be found in the North Saskatchewan River, says Dr. Lawrence HaErdstak, a geologist on the provincial research council. "All you have to do is dig some gravel and pan it," he says, but his findings will probably be "flour gold," ground small and far from the mother lode.

WILL MAKE CHECK

TORONTO (CP)—A team of accountants will invade the offices of voluntary health, welfare and recreational agencies soon to try to end the "unnecessary gobbledygook" in their balance sheets, Herbert R. Balls, chairman of the Community Funds and Councils of Canada, said in an interview Wednesday the study will cover the methods used by the agencies to add up their income and spending.

Ann Landers.
Parents Should Not Act as Referees

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a girl 13 who has a 9-year-old sister. Laura is spoiled rotten. I have orders not to lay a hand on her because I am older and bigger. But she can kick me wherever she feels like it and she feels like it pretty often.

Laura has learned a stunt to get me into trouble. She waits to meet me when she begins to howl — real loud, so the people in the next block can hear. My dad runs in yelling, "What did you do to Laura?" When I say "Nothing," Laura says, "That's a lie. She hit me." Then I get punished.

I have to do eight household jobs and all Laura has to do is drag a dust mop over a couple of tables. When I complain Mom says, "She's just a little girl," and when I don't want to take her to the movies on Saturday afternoon (I go with my friends), Mom says, "Take her. She's a young lady."

It will be four years and eight months until I can get out of this house and go to college, if I last that long. Tell me what to do until then. — IN MISERY.

DEAR IN: Little sisters and brothers can be a joy or a pain in the neck, depending on how their parents raise them.

Big kids should not hit little ones and little kids should not hit big ones, period. Your children should do more work but they should also have extra privileges.

It is wrong to saddle a 13-year-old girl with a 9-year-old sister on a Saturday afternoon. It is also wrong to reward a child for tattling on a brother or sister. The best advice is for parents to insist that their kids work out their problems independently and refuse to act as referees.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the mother who is broke because her son is marrying a woman seven years older than he is.

My son was 16 when he fell for a woman who was 26. They were married two years ago and I cried myself to sleep every night. He kept telling me Jeanette was a wonderful person and loved her three children as if they were his own. Well, I refused to even meet her.

My son married Jeanette when he was 19 (she was 29.) Today, five years later, they are the happiest people I know. She is better to me than my own daughters. Jeanette telephones me every few days and says, "Mother, is there anything you need? What can I do for you?" My own daughters call only when they want me to baby-sit.

So please tell that mother to cheer up. Her son's older wife may be the best one in the bunch. Mine is. — HAD TO BE SHOWN.

DEAR SHOWN: Your son and Jeanette have beaten the odds and my hat is off to them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our youngster is a victim of homophilia. Because of his condition he is often covered with bruises and he appears to be black eye.

Strangers come over and say, "What happened to the child? Was he in an accident?" We don't feel like discussing his condition with strangers. Furthermore we don't want the boy to feel he's abnormal. Yet we must say something. Advice us please. — W.P.

DEAR W.P.: It's always difficult to cope with thoughtless people but your first concern should be for the boy. Tell the inquisitive ones that he is hemophilic. Chop it there. Explain to the child that when people ask questions they are showing interest in him and they don't really mean to be rude.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents . . . If you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

De Gaulle Has Been Unable To Get Political Continuity

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Roslin

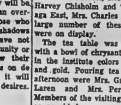
In appealing for a return to office, President de Gaulle has employed a curious association of terms undoubtedly designed to convey an element of doom if the voters do not elect him. But his words also convey an admission of failure.

For seven years de Gaulle, now approaching 75, stood master over the destiny of France. He was able to create a new political structure, end an exhausting war with Algeria, dominate the politics of Europe, fill French coffers with gold and even throw his more-dominant allies off-balance.

But he has been unable to get political continuity. The regime he will collapse, he says, if he is beaten at the polls. France will have confidence in no other political pillar than his own. Without him the country will have a greater confusion than it has known in the past.

De Gaulle undoubtedly will be returned to power by an overwhelming margin. Those who oppose him are more shadows on the stage. They have not been given the opportunity or encouragement to show their talents. The spotlight is on de Gaulle and his latest pal with ashtrays as long as he so desires.

DISPLAYS WEAKNESS



He thus displays the egocentric element of weakness seen by other great men in the past. Some do not tolerate competition and are more inclined to pick successors who do not have the ability to challenge the unprecedented historical image of the master.

But what if he should die before the voters have the chance to re-elect him to office? That would mean, under his terms, that France must also perish? Why has de Gaulle stayed so long in ensuring the political continuity of his country?

The answer may be that de Gaulle believes the country cannot guarantee stable government in democratic means without his help. Or he may have found that the successors to the throne will not be popular with the voting majority.

Of greater concern is the possibility that in establishing stability, de Gaulle may not have created the climate necessary for French politics but temporarily paralyzed the old gyrations which have been the main confusion once his own domination and control is stilled.

Taxed production machinery bringing about reduced production within industry in this area!

Let's face it . . . Our Liberal Opposition is a good publicity man . . . But what this riding needs is action and representation for the people . . . Not Bold Headlines!

Our Liberal opposition talks of new industry . . . But what about our present industry . . . some which has just recently left the area!

UN To Debate Admission Of Red China

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The UN General Assembly begins debate today on the annual proposal to admit Communist China. The debate was expected to end with the Chinese Communists still on the outside despite the biggest vote in their favor so far.

Speakers listed for the first round of debate included Ilnoat Sambath of Cambodia and Halim Budo of Albania, both supporters of Peking, and on the opposite side, Liu Chieh of Nationalist China and Arthur J. Goldberg of the United States.

Diplomats agree that the Chinese Communists will fail to get the two - thirds majority needed to seat them. They also agree that they will get the largest vote they have received since the issue first arose in 1950. The vote is now at 11 in favor, 57 opposed and 12 abstentions.

Goldberg gave British television viewers an argument against bringing in Communist China in a recorded BBC interview Sunday night. He said "it does not qualify for membership because it is not a peaceloving" and it "repudiates the charter" of the United Nations.

"The recent declarations of Red China," he declared, "make this session, a stronger case for the exclusion of Red China perhaps than ever before."

ADVOCATES ENTRY

Sambath advocated seating Communist China when he spoke Oct. 1 in the assembly's general debate. He said its absence deprived the United Nations of universality, and "700,000,000 Chinese a voice and prevented solution of world problems.

Rhodesia Rejects Wilson's Proposal For Commission

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Rhodesia rejects Britain's proposals for a royal commission on the Rhodesian independence issue, Prime Minister Ian Smith said tonight in a personal message to British Prime Minister Wilson.

Britain and its white - ruled colony in central Africa had disagreed on the terms of a proposed royal commission on the issue of independence for Rhodesia.

The proposed commission would have tested Rhodesian opinion—white and non-white—on the independence issue.

Smith said Wilson's message to him Sunday, proposing a meeting in Malta, means only they still are deadlocked over the independence issue.

His statement seemed to leave the white - minority government which already has declared a state of emergency—with no alternative to seizing independence unilaterally.

The government has already decided in principle on a unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) for Rhodesia's 220,000 whites and 4,000,000 non-whites if the negotiations with British fail. Britain has refused to grant independence without guarantees of eventual non-white rule.

Smith offered no proposals

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson has proposed another meeting with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith in an attempt to solve the new crisis over Smith's drive for independence.

Wilson suggested that the two meet on the Mediterranean Island of Malta.

(Looking grim and determined as he arrived for a cabinet meeting, Smith waved a copy of Wilson's message and told reporters: "No comment. I've got a lot of reading to do first.")

The two leaders, meeting in the Rhodesian capital of Salisbury, agreed Oct. 20 to let a three - man royal commission try to seek a way out of the independence deadlock. During the weekend the agreement began to fall apart.

Smith charged that the British prime minister's refusal to be bound by the findings of the royal commission had "finally closed the door" to a negotiated settlement.

The Rhodesian leader also declared a state of emergency in the central African colony, causing fears in London that Smith was preparing to declare unilateral independence to preserve white rule.

Wilson's government says such a move would be illegal and insists the colony's 4,000,000 Negroes must be given guarantees of political power eventually. The government now is dominated by the 220,000 white settlers.

Wilson suggested that before he and Smith meet, Rhodesian Chief Justice Sir Hugh Beadle visit London. He is to head the three - member royal commission if it ever functions.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — A fresh thrust of cold air is now crossing the eastern prairies into Ontario. This colder weather is preceded by an intensive area of precipitation that extends northward from western lower Michigan to cover all of northwestern Ontario. This precipitation is in the form of snow north of the Great Lakes and mainly rain around the upper lakes with wet snow occasionally mixed in.

The resulting weather picture for today's election indicates snow changing to snowflurries and cold in the north while in the south it will be mainly cloudy and rather tiring and colder by the evening.

The rapid eastward motion of this weather disturbance will carry it to the Quebec border by this evening to be followed by a cold northwesterly circulation that will drop temperatures tonight into the 20s in the south and into the low teens in the north.

Tuesday will be mainly cloudy and cold as an area of high pressures crosses the province.

Another Missile Site Hit

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. pilots reported smashing another missile-site in North Viet Nam today, and American paratroopers clashed with a strong Viet Cong battalion in the south, killing 110 of the enemy, a U.S. spokesman reported.

But in air action over North Viet Nam, the U.S. lost five planes during the weekend, one the victim of a surface-to-air missile. Five U.S. flyers were rescued and six were listed as missing.

In the south, paratroopers of the 173rd Airborne met what was described as a main force Viet Cong force dressed in grey fatigue-like uniforms never seen before in South Viet Nam.

Brig.-Gen. Ellis Williamson, the brigade commander, reported the paratroopers counted 110 Viet Cong dead and "they're not through counting."

Heavy Turnout Of Electorate In S. Hastings

Dark rain-filled skies blanketted the Quinte district earlier today as voters went to the federal election polls.

Riding returning officer William Van Tassel reported steady attendances at the polls he had visited up to noon.

It's very good for a morning vote", he commented.

With their campaigns over and the decision in the hands of the electorate, local candidates began watching the skies as pundits tried to read weather charts for clues to elections.

The weatherman forecast showers and cloudy skies through the day.

Canada Pays Tribute to Her War Dead Remembrance Day

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada pays tribute to her war dead Thursday, Nov. 11—Remembrance Day.

Across the country the day will be observed with the traditional two - minutes silence, church services, wreath-placing ceremonies and parades.

Since 1964, more than 100,000 Canadians have died in battle.

Thousands are expected to gather around the National War Memorial at Ottawa where five wreaths of poppies will be placed. About 900 veterans and servicemen will participate.

Mrs. Nora Wagner, a 75-year-old Teeterville, Ont., widow, will place the wreath for Canadian motherhood. She lost three sons in the Second World War.

The other wreaths will be placed by Governor - General Vanier, the prime minister, Air Chief Marshal F. R. Miller, chief of the defence staff, and Fred T. O'Brecht, Dominion president of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Shots from two 105-mm howitzers at 11 a.m. EST will signal the beginning of the two minutes of silence.

Similar solemn ceremonies will be held at memorials in villages, towns and cities from Newfoundland to British Columbia.

Federal government offices and banks will be closed in all provinces but commercial establishments will remain open in many.

Members of the Student Union for Peace Action at the University of Toronto plan to keep a 12-hour vigil at the Soldier's Tower in discussion and silent contemplation on the failure of earlier peace movements.

Other students at the university will keep a 15-minute vigil to "rededicate" themselves to the cause of peace.

Russians Show Huge Rocket On Revolution Anniversary

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union showed off Sunday a huge rocket which it said is capable of triggering a surprise nuclear attack from space.

The rocket had been shown once before but its capabilities were described for the first time Sunday, during the mammoth military parade marking the 48th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution that installed communism in Russia.

The Russians said the 115-foot rocket could put a nuclear warhead into orbit around the earth. From the first or any later orbit, an official announcement said, ground control could fire the nuclear warhead "unexpectedly" at a target.

Orbiting of a nuclear-armed weapon would violate a United Nations agreement which the Soviet Union and the U.S. have signed. The Russians, however, said only that they were capable of launching such a weapon, not that they had done so.

The orbital missile received at the place of honor, the last spot, in the parade through Red Square.

Before it in the parade came a mobile missile which the Russians described as invulnerable.

Such parades normally provide an opportunity for Soviet rocket expertise. But Defence Minister Rodion Malinovsky was relatively mild on the U.S. in his parade speech.

Communist Party Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev did not even mention the United States while calling for peace in a mildly-worded toast at a later Kremlin reception.

Four weapons were displayed in public for the first time.

The Russians claimed one was a new intercontinental ballistic missile. But Western experts said all four appeared to be shorter range. These experts called the new missiles improved variations of weapons shown here before.

The orbital weapon, at 115 feet, is the longest nuclear missile ever displayed here. It is a three-stage, liquid-fuelled ICBM with a range of more than 5,000 nautical miles.

Malinovsky, the only speaker in the parade, again charged the U.S. with imperialistic interference in the affairs of other countries and with barbaric raids on Viet Nam. His remarks, however, appeared milder than in May, when he said the U.S. was threatening a wider war.

The military parade was followed by more than 10,000 Russians carrying flags, banners, balloons and floats through Red Square for more than two hours.

Weather Outlook Favorable For Voting in Most Areas

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians vote today in a federal general election that will decide whether the country returns to majority government or continues with the present trend of the last decade to minority administrations.

Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. local standard time.

The weather outlook is favorable for voting in most areas. Generally cloudy skies with sunny intervals and cool temperatures were forecast. Snowflurries were expected in Northern Ontario as well as in Saskatchewan and Alberta, with scattered showers forecast for southern Ontario and rain for southern British Columbia.

After a slow - starting campaign which built to a frantic climax of noisy, big-crowd rallies and produced promises involving billions of dollars amid heated argument over integrity in high places, it all came down to a simple X on a ballot.

The choice is up to 10,255,777 eligible electors at 51,839 polling places.

Many are voting in the fifth general election in 8½ years. Never before have Canadians been asked to exercise their franchise so frequently in so short a period.

There are 315,202 more persons eligible to vote than in 1963. But indications early in the eight-week campaign were that the turnout at the polls would be below the 79.6 per cent whose ballots produced a minority Liberal government 2½ years ago. Some officials suggested a drop to about 69 per cent.

The record turnout was 79.8 per cent in 1958. That was the only election in the last four to produce a majority administration.

Princess Dances Till Dawn, Up Early to See Movies Made

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After dancing until 2 a.m. today at a glittering $1 million ball given by Princess Margaret Arlene early to see where movies are made.

Relaxed and gay, the princess twirled around the floor Sunday night with such partners as Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly and Danny Kaye.

She'll meet more Hollywood stars tonight at the big World Adoption International Ball at the Palladium, after promoting British goods at a department store and touring university studies.

Judy Garland, Kaye and Kelly Jr. and Danny danced a little schoo. Frank Sinatra, attending with Miss Farrow, declined to sing, explaining he thought everyone should just relax and have a good time.

More than 100 of Hollywood's top stars attended the party, the princess' first in Hollywood since her arrival Sunday. It was given by Sharman Douglas, the princess' old friend and daughter of former ambassador to Britain, Lewis Douglas. Sharman, a onetime Hollywood publicist, is accompanying the princess on her tour.

Sitting at the head table with the Snowdons were Gregory Peck and his wife, Veronique, Warren Beatty, comedian Milton Berle and his wife, Ruth, and British star Julie Andrews, with director Mike Nichols.

Elizabeth Taylor, in a white and gold balenciaga gown, and husband Richard Burton, rode up to the Ritzo restaurant in an old London taxicab, owned by Elizabeth's secretary, Richard Hanley. They were among the first to arrive and the first to leave—even before the royal pair departed.

Frank Sinatra and Miss Farrow left early, too through the kitchen door.

It's against royal protocol to leave before the princess, but

Today's Chuckle

Advice to all eaters: If you are thin, don't eat fast. If you are fat, don't eat. Fast!

Lord Snowdon aide explained the princess understood that the actors had to go to work early in the morning.

The music, played by a trio led by society bandleader Bernie Richards, ranged from a sedate fox-trot to a wild Watusi. But the princess, dancing with Astaire when a Watusi began, sat down until it was over.

The princess wore a creation by British designer Norman Hartnell—a silk, high - necked, sleeveless gown, embroidered with small gold and silver flowers. A massive diamond and gold necklace encircled her throat and white mink jacket draped her shoulders.

The menu included seafood for d'oeuvres, cold cucumber soup, filet of beef, spring vegetables, salad, cheese, a dessert called orange surprise and California white wine and French red wine.

The two leaders, meeting in the Rhodesian capital of Salisbury, agreed Oct. 26 to let a three - man royal commission try to seek a way out of the independence deadlock. During the weekend the agreement began to fall apart.

Smith charged that the British prime minister's refusal to be bound by the findings of the royal commission had "finally closed the door" to a negotiated settlement.

The Rhodesian leader also declared a state of emergency in the central African colony, causing fears in London that Smith was preparing a declaration of unilateral independence to preserve white rule.

Wilson's government says such a move would be illegal and insists the colony's 4,000,000 Negroes must be given guarantees of political power eventually. The government now is dominated by the 220,000 white settlers.

Wilson suggested that before he and Smith meet, Rhodesian Chief Justice Sir Hugh Beadle visit London. He is to head the three - member royal commission if it ever functions.

Canada Pays Tribute to Her War Dead Remembrance Day

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada pays tribute to her war dead Thursday, Nov. 11—Remembrance Day.

Across the country the day will be observed with the traditional two - minutes silence, church services, wreath-placing ceremonies and parades.

Since 1914, more than 100,000 Canadians have died in battle.

Thousands are expected to gather around the National War Memorial at Ottawa where five official wreaths will be placed. About 900 veterans and servicemen will participate.

Mrs. Nora Wagner, a 75-year-old Teeterville, Ont., widow, will place the wreath for Canadian motherhood. She lost three sons in the Second World War.

The other wreaths will be placed by Governor - General Vanier, the prime minister, Air Chief Marshal F. R. Miller, chief of the defence staff, and Fred T. O'Brecht, Dominion president of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Shots from two 105-mm howitzers at 11 a.m. EST will signal the beginning of the two minutes of silence.

Federal government offices and banks will be closed in all provinces but commercial establishments will remain open in many.

Members of the Student Union for Peace Action at the University of Toronto plan to keep a 12-hour vigil at the Soldier's Tower in discussion and silent contemplation on the failure of earlier peace movements.

Another Missile Site Hit

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. pilots reported smashing another missile site in North Viet Nam today, and American paratroopers clashed with a strong Viet Cong battalion in the south, killing 110 of the enemy, a U.S. spokesman reported.

But in air action over North Viet Nam, the U.S. lost five planes during the weekend, one the victim of a surface-to-air missile. Five U.S. fliers were rescued and six were listed as missing.

In the south, paratroopers of the 173rd Airborne met what was described as a main force Viet Cong battalion in grey fatigue-like uniforms never seen before in South Viet Nam.

Brig.-Gen. Ellis Williamson, the brigade commander, reported the paratroopers counted 110 Viet Cong dead and "they're not through counting."

Heavy Turnout Of Electorate In S. Hastings

a Belleville, hub of Hastings South riding, early indications were for a heavy turnout of the electorate.

It's very good for a morning," he commented.

With their campaigns over and the decision in the hands of the electorate, local candidates began watching the skies as pundits tried to read weather effects into predictions.

The weatherman forecast showers and cloudy skies through the day.

Weather Outlook Favorable For Voting in Most Areas

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians vote today in a federal general election that will decide whether the country will return to majority government or continues with the present trend of the last decade to minority administrations.

Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. local standard time.

The weather outlook is favorable for voting in most areas. Generally cloudy skies with sunny intervals and cool temperatures were forecast. Snowflurries were expected in Northern Ontario as well as in Saskatchewan and Alberta, with scattered showers forecast for southern Ontario and rain for southern British Columbia.

After a slow starting campaign which built to a frantic climax of noisy, big-crowd rallies and produced promises involving billions of dollars amid heated argument over integrity in high places, it all came down to a simple X on a ballot.

The choice is up to 10,255,777 eligible electors at 51,839 polling places.

Many are voting in the fifth general election in 8½ years. Never before have Canadians been asked to exercise their franchise so frequently in so short a period.

There are 315,202 more persons now eligible to vote than in 1963. But indications early in the eight-week campaign were that the turnout of the polls would be below the 79.6 per cent whose ballots produced a majority Liberal government 2½ years ago. Some officials suggested a drop to about 69 per cent.

The record turnibut was 79.8 per cent in 1958. That was the only election in the last four to produce a majority administration.

Russians Show Huge Rocket On Revolution Anniversary

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union showed off Sunday a huge rocket which it said is capable of triggering a surprise nuclear attack from space.

The rocket had been shown once before but its capabilities were described for the first time Sunday, during the mammoth military parade marking the 48th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution that installed communism in Russia.

The Russians said the 115 foot rocket could put a nuclear warhead into orbit around the earth. From the first or any later orbit, an official announcement said, ground control could fire the nuclear warhead "unexpectedly" at a target.

Orbiting of a nuclear-armed weapon would violate a United Nations agreement which the Soviet Union and the U.S. have signed. The Russians however, said only that they were capable of launching such a weapon, not that they had done so.

The orbital missile received at the place of honor, the last in the parade through Red Square.

Before it in the parade came a mobile missile which the Russians described as invulnerable.

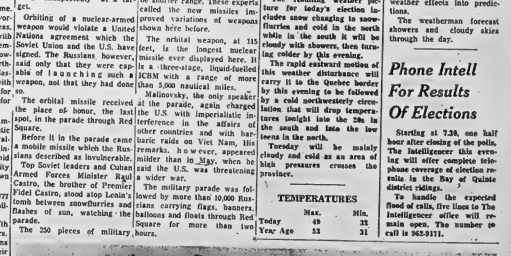
Such parades normally provide an opportunity for Soviet rocket strength. But Defence Minister Rodion Malinovsky was relatively mild on the U.S. in his parade speech.

Communist Party Leader Leonid I. Brezhnev did not even mention the Viet Nam war, calling for peace in a mildly-worded toast at a later Kremlin reception.



Four weapons were displayed in public for the first time.

The Russians claimed one was a new intercontinental ballistic missile. But Western experts said four appeared to be shorter range. These experts called the new missiles improved variations of weapons shown here before.

The orbital weapon, at 115 feet, is the longest nuclear missile ever displayed here. It is a three-stage, liquid-fuelled ICBM with a range of more than 5,000 nautical miles.

Malinovsky, the only speaker at the parade, again charged the U.S. with imperialistic interference in the affairs of other countries and with barbaric raids on Viet Nam. His remarks, however, appeared milder than in May, when he said the U.S. was threatening a wider war.

The military parade was followed by more than 10,000 Russians carrying flags, banners, balloons and floats through Red Square for more than two hours.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—After dancing until 2 a.m. today at a glittering Hollywood party, Princess Margaret arises early to see where movies are made.

Relaxed and gay, the princess twirled around the floor Sunday night with such partners as Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly and Danny Kaye.

She'll meet more Hollywood stars tonight at the big World Adoption International Fund ball at the Palladium, after promoting British goods at a department store and touring university studies.

Judy Garland, Kaye and Kelly and Danny danced a little jig-shoe. Frank Sinatra, attending with Miss Farrow, declined to sing, explaining he thought everyone should just relax and have a good time.

More than 100 of Hollywood's top stars attended the party, the princess' first in Hollywood since her arrival Sunday. It was given by Sharman Douglas, the princess' old friend and daughter of former ambassador to Britain, Lewis Douglas. Sharman, a cerebral Hollywood publicist, is accompanying the princess on her tour.

Silliest at the head table with Snowdon were Gregory Peck and his wife, Veronique, Warren Beatty, comedian William Bendix and his wife, Bush, and British star Julie Andrews, with director Mike Nichols.

Elizabeth Taylor, in a white and gold balenciago gown, and husband Richard Burton, rode up to the Bistro restaurant in an old London taxicab, owned by Elizabeth's secretary, Richard Hanley. They were among the first to arrive and the first to leave—even before the royal pair departed.

Frank Sinatra and Miss Farrow left early, too through the kitchen door.

It's against royal protocol to leave before the princess, but an aide explained the princess understood that the actors had to go to work early in the morning.

Another early arrival, who stayed late, was Rosalind Russell and her husband, producer Frederick Brisson.

The music, played by a trio led by society bandleader Bernie Richards, ranged from a sedate fox-trot to a wild Watusi. But the princess, dancing with Astaire when a Watusi began, sat down until it was over.

The menu included seafood bor. d'oeuvres, cold cucumber soup, filet of beef, spring vegetables, salad, cheese, a dessert called orange surprise and California white wine and French red wine.

Cheese Sales To Increase Is Forecast

An annual increase in cheese sales of from eight to ten million pounds a year for several years to come, was forecast in Belleville last week by Heard Arnold, chairman of the Ontario Cheese Producers Marketing Board.

The forecast was made at a joint meeting between the Cheese Producers' Marketing Board and the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

The meeting, under the joint chairmanship of Mr. Arnold and Mr. George McLaughlin, Chairman of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, was called for a discussion of mutual milk marketing problems and to study the members of each group to familiarize themselves with the other's activities. Following a frank and friendly exchange of ideas the two groups visited the Cheese Exchange.

Mr. McLaughlin outlined the Ontario Milk Marketing Board's recent policy statement which summarized the long range program. He also complimented the Cheese Producers' Marketing Board on its export and promotional activities over the years. These have been a key factor, he said in maintaining stable prices throughout Ontario Dairy Industry.

Mr. MacLaughlin stated that cheese producers are being included on the membership of the various County Milk Committees now being organized throughout the Province. This will in no way interfere with the special activities of the local Cheese Committees which have their own particular problems, he said.

Mr. Arnold said the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board appreciated the opportunity of a joint meeting with the Ontario Milk Marketing Board to discuss mutual problems."

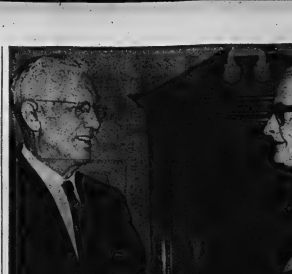
Workshop on Counselling Successful

At Moira Secondary School on Saturday, Nov. 6, an enlightening workshop on Counselling was directed by Miss Jean Graves, Guidance Counsellor, Kingston Collegiate and Vocational School.

The morning session was chaired by Mr. Harold Mott, who introduced Mr. A. E. Orr, Superintendent of Secondary Schools, to the group of thirty teacher-counsellors and public health nurses. Mr. Orr brought greetings from the Bay of Quinte District High School Board and in an inspirational way stressed the responsibilities and the value of guidance workers.

Greetings from the Minister of Education were extended by Mr. David Patterson, the District Guidance Inspector. Mr. Patterson's position is a new one in this area and reflects the growing concern of the Department of Education in the field of guidance services and the recognition of the fact that not only teachers but parents and others in the community want more reality counselling in the schools.

Miss Graves stressed the paramount importance of the counsellor being the type of person who can develop a warm understanding relationship with others. Techniques are secondary, but also necessary, she said, and discussed several, including acceptance, reflection, clarification, reassurance, general leads, probing, interpretation, evaluation and silence. Different theories of counselling were explained and interviews were heard and discussed.



Those in attendance were enthusiastic about the many ideas which were developed during the day. They were represented were: Quinte S.S. — Mrs. Norma Grant, Head of Guidance, Mr. Milton Kerr, Shop Director, and the following counsellors:—Mr. R. Leslie, R. Henderson, J. Hull, Mrs. P. Right Title Can Help Leader Hang Onto Power in Africa BLANTYRE, Malawi (AP) — "What's in a name? For some African leaders, struggling to make something of their recent independence, the right title enhances their chances of topping the African popularity poll.

Presidents or prime ministers don't really stand much a chance with millions of Africans living in dusty, mud-hut villages and clinging to age-old tribal adoration of their chiefs and clan elders.

They prefer something more commanding — like redeemers, saviours, messiahs and lions.

Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie has a long string of faithful cities. Legend has it that he is a direct descendant of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

His title includes King of Kings, Conquering Lion of Judah and Elect of God. Among the septuagenarian's royal couriers he is referred to at Imperial Majesty. But the people of his country prefer the old Conquering Lion.

On Africa's steamy West Coast, Ghana's President Kwame Nkrumah has taken the title of Osagyefo, which broadly translated likens him to redeemer, saviour or messiah.

The fact that he has survived bullet and bomb attacks on his life adds weight to his splendid title, which impresses the Ghanaian people. Some of them call him Messiah Nkrumah from time to time.

Down on the palm - fringed East African coast, Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere, architect of Tanganyika's independence and a former school teacher, is known as Mwalimu wa Swahili term for teacher.

Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta, older statesman of African nationalism and the man the British believe was leader of the country's former Mau Mau terror, is called Mzee, which originally was called Burning Spear.

This now has been replaced with a simple "Mzee"—a Swahili term meaning old man. Among Kenya's 8,000,000 population, many of whom recall the terrible jungle savagery of Mau Mau days, he is sometimes jocularly known as Jolly Jomo.

Malawi's fiery Dr. Hastings Hlanda, prime minister of a land - locked Central African country (formerly Nyasaland), has taken the title of Malawi. In official government records he is referred to as founder of the nation.

Moise Kapenda Tshombe, prime minister of the bloodied Congo, is best known by his real name, which means Moses, My Darling.

Uganda's premier, Dr. Milton Obote, who rules over four tribal kingdoms with tongue-twisting names, has declined all adulatory titles. So too has Northern Zambia's (formerly Northern Rhodesia) President Kenneth Kaunda.

Content with their grandiose titles, some African leaders like to sport status symbols, such as flywhisks, carved elephant-headed walking sticks or, like King Freddie of Buganda, a simple rolled umbrella.

Chilean Police Clash With Argentines

SANTIAGO (AP)—A weekend border clash between Chilean police and Argentine troops set off violent demonstrations in Santiago and sent both governments into emergency sessions.

One Chilean policeman was reported killed, one wounded and two captured in the clash Saturday in the Lake O'Higgins area near the border.

Angry Chileans gathered outside the presidential palace in Santiago and demanded arms to fight the Argentinians. Chilean police battled demonstrators through the night with tear gas and water and more than 100 were driven back from the Argentine Embassy after burning an Argentine flag.

Chilean President Eduardo Frei met with his cabinet and military leaders until after midnight Sunday night.

In Buenos Aires, President Arturo Illia held a similar session. Reports the two had conferred by phone could not be confirmed.

The Chilean foreign ministry said the fighting broke out when Chilean police, following an agreement to withdraw from a ranch where they had raised the Chilean flag, were attacked. The ministry said some 50 policemen were in the area but only 10 were involved in the fighting with the Argentines.

The Argentine foreign ministry charged the Chileans opened fire. They said the Argentine troops were advancing toward the ranch because the Chileans had set a deadline to leave by Friday.

Incidents along the part of the poorly marked 3,000-mile undemarcated border have created friction between the two countries for years.

but said the only conclusion he could reach from Wilson's message is that they are back to where they were after last month's abortive talks in London.

Smith made the statement after a day of cabinet meetings here. Earlier, when asked by reporters whether he is going to Malta, Smith replied: "Not that I know of."

Smith also appeared to rule out another British proposal that Sir Hugh Beadle, Rhodesia's chief justice, should fly to Lagdon to discuss a royal commission which would test Rhodesian opinion, Negro and white, on the independence issue.

He gave the same "Not that I know of" answer when asked if Beadle, designated as chairman of the proposed commission, would go to Britain.

The prime minister used the same negative words for the third time when asked if the Rhodesian Parliament would be recalled this week.

Workshop on Counselling Successful

At Moira Secondary School on Saturday, Nov. 6, an enlightening workshop on Counselling was directed by Miss Jean Graves, Guidance Counsellor, Kingston Collegiate and Vocational School.

The morning session was chaired by Mr. Harold Mott, who introduced Mr. A. E. Orr, Superintendent of Secondary Schools, to the group of thirty teacher-counsellors and public health nurses. Mr. Orr brought greetings from the Bay of Quinte District High School Board and in an inspirational way stressed the responsibilities and the value of guidance workers.

Greetings from the Minister of Education were extended by Mr. David Patterson, the District Guidance Inspector. Mr. Patterson's position is a new one in this area and reflects the growing concern of the Department of Education in the field of guidance services and the recognition of the fact that not only teachers but parents and others in the community want more reality counselling in the schools.

Miss Graves stressed the paramount importance of the counsellor being the type of person who can develop a warm understanding relationship with others. Techniques are secondary, but also necessary, she said, and discussed several, including acceptance, reflection, clarification, reassurance, general leads, probing, interpretation, evaluation and silence. Different theories of counselling were explained and interviews were heard and discussed.

Those in attendance were enthusiastic about the many ideas which were developed during the day. They were represented were: Quinte S.S. — Mrs. Norma Grant, Head of Guidance, Mr. Milton Kerr, Shop Director, and the following counsellors:—Mr. R. Leslie, R. Henderson, J. Hull, Mrs. P. Burris, Miss H. McLachlan. Belleville Collegiate — H. Mott Head of Guidance and Miss R. E. Silvester, Miss K. Morrison, S. Alcorn, Trenton H.S. — F. Rowe, Head of Guidance, G. E. Hills, Mrs. V. Treloar, Prince Edward Collegiate—Mr. R. Perkin, Head of Guidance, and N. Kerr, Centre Hastings S.S. — Mrs. M. Cox, Tweed-Hungerford S.S. — R. J. Gainer, Head of Guidance. Frankford H.S. — J. Empty Garage Badly Damaged

Youngsters burning leaves may have started a fire Saturday that threatened two doctors' offices in downtown Belleville.

Fireman said today two, boys were seen burning a pile of leaves near a double garage behind the offices of Dr. Arthur Horne and G. A. Pearce on Church Street.

The garage — empty at the time — was badly damaged by the fire while the offices and an upstairs millinery shop — were filled with smoke.

The fire was first spotted by two employees of an electrical installation firm as they drove down Victoria Avenue.

Ku Klux Klan Holds Weekend Rallies

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Burning crosses and memorial services highlighted Ku Klux Klan rallies in Rising Sun, Md., Chesapeake, Va., Lebanon, Ohio, and Austin, Tex., during the weekend.

The rally at Rising Sun, the first in Maryland in more than 40 years, drew a crowd Saturday night that reporters estimated at about 2,000.

The rally featured memorial services for Daniel Burros, a New York Klan leader who killed himself when his Jewish background was disclosed, and Matt Murphy Jr., a Klan lawyer from Birmingham, Ala., who was killed in an auto accident.

Last Friday, Georgia Grand Dragon Calvin Craig said a congressional investigation of the Klan in Washington has produced new interest and "a million dollars a day worth of publicity" for the KKK.

Craig's speech, called a success by Exalted Cyclops Royce McPhail, was marked by hecklers and jeers from spectators as the robed Klansmen walked five blocks to the steps of the Rising Sun courthouse. Five men identified as members of the American Nazi Party walked with the Klan group.

When McPhail attempted to read a speech, pandemonium began an impromptu pep rally.

'SUPPORT U.S. POLICY'

A Klan spokesman said the march was staged in support of U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

The Ohio rally Saturday night came after authorities in Dillsboro, Ind., prohibited a gathering in their state with a court order.

Virginia KKK leader Marshall Kornegay, of Chesapeake, Va., N.C., spoke to rallies of about 350 Friday night and 1,500 Saturday night in Lebanon, Ohio, near Chesapeake. Kornegay said the Klan has "got to get back into the public area" by endorsing candidates.

Elsewhere on the racial scene, a Negro farmer died who was shot to death Sunday in Pelahatchie, Miss., a small town 20 miles east of Jackson.

Sheriff T. H. Shivers said Constable Luther E. Stevenson shot Negro, Eddie Cook, 53, was a city sanitation worker.

At Meridian, Miss., a Negro was arrested on charges of shotgun blast into his car. Peter Johnson, 56, was hit in the head and face by the blast, motors said. Johnson said the blast came from a passing auto.

At Fayetteville, N.C., two Negro marines charged with terrorizing residents of Cumberland County, told officers they were members of the National Abolition Forces organization.

They were tracked down in a wooded area late Saturday night. The heavily armed men were identified as Ernest Jones Jr. and Warren F. Arsad.

Italy's Moro On Visit to Yugoslavia

BELGRADE (Reuters) — Italian Premier Aldo Moro arrived here today for a four-day visit to Yugoslavia—the first by an Italian premier since Yugoslavia was created 50 years ago.

The visit was designed to strengthen the friendship between the two neighboring countries.

Yugoslav Prime Minister Petar Stambolic laid a welcoming party of government officials at the airport for Moro and other Italian government members.

Later today the Italian premier planned to begin talks with Stambolic and other government officials. Tuesday he meets President Tito.

Last month, Italian President Giuseppe Saragat visited Belgrade, and there are confirmed reports that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko may visit Rome early next year.

The parties — Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democratic — fielded sufficient candidates to achieve that goal, the others depending on the return of a minority government to make their influence felt.

All told, 1,011 candidates seek the 265 — a year Commons seats, down 12 from the record in 1963.

HAVE FULL SLATES

The Liberals under Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and the Conservatives led by John Diefenbaker have full slates of 265 and the NDP 253. Social Credit entered 86 hopefuls and the Creditistes 77 while another 23 candidates are running under an assortment of independent or other labels.

When Mr. Pearson came to power in 1963 after almost six years of Conservative rule, the Liberals won 129 seats, Conservatives 95, Social Credit 24 and New Democrats 17.

A dissolution of Parliament in september, the Commons standing was: Liberals 127, Conservatives 92, NDP 18, Creditistes 13, Social Credit 3, Independents 2, vacancies 4.

There were six women in the last House, one of them elected in a byelection since the 1963 vote. In today's election, the number of women candidates is down to 37 from 43 last time.

The leaders are all up their home constituencies for the campaign, the prime minister at his pleasant Harrington Lake retreat in Quebec's Gatineau area, Mr. Pearson, seeking re-election in Northern Ontario's Algoma East, is in Ottawa, Mr. Diefenbaker in Prince Albert (Sask.), the NDP's T. C. Douglas in Burnaby-Coquitlam near Vancouver, Real Caouette of the Creditistes in Quebec's western Quebec Villeneuve constituency and Social Credit's Robert Thompson in Alberta's Red Deer riding.

WANTS MAJORITY

In calling the election this year instead of waiting for the completion in 1966 of the 15-year revision of constituency boundaries in 13 years, Mr. Pearson gave one reason: The need for majority government.

While other issues cropped up and then died out in the campaign, the prime minister stuck with his plea for a majority to the end. He said Canada is entering a period of domestic as well as international affairs where a strong central government is necessary. Difficult decisions had to be made. Only a majority has the greater and faster with a majority government.

Mr. Diefenbaker, and other leaders to a lesser extent, made scandal a major issue, piling Mr. Pearson, Mr. Pearson and two have been joined by Mr. Douglas, 61, and Mr. Thompson, 54, as heads of the main slates.

The only new party leader is 48 - year - old Real Caouette, whose Creditistes pulled out of the Thompson-led Social Credit party not long after the 1963 election.

CAOUETTE IS PROBLEM

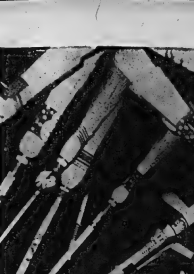
The emergence of Mr. Caouette as a force in Quebec federal politics thwarted Mr. Diefenbaker and then Mr. Pearson in their bids for majority control of the Commons in the last two elections. As deputy Social Credit leader, he led his party to victory in 26 of Quebec's 75 seats in 1962 and in 20 in the next year.

In the last election, the Liberals won 20 of the 33 seats in the four Atlantic provinces, the Conservatives 13.

Quebec gave 47 of its 75 MPs to the Liberals, eight to the Conservatives and the rest to Social Credit. Of the latter 20, all are seeking re-election — 13 in Quebec, five as independents and two as Conservatives.

The Liberals won more seats in Ontario in 1963 than in their traditional Quebec bastion, taking 56 of the 85 at stake. The Conservatives won 27, the NDP six.

In the West, it was a different story. The Conservatives won 41 of the 48 Prairie seats, giving the Liberals three and the NDP and Social Credit two each.



NDP LEADS

In British Columbia, the NDP led with nine seats, followed by the Liberals with seven, Conservatives three and Social Credit with two. The two seats in the Northwest Territories and Yukon were taken by Conservatives.

In asking for a majority, Mr. Pearson made a special plea to western voters to give him a broad base of support. For Mr. Diefenbaker, a big challenge besides Quebec province was to win again in the country's two biggest cities—in 1963 he was shut out of the 18 Toronto-area seats and took only one of the 16 in Montreal. Of the rest combined 29 seats, Liberals won all but three.

In the final analysis, Quebec and Ontario with a joint total of 160 seats have more than enough to provide a parliamentary majority to a party winning heavily there and respectably elsewhere.

Results of the armed services vote, taken Nov. 1 to 6, will be announced next Saturday. This vote has been heavily pro-Liberal in recent elections, running to 70.5 per cent in their favor in 1963. It has changed the civilian verdict in one or two seats in each election since 1957, each time for Liberals.

The first ballots in this election were cast at the advance poll Oct. 30 and Nov. 1. The turnout was heavy in areas where the hunting season opened today, light to moderate elsewhere. An estimated 80,000-odd electors cast advance ballots, which will be counted after polls close tonight.

Spinelli and the fifth spot went to Mr. and Mrs. Moe White and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Webster.

The two-game high winner was Mr. and Mrs. Ben Corke, Ray Swansburg and Mrs. Laura Tarkabetery, while the one-game high was won by the president, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Pinder and Mr. and Mrs. Betty Weymark.

The lee was exceptionally fast with the exception of one draw when the ice machine quit functioning but repairs were soon made and the boys and girls showed fine form for so early in the season. The men's section gets into action tonight with the first games of a draw that will continue until the week before Christmas.

Sukarno Will Reluctantly Ban Reds

SINGAPORE (AP)—Fulfilling a wish of his army, President Sukarno of Indonesia was reported Sunday reluctantly to be considering outlawing Indonesia's pro - Chinese Communist party. But he warned in an address to his cabinet that Indonesia without communism cannot be united.

Whoever tries to crush communism in Indonesia, Sukarno told the wahinet, is like a man biting iron—"his teeth will be broken."

Sukarno spoke to the cabinet at Bogor Saturday but the final part of his speech, on the Communists, was not broadcast by Jakarta radio until Sunday. Bogor is about 40 miles outside Jakarta.

Since the Oct. 1 coup attempt by pro-Communist and Communist elements, the Indonesian Army has been cracking down on the Indonesian Communist party, regarded as the largest in the world outside the camp of Communist countries.

Sukarno has been reluctant to do so. One of the reasons is that he wants to maintain friendly ties with China. The party fit into his government as part of what he calls Nasakom — a telescoped title meaning co-operation among nationalist, religious and Communist groups.

Sukarno accused the Indonesian Communist party of "stupidity" in letting itself become involved in the coup attempt. The Indonesian Army has claimed it has found documents that the coup, announced as one to protect Sukarno from right-ists, actually was aimed eventually at his assassination and the raising of Communist chief D. N. Aidit to power.

Informants in Jakarta said Sukarno will dissolve the Communist party but will do so only under a program for the dissolution of all political parties. Then the plan would be to create a single government - controlled political organization, the informants said.

in Viet Nam, because "the exclusion of China and two Viet Nams prevents our organization from playing any positive role in this question."

The assembly is debating an item tilled "Restoration of the lawful rights of the People's Republic of China in the United Nations." It was submitted by the Communist and non-aligned countries.

Death Toll 150 In Nigerian Election Riots

LAGOS (AP)—Western Nigeria's death toll in a month of election violence climbed today to an estimated 75 to 150. At least 18 persons were reported killed during the weekend, 11 of them in one bloody outbreak near Ijebu.

Nineteen others, including four policemen, were injured in the incident.

Among the weekend dead were several policemen, at least one tribal chief and a judge who was hacked to death with hatchets.

Authorities have refused to announce casualty figures but unofficial estimates now set the toll as high as 151 dead.

The violence began after the United Progressive Grand Alliance charged vote fraud and began demonstrating after the Nigerian National Democratic party won control of the legislature.

46 Fatalities Across Canada Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic was the cause of most of the 46 accidental deaths in Canada during the weekend. Ontario accounted for 16 of the lamentable causes; the other 42 died on the roads.

The Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday, local times, showed Ontario with 15 traffic victims in addition to a man killed by a train and a four-year-old girl killed when she fell into a bathtub at her home.

Manitoba was next with eight road deaths followed by Quebec with six. That province also reported a man killed in a hunting accident and a farmer killed when trapped under a tractor.

New Brunswick reported five highway deaths and Nova Scotia and Newfoundland each had two. Prince Edward Island reported no accidental deaths.

Saskatchewan and Alberta each had a traffic death while British Columbia reported two persons killed in traffic.

Labor Rules By Majority Of One Vote

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson faces the opening of a new session of Parliament Tuesday with his Labor party reduced to a one-vote majority. The death of Labor member Henry Solomons Sunday dropped the number of Labor seats in the House of Commons to 313, against 303 held by the Conservatives and nine by the Liberals.

There are two vacancies. One of these will be decided Thursday at Erith, southeast of the capital. Labor won the seat at the last year's election by a margin of 9,555 votes and expects to win it again.

But the Conservatives are planning to make it a tough fight. They are hoping for another big anti-Labor election. At Leyton, east London, last year, a Labor majority of nearly 8,000 was turned into a Conservative victory by 205 votes. That was against Patrick Gordon Walker, the man Wilson wanted as his foreign secretary.

The Conservatives feel that a lot of the Labor votes cast Erith last time were cast on a personal basis for Norman Dodds, who represented the district for 10 years until his recent death.

The Laborites are leaving nothing to chance. They are sending an impressive array of 14 government ministers to the district to whip up support for Labor candidate, 39-yeraid Jim Wellbeloved.

FACES TOUGH FUTURE

If the Tories do win Erith, then Wilson will face a tough problem. His majority will have disappeared—his party will only be able to hold it by narrow margins until last year's national election, Solomons narrowly won the seat.

A 1.25-per-cent swing to the Conservatives could win them the seat again when the byelection is held to find a successor to Solomons.

Wilson is faced with the prospect that if he loses both Erith and North Hull, the combined opposition will be able to overturn the huge Labor majority. On a vote of confidence, the Labor government could be defeated.

If Wilson's party wins Erith and loses North Hull, it would be left only a one-vote majority—and then pressure for an early election would be so great that it would be almost certain to come by the spring.

India Faces Famine

Much has been said and written about the population explosion and the spectre of starvation that haunts so many millions of people in the world—among them countless numbers holding on to only a tenuous existence, as well as generations as yet unborn.

We on this continent who enjoy the bounty of the earth, and produce such massive harvests that we can afford to sell large surpluses to the Soviet Union and China have no real conception of the suffering that exists in large areas of the Asian continent. We are lucky to have been born in this or other lands of comparable wealth.

Yet, as if the future and all that it may mean in terms of even greater poverty and hunger were not enough to contemplate there is ample evidence of the problem right now. India, for example, is facing a serious famine.

That this is an old problem in India does not mitigate its seriousness. Crash programs to increase food production have been announced, but Food Minister Chidambara Subramanian has said that even if these are successful food-grain production will fall a million tons short of last year's record harvest.

In one stark sentence he revealed the essence of India's dilemma: "There are," he said, "10,000,000 more mouths to feed this year."

While making it clear India is aiming at self-sufficiency in food production (in view of past experience and its rapidly increasing population, this would seem like an impossible goal) the minister said he hopes the present supply of U.S. surplus wheat on a month-to-month basis would be replaced by arrangements extending over a longer period.

He also expressed appreciation of wheat aid from Canada but added, "we would like to have more assistance from Canada." The minister said last year's aid from this country totalled "less than $10,000,000 worth."

In view of India's size and having regard to its teeming population, such aid might indeed seem comparatively small. It is quite likely we could spare more to help our Commonwealth brethren in Asia.

Textile Industry

Canadians are the world's second largest per capita users of textiles and the Canadian industry occupies a strong position on the manufacturing scene in this country, according to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

In its periodic survey of the commercial scene, the bank says that consumption of textiles in Canada has increased significantly in recent years. A total of 35 Canadian producers have already had difficulty achieving a substantial export volume because of high costs of production, emphasis on superior Canadian workmanship helped to sell some $60 million worth of textiles abroad in 1964. This represented about seven per cent of the value of total output.

Always vulnerable to the cheaper product from overseas, the industry has remained competitive through extensive modernization of plants and research.

The bank survey predicts that demand for textiles in Canada will increase about 50 per cent over the next decade, and expansion may provide about 20,000 more jobs. Automated spinning techniques are expected to play a big part in future production, as well as the production of new, high-quality lines with special appeal to the more affluent consumer at home and abroad.

One sphere in which Canadian textiles are second to none is in the manufacture of winter sportswear. The high quality and distinctive design put into skiing outfits have found wide acceptance overseas.

Computer Troubles

Trained computer programmers are as scarce as psychiatrists. This is borne out by the sorry experience of the Hastings County Assessment Commissioner's department, as well as Belleville city hall, after some of their office work was farmed out to an Ottawa data processing firm.

At the county building, not only were assessment rolls not returned from Ottawa when promised, they were incorrect. At city hall the staff had to work overtime to prepare by hand voters' lists which the Ottawa firm failed to process in the time estimated.

In fairness to the Ottawa firm, it seems the programmers were being given too much to do and were even working 24 hours at a stretch. Moreover, assessment rolls are new in this sphere of automation and errors were to be expected.

Hastings County Assessment Commissioner J. C. Jevons says he has been assured the programming "bugs" have now been straightened out.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 9th, 1945

The Belleville Industrial Commission at its last meeting dealt with a number of matters of public interest and of importance to the future development of the city.

It has been realized for some time that there are very few tracts of land of any considerable acreage within the city limits that are sufficiently spacious for the location of a modern industry of any large proportion. The problem of incorporating a very considerable additional acreage from the suburban area was discussed at some length. Because of difficulties and misunderstandings about the actual dimensions and the boundaries of the lands that had been designated as industrial sites, it was decided to request the Council to have the City Engineer's department make a survey of all such sites within the city that had been previously designated and that these should be forwarded to the City Solicitor to be certified.

At the regular weekly evening meeting of the Y's Men's Club, which was held in the YMCA, a "Seth Parker" gathering in true Jonesport atmosphere was conducted. The old fashioned hymns were sung, duets were rendered, all in the fashion of Seth Parker himself. Captain Lloyd Marshall occupied the chair in the absence of president Jack Marshall. Dawson Boyd was song leader and he ably assisted Russ McKenzie in the presentation of the program. Dawson Boyd and Russ McKenzie sang a spiritual with Bert Houston as piano accompanist.

The arrival of the 80th Battalion nearly an hour ahead of time upset all calculations. The city authorities intended to give a welcome to Lt. - Col. Ketchison and the officers and men of the 80th and the committee on their arrival here to enter winter quarters, and citizens expected to meet them at the station at one p.m. However, for some reason or other the train arrived earlier than expected, and by 12:30 p.m. the battalion had reached Front Street and proceeded at once to the barracks on South Pinnacle Street.

Dent in Male Preserve!

Calgary Herald

Madame Madeleine, an 82-year-old Paris florist, is credited with being the innovator of a fad which sees women sending flowers to men, instead of the other way around.

According to this venerable sage, "men need the soothing effects of posies more than ever in order to sweeten their lives and dispositions."

Is nothing sacred any more? After all, it has always been the male's prerogative to dispatch flowers to his amour. But now, French girls are being encouraged to send flowers to their boyfriends.

This sort of trend, if carried too far, can make the hapless male very confused about his place in society. In North America, it is common nowadays for husbands to help with the dishes and the housework. Even that once impregnable male fortress, the pool room, is being invaded by women. And now, France—that alleged pace-setter in affairs of the heart — is the scene of a development in which men are discouraged from practising the honored habit of wooing their sweethearts with posies; instead, the females are being encouraged to do the wooing.

The next horrible step in this evolution? Probably it will see men, stepping out to formal functions, with massive flowery corsages pinned on their coats by doting girl-friends and wives. Or the male, on his wedding day, proceeding down the church aisle carrying a great bouquet of flowers. What happened to masculine pride?

Crowd Stood By—Mocking

Kingston Whig-Standard

The great beast lay there, lin the back of the truck. Proud antlers touching the ground, Eyes closed. Swollen, purpled tongue hanging limply from the dead-clamped lips. Rear legs jutting stiffly over the sideWalk. Hooves mottled with dried blood. A great, proud master of the forest no more.

And the passersby. They stop, fascinated. They smile. They laugh. They touch. They marvel at man's mastery over the animal. They lift its head. They run their hands over the drooping rack. Their faces show elation, pride. There is no hint of sorrow in the faces at the passing of a majestic animal. They have been in the kill. They've been happy. Some sound sad when they speak; but only because head-up they tell children how fast or to see the dead thing.

After all, it was only a dead moose; the victim of the successful hunter; he legally killed. That it was a creature born to the wilds, endowed for majesty in the wooded glades, treated as king among beasts, Man had decreed that it must die.

And the crowd at the streetcorner policeman laughed and cheered.

Milk Earns Top Revenue

Windsor Star

Were the average citizen to be asked what is the largest income earner in Canadian farming, he reply most likely would be wheat. That answer would be wrong. The dairy industry is greater.

As of last year $531,000,000 was earned from the sale of dairy cows and calves — or the most valuable total of $731,000,000. Even this is not all, as it ignores the receipts from the sale of dairy cow breeding purposes.

There is another aspect of this. The dairy industry gives employment to far more people than does wheat growing. This includes those on farms, in the dairies, creameries and cheese factories, as well as in the retail trade.

It is all very well to talk of Canada being one of the world's big breadstuffs. It also is a huge milk bottle.

Good Old Days?

Toronto Star

The veil was lifted on an interesting bit of Toronto social history in the course of the current argument over liquor outlets in West Toronto.

William Temple, chairman of the West Toronto Inter-Church Cooperation Federation, recalled the days 70 years ago when cattle drovers came into the district, downed a few drinks at the local saloons and got into fights with railway hands.

"They had some of the worst orgies and fights ever staged in Toronto," he said. "I've lived in has been dry ever since. I don't think we want to turn the clock back."

We sympathize with Mr. Temple in the local option issue, but his fears about this particular chapter of the past re opening seem a bit exagerated. Most railwaymen today are pillars of society and any surviving drovers must be a bit old for fights, let alone orgies.

Canadian Flag Is Favored

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir - A very well - meaning friend or neighbor has drawn my attention to a letter Mr. Burton Thompson wrote to your paper concerning our National flag and Liberal government.

This letter will not have big guns and may look funny but it is my only way of answering Mr. Thompson. I am not angry at his letter but it made me realize just how much disrespect people have for our country and heritage.

The only thing that made me angry was the picture of Lee Grills because I think education is vital in this day and age.

I also know from personal contact with Robert Temple that he is very interested in young couples, their families in enthusiasm and they hang it home and if possible to help them do it on their own. I might add my family and myself are protestants.

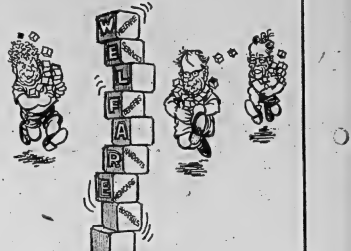
Mr. Thompson should go into the Liberal committee rooms and I am sure Mr. Temple would be very happy to correct him about our flag.

In one breath of Canadian air we are worrying about our children and teenagers and their disrespect for their elders and what not and in the next breath, we their parents, are openly refusing to our Canadian flag as a show of respect stylized onion bag. I myself agree with Mr. Thompson when he says the Canadian flag, as a matter of fact we do not deserve Canada. We are taught to honor and love our country. What a beautiful sight it would be if we would honor and obey our country for our government no matter which party wins. It is not our government that should have arrogance but the people of this fair country, myself included.

To sum it all up let us all go to the polls and vote for the party we want. We can't all win but we can make a mockery of our freedom, flag or country but just do our best to be deserving Canadians.

Mrs. Ames Thompson.
No relation to Burton Thompson.

Horses Stage US Comeback



Sakal John Telegraph-Journal

Ten years ago, the horse population of the United States was down to a little more than three million. Today it totals between six and seven million, according to the Morris Animal Foundation of Denver.

This is an interesting statistic. Just when it appeared the internal combustion engine was about to irrevocably down Dobbin to extinction, horses began to make a comeback.

Horses aren't used for pulling wagons or working farms so much any more, but they have become, in a big way, pets of the world of companion animals. They have become many people's best friends and they are having a profound effect on a number of human activities.

Penn State University now offers a course in horse-shoeing to help alleviate a shortage of blacksmiths. Saddlery and other horse accoutrements are selling better than they have in years.

Weakness Symptom Of Low Blood Sugar

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What are the symptoms of "low blood sugar" the cause and the treatment? Would early morning and late afternoon weakness be a sign of it? I am a woman of 60 and have this type of weakness which prostrates me for half an hour or so, with rapid pulse and heart palpitation.

Would a test have to be taken during one of these attacks for it to show low blood sugar? — Mrs. M. M.

The symptoms you recite could fit the picture for low blood sugar, but this condition can manifest itself in many ways, so it's better to be sure than to jump to conclusions.

It is true that a blood sugar test taken during one of these weak spells would be enlightening, but since that can't always be done, a much better course is a sugar tolerance test.

This is a series of tests taken over a period of six hours, to show the degree of rise and fall, if any, in the blood sugar, and gives a very useful picture of how your system supplies and uses up its blood sugar.

The ordinary procedure is to have the patient eat a liberal diet, including a substantial amounts of carbohydrate, for three days before this test is made.

There is no single cause of low blood sugar. Our individual differences in metabolic rate, our eating habits, our degree of nervous tension all are common factors, and all of these in turn must be aimed at the dominant factors in any given case.

One frequent misconception is that people should eat sugar to combat this "low blood sugar" condition. That isn't so, because such doses of sugar stimulate the pancreas, which in turn pours up its rate of insulin production. This speeds up the utilization of sugar, and you have a sort of roller coaster effect, sugar rising rapidly, then plunging to a very low level.

The better way is to get more protein in the meals, since this will release its sugar content more gradually, and help hold the average sugar level more steady.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a boy 15 and interested in contact lenses, but my parents are against the idea. Can you give me some pros and cons? Can they damage the eyes? Are they a good buy? — L. N.

Arguments for contacts: They' do a good job. They won't damage the eyes, unless they cause undue irritation, in which case you would stop wearing them. They are especially good for special purposes — for actors, some athletes, models who don't want to wear glasses, and so on.

Arguments against: The cost — and if you are going to have treatments, rich want an expert job of fitting. Some individuals find they cannot wear contacts for more than a relatively short period at a time. If a lens is lost, it can be difficult to find and expensive to replace if not found. Discuss the situation thoroughly with your eye doctor before going ahead.

Dear Dr. Molner: How do you find out if you have a pin worm? I eat so much and never gain any weight, and have a lot of distress in my lower colon. — V. P. D.

Five types of tapeworm are common in the United States, all round worm, which can cause colicky pain; hookworm, prevalent mainly in the South, which causes diarrhea and anemia; and beef, pork and fish tapeworms. (There are many other kinds found elsewhere in the world.)

The sure method of diagnosis is finding eggs (or segments of the worms) in the stool; hence several stool examinations should be made. If no sign is found, your doctor must look for some other cause.

New Yorkers Put Up With a Lot

By Sydney J. Harris

During a sermon at the Community Church in New York last month, the Rev. Donald Herrington told his congregation that the city of New York "is running out of water, running out of air, running out of space, running out of beauty, running out of jobs, running out of money and credit, and running out of patience."

Most of this litany is true, and could be said with equal truth of most other American cities. What is not true, at least of New York, is that the denizens are running out of patience. Sad to say, they are not: they are simply resigned.

It is incredible what the citizens of New York will put up with in the way of sleazy service, rude officialdom, impossible traffic, mismanagement of civic affairs, dirt, discomfort, and an expensiveness in living that threatens to take off for the stratosphere.

The richest city in America is nearly broke. Nobody but a madman would volunt rily drive a car into Manhattan. Hotel rooms are nearly impossible to get during convention weeks. Central Park can be used at night only with guard dogs. The air pollution is equal to smoking two packages of cigarets every day.

The continuing flight to the suburbs has turned the core city into a bleak contrast of extremes — rich and poor, with a dwindling middle-class. The non-working population, which at least afford to pay taxes, flees the city — thus increasing its expenses and diminishing its revenues at the same time.

Throughout all this, the people are passive — the most affluent, educated, sophisticated public in the country stands for abuses and erosions that would inflame the rustics of any hamlet in America. They put up with miserable schools, inadequate police protection, chaotic transportation, shockingly high prices, minimal living space at maximum rentals, political mediocrity, and the probability of an explosion in Harlem that would make Watts, California, look like a Sunday school picnic.

This is the same city of immense private and corporate wealth, of the largest buildings, biggest budget, highest per capita income, and a mayor whose duties and responsibilities are second only to the President of the United States. New York is indeed running out of everything — except patience. It is the sucker city of America, where every year everybody gets less and less for more and more and still jeers at the rest of the country as boobs.

Jaycees Volunteer for "Operation Mop-up"

Planning strategy for "Operation United Appeal Mop-up" are from left, Alex McLeod and Dick Chapman of the Jaycees, Ed McKinney, vice-chairman of the United Appeal Campaign, and LeRoy Parfitt, president of the Jaycees. A special committee of Jaycees has volunteered to do the final campaign clean-up this week.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is cleaning-up for the United Appeal... that is, they are collecting the final outstanding accounts.

A special committee of Jaycees, headed by President LeRoy Parfitt, gathered at United Appeal Headquarters today to plan "Operation United Appeal Mop-up."

The committee will make about 35 calls, mostly commercial calls in Canniffon, Corbyville and Rossmore.

Jaycees have also volunteered to handle the difficult task of reaching Belleville commercial establishments who during the campaign received kits from canvassers with a promise to donate to the campaign and who have not yet sent in their donations. There are many such prospective donors who have failed to complete their returns and United Appeal Headquarters asks their co-operation in making returns as soon as possible.

The Jaycees did not take on an enviable job, but it is a necessary and important one. They are to be commended for their fine showing.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—Prices remained mixed while the volume climbed higher in morning trading today at the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Among industrials, Aluminum attracted most of the attention after the United States announced during the weekend that it will release 200,000 tons of stockpiled aluminium in 1966. The American government said the measure was designed to relieve price pressures and called aluminium industry's recent price increase "inflationary". Shares of Aluminium slipped a point to 32.

Laura Secord was another featured issue, gaining ¼ to a record 23¾. Gains also went to Massey - Ferguson and Steleo, each picking up ¼ to 33¾ and 27⅝, and Price was ahead ¼ to 40 while Shell slipped ¼ to 20.

Bank stocks were mixed with Toronto - Dominion moving up ⅛ to 62, Bank Scotia losing ⅛ to 71¼ and Montreal was unchanged at 60¼.

In primary metals Comiuco, Noranda, and Inco were all ahead ¼ to 53¾, 53¾ and 102 respectively. However Falconbridge lost ¼ at 108½.

Speculative issues were actively traded with D'Eldona up four to 45 cents, Nisto ½ to 21 cents and Place eased five cents to 145.

On index, industrials were off .23 to 171.50, base metals .10 to 66.96 and the TSE .17 to 161.50. Golds were up 1.60 to 160.29 and western oils .29 to 103.78. Volume at 11 p.m. was 1,341,000 shares compared with 1,630,000 at the same time Friday.

Yacht Built For Perth Man Being Sought

LONDON (CP)—A company liquidator is reported searching Atlantic ports for the Canadian-owned Trimaran Tryptich, the world's biggest three - hulled yacht built by a British firm which has gone into bankruptcy.

Because of an alleged unpaid bill, creditors hope to seize the Tryptich and sell it to provide more funds for the liquidated construction firm, Multihull Services Ltd. of Wadebridge, Cornwall.

The big yacht was built for Matt Burpee, a retired Perth, Ont., dairy farmer who planned to use it for charter work in the Caribbean.

Amid a dispute over construction costs, Burpee, accompanied by his wife and two teenage children, sailed the Tryptich from Cornwall last May. The yacht has been traced to Spain, Liberia and the Canary Islands, but its current whereabouts are unknown.

David Senior, Multihull's managing director, maintains that because of rising costs, the construction bill came to £43,000 (£129,000) and Burpee paid only £22,000 ($66,000).

Last spring Burpee said the cost claims were ridiculous. When he ordered the yacht, the price quoted was £17,000 ($51,000). This went up to £20,000, then £22,000. When the construction firm kept pressing for more money, Burpee said he was not satisfied, adding that he placed the issue in the hands of lawyers before leaving Britain.

A spokesman for Multihull's creditors said that if the Tryptich can be found, a writ will be issued to seal the yacht "over Burpee's head."

Burpee was last reported to have left the Canary Islands Sept. 27, heading for Nassau.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

THOMASBURG GROUP COMMITTEE

THOMASBURG — The regular meeting of Thomasburg Boy Scout group committee took place on Wednesday evening, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Geen with 14 present.

Mrs. Marion Morton and Don Geen will attend a meeting of the session of Thomasburg United Church to bring the matter of the use of the church hall for Scout and Cub meetings to the attention of that body.

Scoutmaster William Geen reported three meetings of the Scouts in the I.O.O.F. hall with attendance ranging from nine to 12 boys. Nine boys took part in a hike to the park on Sunday.

A ball game with Plainfield Troop was played under the supervision of Don Fraser in October. The need for the election of new Patrol Leaders and for ordering of new badges and signal flags was brought to the attention of the group.

Commissioner Allan Howell reported five new Cubs, who are enthusiastic about their work.

The president, James Secklings, welcomed Mrs. Marion Morton and Mrs. Joyce Fisher, representing Crescent Rebekah Lodge, sponsors of the Scouts and Cubs. He reported that 22 Scouts and 17 Cubs were registered this year.

Commissioner Howell was appointed chairman of a committee to plan for a variety night in March when members of the group attended the district banquet at Bonarlaw at which special entertainment was provided by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Russell.

Assistant Cubmaster Anne Howell reported that the Christmas cards are selling well. She offered the use of her home for a social evening for the group in December.

Signs Indicate Heavy Atlantic Poll Turnout

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Voting across Eastern Canada in the federal election waned early today with indications in the Atlantic provinces of a heavy turnout while Quebec voters reported voting light to moderate.

Polls opened at 8 a.m. and close at 7 p.m. local standard time.

More substantial reports were expected after 1 p.m.

In the Atlantic provinces there were reports from many areas of early turnouts larger than in the April 8, 1963, federal election.

Clear skies with seasonal temperatures in the 30s and 40s were reported in almost all areas of the four provinces.

In Ontario, light rain was reported in most areas with fog in the southern section and some snow in Northern Ontario.

In Quebec, the weather was mainly sunny and cool with snow flurries expected in some areas later in the day.

Drivers Protest Meeting of Own Shop Stewards

TORONTO (CP) — Dissident members of the International Teamsters' Union (Ind.) have who led an 11 - day wildcat strike last month against major trucking companies in southwestern Ontario, set up picket lines Sunday to protest the meeting of their own shop stewards.

The 128 stewards met in the Toronto Coliseum to hear leaders to prepare for a general membership meeting next Sunday. About 60 pickets marched for one hour outside the headquarters before withdrawing.

A spokesman for the pickets said they were dissatisfied with the work of the union negotiating committee which arranged the recent settlement with the Motor Transport Industrial Relations Bureau, representing the trucking firms.

He said the rebels may take over next Sunday's meeting unless their demands are met. One demand is for the removal of Kenneth McDougall, chairman of the negotiating committee, which represents 9,000 union members.

After removing the pickets, the stewards held their own meeting to work out the resolution they'll present to the general membership meeting. Mr. McDougall's removal.

Reached at his home in Oshawa, Mr. McDougall dismissed the incident, describing the rebels as "kooks and Communists."

Thomasburg

FRANKFORD — The sympathy of the district is extended to the bereaved relatives of Mrs. George Walker, a former resident of Thomasburg, whose funeral took place in Trenton last Friday with interment in Thomasburg cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Morton and family, Miss Betty Benson and Mr. John Reid were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Johnson and family at Stirling.

A crowd of nearly 400 patronized the turkey supper sponsored by the U.C.W. of Thomasbury United Church in the church hall on Wednesday evening.

The pupils of Thomasburg school enjoyed a holiday last Thursday while the teachers attended the annual convention.

Commencement Exercises Held At District High School

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford High School held its annual commencement exercises on Friday evening, November 5th when a capacity crowd attended.

The processional was ushered in with music from C.D.H.S. school band. The invocation was given by Captain William Wilson of the Salvation Army Campbellford. L. S. Caswell addressed the students and made the introductions.

In his remarks to the students principal Caughill urged the graduating class to have a purpose, to establish a code of ethics and take definite action to reach a goal. He paid high tribute to the graduating class.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

The valedictory address was given by Robert Palliser who said "As we meet here tonight we have mixed feelings of nostalgia and pride. The dream of Grade 13, that goal for which we strived during five long years, has finally become a reality. We realize that the road has not always been a difficult one and yet we know we could never have done it alone for it is many who are responsible for our success, symbolized by this ceremony. Our teachers deserve credit as I have developed an enthusiasm for our own work, our class and our school. They were always willing to give us extra time and attention, often at the sacrifice of their own leisure time. Our parents provided the patience, love and understanding that we greatly needed during these years. Words alone can never express the gratitude we feel for them, but perhaps our achievement in sight and our attainments in the future will in some measure convey our thankyou for their trust and faith in us."

EVALUATE CERTIFICATES

Each of us must carefully evaluate the Grade 13 certificate awarded here tonight. What was the purpose of all our efforts? Why did each one so hard to fulfill the requirements? Two responses immediately jump to my mind.

The more obvious is that this document is the passport to our future whether it be in the business field, or in the extension of education. With this key we may unlock the doors to institutions of higher learning . . . doors incidentally, forever closed to the high school dropout.

The second value which persists itself to me is the general basic background which Grade 13 provides in an extremely wide range of subjects. I feel certain that the teachers will admit that a good proportion of the detail which each pupil can faithfully, or not so faithfully memorized, will not be retained. Only a few will retain the knowledge of learning it? The self discipline necessary to learn the facts however, is to apply ourselves. But this is not the only merit. The basic theme of each course will not be forgotten. We have a general foundation on which to build our future education.

In parting tonight, for we will all leave for our careers or further education in universities, hospitals, teachers' colleges, I wish to leave a thought for you, the graduates, to consider. This legacy of training and education is not free. We have a debt to repay for our success. I urge you to continue your efforts so that the debt may be fully repaid and the rewards of success may be realized."

GUEST SPEAKER

Guest speaker of the evening was M. Paul Dumont-Prentice, public relations officer, French network, C.B.C. introduced by French teacher, Ar. T. Connell, M.A. and thanked by graduate Douglas Grant, now a student at Guelph University

Monsieur Dumont - Frenette began his address by quoting from Charles Dickens, "The Tale of Two Cities" He said the same condition exists in the world today, the world has not changed, there is everything to hope for and everything to worry about.

"We have just completed a year devoted to peace, we still have wars and unrest. Adults have not given the young generation what they are entitled to. The generations over the years have built a country of riches and expanded natural resources and it is now the challenge of the young generation to pass on another generation a better legacy than they received because every generation brings something worth while to the world.

The United Nations is trying to unite all mankind in a peaceful world for a perfect total, Africa and the Far East must be included. The challenge to the graduating class was to make a better world than they inherited.

Study Guild Hears Talk on Newspapers

The October meeting of the Belleville Women's Study Guild was held at the home of Mrs. A. D. Arnoldi, with the subject of the evening "The Use of Newspapers in Our Continuing Education," presented by Mrs. S. C. Else.

A brief business meeting was conducted by the Guild president, Mrs. R. Rollon. Plans were made to collect gifts at the next meeting to be forwarded through the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association to women patients at the Cobourg Hospital. A letter was read from the local Member of Parliament in response to a communication sent by him to the Study Guild.

The suggestion had been made as a result of discussions at an earlier meeting, that the government set up a central fund for compensation of those Samaritans of the road who help road accident victims and then find themselves in legal and financial difficulties as a result. This suggestion was well received by the member, and will be brought before the appropriate committee.

The devotional part for the evening was taken by Mrs. R. Settle, with the theme of learning and wisdom.

HISTORY OF NEWSPAPERS

Mrs. Else began her presentation of newspapers by asking the group how much if really knew about the local newspaper —how many columns did it have? Which were the predicated articles? She then went on to give a brief history of newspapers, and the benefits to continuing education which may be reaped by their daily perusal. The "skim and skip" reading system was recommended for good assimilation of current where time is at a premium.

It is estimated that if you spend just 15 minutes a day, six days a week, reading the daily paper, you are reading well over a million words a year —do this and you are bound to reap some educational benefit. News sources are many and varied, and the function and operation of each and the more well known news services was explained.

EXCELLENT CHARTS

The current trend to the use of newspapers in the classroom was underlined by excellent charts each featuring newspaper clippings on a different subject—the Political Scene, Religion, Mathematics, Art, Humor, Geography, Business, to name a new. These charts had been made up in connection with a seminar, at Nicholson High School, and Sister M. Veronette very kindly made them available to Mrs. Else for use at the Study Guild. Much interest centred around this display, which illustrated so graphically the value of newspapers in education. Hostesses for the evening, Mrs. K. Daley and Mrs. H. C. Wylie, served refreshments as members rounded out the evening with further discussion of the fascinating subject of news and newspapers.

As a follow-up to this most interesting program, two large groups of Study Guild members have since accepted the invitation of The Intelligencer to tour the newspaper plant and offices, and these tours have proved most enjoyable and enlightening.

INTERVIEW GOES AWRY

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) — Broke and jobless, Jim Scott, 32, applied to the government National Assistance Board for aid. All he got was more debts. An interview with an official ended in an argument. Scott grabbed the official's tie and held on so firmly that it took a policeman with a pair of scissors to separate them. Scott didn't get any money. Instead, he was fined $30 for assault.

MR. AND MRS. WILBERT A. WHITEMAN

Whiteman – Scrutton

Linda Marie Scrutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scrutton of Madoc, and Wilbert Andrew Whiteman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whiteman, also of Madoc, were united in marriage by Rev. David Potter in Trinity United Church, Madoc on Saturday, October-30, 1965, at 2.00 p.m. The organist was Mrs. Emma Reid.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white Chantilly lace with a fitted bodice, scoop neckline and lily point sleeves. Her large full skirt featured back detail of a V-design of Chantilly lace panels. A rhinestone comb held her mantilla type shoulder length veil of silk illusion, and she carried a white Bible crested with pink and white carnations.

Mrs. Beverley Derry, maid of honor, Miss Sharon Holden and Miss Joan Hamilton, bridesmaids, were attired identically in floor length gowns of jade peau de soie with matching lily point cuffs and wedding ring headpieces with matching veils. Each carried a bouquet of pink and white 'mums. The flower girl, Janice Whiteman, wore matching attire and carried a small bouquet similar to those of the bridesmaids.

The bridegroom's brother-in-law, Carl Derry, was his attendant and Bruce Whiteman, his brother, and Robert Scrutton, brother of the bride, were ushers.

At the reception, held in Cooper Community Hall, the bride's mother received the guests. She wore a wool crepe suit of taupe autumn haze with fox collar, brown accessories and a corsage of bronze roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted, dressed in a blue double knit suit with blue print blouse, matching blue accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

For her wedding trip through Ontario to Niagara Falls, the bride chose a teal blue three piece suit with black accessories and a white corsage. On their return the couple will live at 296A Sidney Street, Apartment 2, Belleville.

MARY MOORE FRIED CHICKEN

"Why Kentucky Fried Chicken? Why not Mary Moore Fried Chicken?

That was the challenge in a column written by Helen Pearce, retired Women's Editor of the Owen Sound Sun-Times.

If I had a dollar for every batch of fried chicken I've whomped up over the years I could buy quite a few Canada Savings Bonds. This week I've made four more batches of fried chicken because I was aiming for the ideal crisp crunchy golden crust. I've got it!

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Barbecued Pork Chops; Baked Potatoes; Spinach; Cabbage Salad; Dutch Plum Cake; Tea.

EMEM'S CRISP FRIED CHICKEN (serves 4):

4 whole chicken legs cut into 4 drumsticks and 4 thighs (about 1½ pounds), 1/3 cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup fine cornflake crumbs, ½ cup flour (2nd amount), 1 large egg, 1 tablespoon cold water, ½ cup butter.

Into a strong paper bag measure the 1/3 cup flour and salt. Shake dried chicken pieces in them to coat. In a shallow dish beat the egg with the water to mix. Dip chicken pieces in them to moisten with egg all over. Transfer to shallow dish containing mixed together corn flake crumbs and ¼ cup flour and coat all over with the crumbling mixture. (If possible let the crumbed chicken pieces rest and dry for one hour before frying.) Melt the butter in a large frying pan and saute chicken pieces until sides until golden. Do not burn them. (The corn flake crumbs have a little sugar in them and tend to brown too quickly if not watched carefully. Remember though that the sugar is a vital ingredient which produces the desired crispness.)

For the desired golden crisp finish, transfer chicken pieces to buttered shallow baking dish, pouring excess butter in pan over each piece and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 40 to 45 minutes, turning once. I recommend this oven-fried treatment.

But if you are a confirmed deep-fried crumb fan, fry them chicken pieces are golden, add 1 tablespoon boiling water to frying pan, cover, reduce heat to very low, and fry for 40 to 45 minutes.

Korean Boys Work on Farm To Pay Way

HAMILTON (CP) — Induk Pahk of South Korea says the answer to communism is a shovel and a gospel.

Mrs. Pahk began in 1960 to raise money to build a school where underprivileged Korean boys could learn how to use both. She lives part of the year in Washington and raises much of her money in North America.

The first two buildings were dedicated Sept. 24, 1963. Now the Induk vocational school near Seoul, about 15 miles from the boundary dividing Communist North Korea from South Korea, has its second class of 30 boys.

Mrs. Pahk says she is far from satisfied. The boys are carefully chosen on the basis of examinations and tests, and most of the 140 who applied the first year had to be turned away.

The school operates a farm on which the boys work to help pay their way. They learn modern methods and some older techniques, such as plowing with oxen.

They are taught co-operative farming, which Mrs. Pahk says she believes is the answer to communism and superior to capitalism for her people.

She now dreams of three more classes to make a five-year course, of adding a course in practical engineering and a class for girls.

Mrs. Pahk has written a book, The Hour of the Tiger, which she says is a progress report on the school for people in Canada and the United States who have contributed to it. All royalties will go to the school as did royalties from her first book, September Monkey, a biography.

Successful Living

Widow Old Enough To Know Own Mind

DEAR DORIS: I am 40 and a widow, with four children. This guy I've been going with wants to marry me this fall, but my Dad doesn't want him around.

Should I go ahead and get married against my Dad's wishes? Or should I tell him after we are married? After all, a woman of 40 should know what she's doing without her Dad's consent.

My oldest girl is 14. She doesn't seem to listen to me, but she sure listens to Ralph when he talks to her. The children all think the world of him. — ANOTHER CHANCE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR ANOTHER: Try once more for your father's consent, learning, if you can, what his objections are. Could he have some knowledge about your friend which prejudices him? Or is he just afraid of losing his housekeeper?

If you are ever going to know your own mind, now is the time. Once your decision is made, announce it. And that is that.

DEAR DORIS: I should have written you as soon as I read the letter from "Desperate and in Love." I sincerely hope she didn't go on with the wedding. I did, and have been sorry ever since. If you can't talk to your husband, why marry? Who needs it?

If desperate marries this man, she will find that he resents her being able to talk to others, and if she doesn't shell go nuts. Take it from — ONE WHO KNOWS.

DEAR ONE: I'm sorry you speak from bitter experience. Such resentment of your friendliness surely springs from inferiority feelings in your husband. Don't go nuts. Try addressing some serious conversation to a trained counsellor.

DEAR DORIS: I have university roomers. For their room and the use of the whole house, cooking privileges, etc., they pay me a weekly rate. However, the ones going to teachers' college expect me to hold their room and yet not charge, as they will be away so many days a month practice teaching and will be close enough to home to stay there.

I feel that when you rent a room it is the same as renting a house, so much a month whether you are there or not. Otherwise I could take only those who would expect to be there, as when I hold a room for four or five days each time, I lose out with the rooms I have, and yet I am not able to rent to another.

I would like your comments and maybe others could be asked to write in on how they meet this problem. — ROOMS.

DEAR ROOMS: I'm with you. Would such persons consent to your letting others sleep in their rooms for a price, on those nights they are absent? No, indeed. Any comments from others in the same boat — either roomers or room renters?

Confidential to DESPERATE: If the fact remains that you won't be allowed to go out with him, I think it would be better not to phone him. You will have many, many opportunities for dates later on.

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.)

Susanna's Family Fare

TINTER WORKS' PROGRAM

Dear Susanna: Before drying the and other evergreen cones they should receive a good scrubbing with detergent suds. This will remove any of the tarry pitch which may be on the surface. For final drying, either lay them out on a hard flat surface in the sun or spread them loosely in a single layer in an open box where it is warm and dry.

Whether you intend to use them as they are, spray them or touch them up with paint, being sure the cones are thoroughly cleaned first will add greatly to the pleasure of working with them.

Many women also like to gather and store jars of unedible nuts such as acorns for use later in centrepieces and decorative endeavors. Again it is wise to wash and dry them before using. Also, add some moth crystals to the storage container to guard against worms and insects developing. — Mrs. Len Daley

Does everyone know that citrus fruits, and pomegranates can be dried similarly to the way gourds are dried and then can be used in pretty displays?

Certain vegetable leaves such as green and purple cabbage will also respond quite suitably to a drying process. Children at home during the winter months will receive great happiness and satisfaction from participation in this type of experiment, so come on mother, I'll send you any additional information you may need — you haven't a thing to do right now anyway — except perhaps send me one of your very own special hints! — SUSANNA

LOOSE SCREWS!

Dear Susanna: Sometimes cupboard hinge screws become loose to the point where they twist around indefinitely—which means that the screw has worn a hole larger than itself.

If this happens, remove the hardware and tap the wrong end of a used wooden match as far as it will go into the opening and break it off.

When you re-insert the screw it will have a new hold in the wood and should hold firmly again. For very small holes, a wooden pin can be obtained by using the broad end of a toothpick. — Mrs. Margaret Ridley.

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY W.I.

RIVER VALLEY — Mrs. Ed. Hessman was hostess on Thursday for the regular meeting of River Valley Women's Institute, with an attendance of 24 members, two visitors and two children.

Mrs. Glenn Bush, president, opened the meeting. The group signed a card to be sent to Mrs. J. R. Donohoe. Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh was pianist for the meeting. Mrs. Vernon Harry displayed two hats which had been fashioned at the recent senior millinery course.

Mrs. Roy Pearson read a poem dealing with agriculture, and Mrs. Albert Wilbeln spoke on home economics and health. Mrs. Roy Bush reported on the Tweedsmuir History Book. Mrs. Ernest MacMillan, secretary-treasurer, reported on the activities of the 4-H Girls' Club.

CENTENNIAL COMPETITION

Correspondence included information on the centennial poem and original story competition. Both must have a historical theme.

The Christmas meeting will be held at 8 p.m. December 1 at the home of Mrs. Albert Wilhelm and the members are asked to bring a cheer basket gift.

The delegates appointed to the Trent Valley Area Institution are Mrs. Charles Wilson and Mrs. Malcolm McMullen; with Mrs. Percy MacMullen as alternate.

A period of silence was observed in memory of a late member, Mrs. Percy Utman, the former Edith Bush, who was a first year junior member of River Valley W.I. She joined the group in September, 1910.

HISTORICAL PROGRAM

The historical program was arranged by Mrs. Roy Bush and Mrs. Cecil Vanderburgh, a former presiding. Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh played a medley of old favorites and Mrs. Albert Carr read a poem. Mrs. Malcolm McMullen read a story of the rose collars and the collars used years ago, and Mrs. Charles Wilson read an article from an old song book. A Valentine was added for authentic information on how River Valley was settled.

A special part of the program was a large exhibit of handwork done during 1965. This is a legacy left by grandmothers and now prized at heirlooms. The display included a wedding nightdress 78 years old, a black lace apron and gloves made in 1860 a knitted grey and red wool petticoat worn by a grandmother for her wedding in 1864, and a 100-year-old hand woven coverlet.

Mrs. Albert Wilhelm showed her large collection of modern liquid oil paintings and embroidery.

Elderly People Should Be Called on to Help Solve Problems of Aged

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A consultant with the federal health department said Friday that no program for solving problems of the aged should be initiated without calling upon elderly persons themselves to help.

Lud Wilson of Ottawa told the closing session of a seminar on Nursing and Care of the Aged that present methods sometimes isolate old people—"the very ones we are trying to help."

"We become so problem-oriented we lose sight of them as whole people."

Miss Wilson said the aged should participate in organized local study groups, leadership training programs and service projects. "Responsibility should be shared with the elderly to try to change society's attitude towards them and the attitude they have towards themselves that 'they are useless and nonproductive.'"

Fulfillment for the aged can not be legislated, she said, because each has his own concept of the "good life." It's up to local communities to help people meet life and get satisfaction from it.

NEED MIDDLE COURSE

But, she added, it's important to steer a middle course and find a way to allow development of a government program.

Oressa Hubbert, clinical coordinator at St. Joseph's Hospital school of nursing in London, said the scarcity of nurses in this field (old age and its diseases) could be attributed to fear and ignorance.

Many young people see as image of themselves in older persons, and by doing so reject them, Miss Hubbert told the seminar.

The three - day workshop, sponsored by the Middlesex County Registered Nurses Association ended Friday.

Kingston is the most important characteristic for a staff member nursing the aged, she said.

The tendency on the part of the staff member is to want to do for the patient, she said. This is deadening to the patient's dignity, initiative and self-worth.

Even the terms "granny," "grandpa" and "dear" add insult to injury and make the old people feel childish, she added.

MOVE AGAINST MARRIAGE

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP)—Junior Minister Andrew Mutemba has appealed to parents to prevent early marriages because they are causing "a serious shortage of young girls to help us cope with rural development." Some Zambian girls marry at the age of 12.

Ann Landers

Life-like Dreams Cause Many Problems

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was struck by the letter from the woman whose husband had life-like dreams and jumped around all day after dreaming he had injured his foot. To those who haven't had first-hand experience the letter probably sounded funny.

But it isn't funny, Ann. My father had life-like dreams and for years mother put up with a series of strange experiences which resulted in many sleepless nights.

One night Dad dreamed he was in a supermarket. He got out of bed, grabbed the chair by the wooden arms, pushed it around the room, collected the alarm clock, books and magazines from the bedside table and the framed pictures from the dresser. He even took money from his wallet to pay for the purchases.

Dad has kicked himself out of bed playing football and pulled down the drapes while blocking a pass. Once he injured his hand striking an imaginary intruder. (He hit the wall.) The day he bit mother was the day she ordered twin beds. Strangely enough he hasn't done much real-life dreaming since. Maybe this could be the solution for the wife who wrote to you. Please pass it on. — LIZ.

DEAR LIZ: The experts tell us that dreams are often triggered by a noise or because one person's sleep is disturbed by his partner. The fact that twin beds helped solve your mother's problem supports this theory. Consider the word passed — and I hope it helps.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What do you think of a boss's wife who volunteers to do club work and then hands the job over to her husband's secretary?

I have served on numerous committees as a volunteer. I've written hundreds of letters on my own typewriter, and used my own stationery and stamps. I've made countless telephone calls on my own time because I wanted to make a personal contribution to the cause I believe in.

Don't you feel it is fraudulent to accept a job and then turn it over to someone else? — HORSE BEHIND THE SCENE.

DEAR HORSE: Are you doing Madam's club work on your boss's time? If so, (and nothing in your letter indicates otherwise) your complaint is not justifiable. Mrs. Doe makes a contribution by volunteering to do a job, even though her husband is paying to get it done. Obviously, Mrs. Doe will not experience the satisfaction of doing it herself but presumably this does not matter to her.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 20 years old, a high school graduate and I have one more year of Navy duty.

I went steady before I joined up. Mae and I were both in high school then. She told me I was the first boy she had ever been intimate with but I never believed her.

I haven't seen Mae for over a year. She didn't write for a long time, then six weeks ago I got eight letters from her all at once. She is pregnant and wants me to marry her by mail so the baby will have a name. This baby can't be mine and we both know it. Mae says since I am the guy who started her on her way I owe her marriage. She says we can get divorced later if I want to.

My folks know about this and have told me to make my own decision. I need your help. — SAILOR AT SEA IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

DEAR SAILOR: You need this marriage like you need a hole in your hull. The word from here is no, no, no!

If you have trouble getting along with your parents, if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Art School Is Advocated At Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should have a national school for art teachers, members of the Canadian Art Teachers' Association Thrush Art were told Friday.

Eric Wesselow of Chateauguay, Que., told the society's annual meeting it should provide one such school for the provincial departments of education and the federal department of northern affairs.

Harsh criticism of Ontario's system of art education and art teacher-training came from Alan Bevan, an art teacher at Runnymede Collegiate, Toronto, who said:

"Art education practices in Ontario are hardly designed to qualitatively or quantitatively increase esthetic literacy. I distinguish the officially-held notion that the situation is going to be improved by the simple multiplication of the number of people who, under the present system of teacher training, become initiated in qualities to teach art, and by the improvement of physical facilities in the art departments."

Congregation Enjoys Supper

Rev. Fred Spring, pastor, conducted the devotions.

The head table was centred with a lovely decorated cake in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ron McDonald, recently married, who were honored guests. Pink and white streamers under a huge white wedding bell formed the decor and vases of roses completed the table decorations.

UNION MEMBERSHIP LAGS — Union membership in Canada reached a record 1,589,000 in 1964 according to the labor department but union membership is not increasing at the same rate as the work force. In 1964 there were 5,343,000 engaged in paid, non-agricultural labor. Nearly 75 per cent of all union members are in locals affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress and 71 per cent are in international unions. Union members account for 30 per cent of the non-farm labor force. (CP Newsmap).

Village Inhabited by Lepers, Dak Rtih Safe From Viet Cong

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

DAK RTIH, South Viet Nam (AP)—This is one village the Viet Cong will never overrun.

Dak Rtih is a drab collection of bamboo huts standing on stilts in a jungle clearing 185 miles northwest of Saigon, near the Cambodian border. In all of Quang Duc province, where hardly a week goes by without some village or hamlet being harassed by the Communists, this is a village that neither side wants.

Dak Rtih is ignored because all 31 families in the village have at least one case of leprosy in their household and, sooner or later, all 177 villagers probably will be stricken by the disease.

Surrounded by teak and mahogany forests, lush and constantly in chorus with the chatter of monkeys, the shrieks of exotic birds and the whistling of the gibbons, the mud-street village sits on the bank of a deep river in the heart of tiger- and elephant country, deep in the heart of Viet Cong country.

NEEDS NO PROTECTION

But unlike the village at the top of the next hill or the village across the river, Dak Rtih needs no protection against the Viet Cong.

One night, the guerrillas did come, but fled in panic when they met a man with no nose.

Once or twice a month an American missionary used to come from Ban Me Thuot, bringing supplies for the little, tin-roofed dispensary. Occasionally a Vietnamese missionary, a convert from Buddhism to Christianity, came on foot from Gia Nghia, bringing an encouraging word and maybe some candy for the children. But not in many months has anyone come, not since early May when the Viet Cong stepped up their terror tactics in the area.

Just getting to Dak Rtih involved a three-hour trip over a washboard jungle road, with three armored scout cars up front, two companies of infantry following on trucks, four jeeps with .50-calibre machine-guns spread among the column and an L-19 observation plane hovering overhead. But the tears of joy running down the face of the young monk clutching a bar of soap to wash her new-born baby made the whole operation seem as important as anything else going on in the war that day.

TROOPS UNEASY

The troops stood nervously in the village street, keeping as aloof as possible from the people and their drab little huts. But Lt.-Col. Dang Huu Honr, the province chief, shook the arms of villagers who had no hands, drank the ceremonial rice wine in their dark, smoky huts and graciously accepted their token gifts of buze, home-grown cucumbers, promising that they would be on his table that very night.

The villagers were given food in C.A.R.E. packages, clothing from Catholic relief services and soap donated by several hotel chains.

Staff Sgt. Alfred Snay, the team medic, worked effelently with Nguyen Van Anh, his South Vietnamese counterpart, to resupply the village dispensary. Lieut. Art Lovgren, the province civil affairs adviser, joined Ho Hom Ha, a South Vietnamese Protestant missionary, in advising the villagers on ways to cut down rat-infestation and improve sanitation.

But for all of their effeleney and devotion to duty, the visitors could hardly suppress a shudder for the children of Dak Rtih — handsome, laughing bright-eyed children with little blotches of skin already turning hard and grey like dirty concrete.

At night the visiting convoy moved down the road, down the gauntlet of villagers waving goodbye from the doorways of their huts. A pale sliver of moon rode in the tree tops and the thatched huts of Dak Rtih retreated quietly into the jungle into the isolation of the one word that shuts out the world: Leprosy.

Abbe Pierre's Ragpickers Assist Poor of France

CHERBOURG (Reuters) — "Listen, ladies and gentlemen, listen: The Abbe Pierre's ragpickers are in your street, with young people from all countries."

The Frenchman with a loudspeaker continues: "We take anything. Old paper, rags, scrap metal, furniture, bric-a-brac . . . anything."

Up and down the street, doors and windows open one by one.

The Abbe Pierre's ragpickers spread out along the sidewalks, and the people of Cherbourg contribute, through the youth of five countries, toward the rehabilitation of France's social outcasts and new security for the hungry and homeless abroad.

The bearded, ascetic-looking Roman Catholic priest who started it all was born in 1912, the son of a rich Lyon silk merchant. He has combined action with idealism throughout his life.

During the Second World War, Abbe Pierre worked for the French resistance. He also has been a member of parliament and a leader of the World Citizenship Movement — and a "saint" to the beggars, tramps and derelicts of France.

As helper of the needy, the Abbe has suffered attacks and criticism.

FED THOUSANDS

But to use thousands of French men, women and children who have been housed, clothed and fed by his activities, he remains "the apostle of the homeless."

It was in the early 1950s that Abbe Pierre laid the foundations of his emmaus society—"To stand between the poor, who are dumb, and the rich who are blind."

Those who make the Abbe's bridge between privileged and underprivileged, the basis of his communities, themselves belong to neither side.

Coming from every kind of background, they are nearly all in some sense misfits — reformed alcoholics, ex-convicts vagrants, and men who found no niche in normal life after the Algerian war.

Such men join the emmaus crusade, accepting its life of almost monastic simplicity, for many reasons.

They find in the 15 or so communities a roof, a bed, food, and five francs (about 90 cents) a week spending money.

Liberal Will Use U.S. Radio Says Dief

By KEN CLARK

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker votes here today from the home of a popcorn vendor after spending a quiet post-election weekend in his private railway car on a Prince Albert siding.

The 70-year-old politician will follow past practice and cast his ballot at the polling-station home of Crist Soles, 70.

He'll vote about mid-morning. Mr. Soles' tiny 1½-storey house, covered with green shingles, is a long street's throw away from Mr. Diefenbaker's house in this city of 25,000.

Gresham, Mr. Soles operates a popcorn wagon on the streets of Mr. Diefenbaker's hometown. He said he's known Mr. Diefenbaker for 40 years.

Mr. Diefenbaker's house is [illegible] Mr. Rex Cowan, publisher of the Prince Albert Herald. Mr. Diefenbaker still votes here—when he lived for years —although he spends most of his time in Ottawa.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who has held the seat since 1953, has Liberal, New Democratic and Social Credit opponents.

He arrived Saturday after accusing the Liberals of planning to influence the vote of voters while polling is under way today.

Mr. Diefenbaker flew from Saskatoon where he told 300 people at a party reception the Liberals planned broadcasts today beamed from the United States to listeners in British Columbia and Alberta.

The after noon broadcasts would say everything was turning out well for the liberal party in Eastern Canada as the first returns came in, he said.

This would "interfere with the results to their benefit in B.C. and parts of Alberta."

DENIES CHARGE

He said the party is not purchasing time on any American station. He added that if American stations want to carry news reports of the Canadian election there is nothing to stop them.

Canadian radio and television stations may not carry election results today until the polls close in their regions. Because of time-zone differences polls close earlier in Eastern Canada than in the West. Eastern results are withheld in regions farther west to avoid influencing those who have not voted.

Mr. Diefenbaker was met by a group of 25 when his chartered plane landed on a snow-covered runway. The temperature was a wintry 15 degrees.

His wife Olive and his brother Elmer of Saskatoon were with him.

This city of 25,000 is in the riding of Prince Albert which Mr. Diefenbaker has represented since 1953. He practised law here for years and still owns a house in town.

Mr. Diefenbaker travelled more than 30,000 miles and delivered 72 major speeches in his seven - week campaign, climaxed by an emotional Saskatchewan homecoming rally at Regina Friday night.

CAMPAIGNED HARD

He campaigned hard all the way, in contrast to former Liberal Lester Pearson who started more slowly and built his campaign to a closing peak.

In the closing days he warned his audiences repeatedly to ignore pre-election polls. He recalled the 1957 election in which his party formed a minority government although it was a pre-election underdog.

At the Saskatoon reception Saturday he said he was "more optimistic today than I was in 1957."

The 70-year-old lawyer noted that there had been in-party attempts to get him to step down as leader. Many people had asked him why he stayed on, he said.

"My friends," he said, "I stayed on because if I left, poll-

NDP Leader Says Party Will Do Well

By MICHAEL GILLAN

BURNABY, B.C. (CP)—NDP Leader T. C. Douglas waits today in his home riding of Burnaby - Coquitlam to learn whether Canadian voters will give his party the "major breakthrough" he has been predicting.

In an interview Sunday night Mr. Douglas said if the "momentum" he says has been generated by the party during the campaign is carried through to voting day the NDP "will do quite well."

At dissolution of the last Parliament the NDP held 18 of the Commons' 265 seats.

After casting his own ballot in a polling booth in East Burnaby United Church, about three blocks from his home, Mr. Douglas was to visit many polling stations in the riding.

WILL MEET BACKERS

In the late afternoon he planned to be at home to hear the results from Eastern Canada and during the evening drive to his own committee rooms to meet supporters and issue a statement when the final result is known.

Mr. Douglas spoke publicly for the last time in the campaign to an audience in nearby Maillardville, a predominantly French-Canadian community.

The previous night he drew about 100 supporters to a campaign meeting in Fort Coquitlam.

He told them that his party would oppose any tight money policy because it would mean higher interest rates and more expensive consumer goods.

He said that "the cost of tight money falls almost entirely on wage and salary earners."

CHALLENGED LBP

In Toronto Thursday, Mr. Douglas challenged Prime Minister Pearson to state before voters go to the polls whether a Liberal government would raise interest rates under the "guise" of an anti-inflation policy.

He said Saturday that his challenge must have touched a "raw nerve" because the prime minister had accused him of making "scary" statements.

"My suspicions of Liberal policy have been developing since early in this campaign. At the very outset it was Mr. Pelletier who explained the need for a Liberal majority so that the government could do some unpopular things," said Mr. Douglas.

He said what these things would be has become evident from an examination of The Financial Post. The Financial Times and the financial pages of our most influential daily newspapers."

[illegible] cles would have been brought in that would have destroyed Canada."

Sunday Mr. Diefenbaker attended the morning service of First Baptist Church here.

He told reporters he had a "long, long sleep" the night before.

"I had a long, long walk mentally. I went all across the country, to all the provinces from Newfoundland to British Columbia except the Yukon and I'm going there when I get back from church."

At the unpretentious white stucco church, Mr. Diefenbaker shared a pew with his wife, Olive, and his brother Elmer.

Socred Leader Loses Cow, Pigs To Vandals

RED DEER (CP) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson planned to vote early today, visit polls in Red Deer constituency during voting hours and then retire to his farm home 12 miles west of here this evening to await the first federal election returns.

Mr. Thompson planned to stay at his home until a definite trend was established in Red Deer constituency, where he predicts he will win personal re-election by a comfortable margin.

He was to go to party headquarters in Red Deer later this evening for news of other ridings across the country.

As Mr. Thompson wound up his election campaign, trouble struck at his farm.

Police were called to the farm after one of the party leader's purebred cows was found shot and seven of his hogs poisoned early Sunday.

POISON FOUND

Poison was found in the hog feed. It was the second time in recent weeks that vandals had struck at the Thompson Farm.

On their first trip, officers found that vandals had driven spikes in all four tires of a farm vehicle and shot another cow.

Mr. Thompson said the cows were worth $200 apiece and the hogs, ready for marketing, $100 each.

Saturday night Mr. Thompson held the last of his engagements in the federal election campaign —a party gathering at nearby Sylvan Lake, Alta.

The gathering featured a community sing-song, musical talent from the Red Deer constituency and a speech by Mr. Thompson in which he thanked party workers for their efforts.

Despite polls giving the riding to his Conservative opponent, Gordon Towers, Mr. Thompson predicted he would regain his seat in the Commons by a wider margin than in the 1963 balloting when Mr. Margin over Mr. Towers was more than 1,000 votes.

Mr. Thompson attended church services with his family Sunday and visited his father and mother at their Innisfail farm near here.

Pearson Will Await Results In Ottawa

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP)—The shouting over, Prime Minister Pearson was to cast his ballot early today, clean up some work at his office, attend a funeral, then wait to see what the people have said.

Mr. Pearson, still feeling the effects of an attack of influenza, made his last campaign speech at dusk Saturday in Brockville where 1,000 persons cheered him on to Ottawa to await the election results.

He was expected to walk about three blocks from his residence today to cast his ballot then go to his East Block office briefly before attending the funeral of Senator Norman Lambert. He was then to visit party headquarters before spending a quiet night at home.

In the evening, the prime minister will hear the results at headquarters. When a verdict is known, he is to go to a downtown hotel to speak to supporters.

He had completed a campaign that took him 23,000 miles by air and on the last day he travelled 280 miles by car. For the last two days of it all, his temperature was up through a flu virus, and he perspired with every speech.

Before reaching Ottawa Saturday night, Mr. Pearson had stopped at Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg, Belleville and Brockville, urging campaign workers to "get everyone out to vote Monday." His biggest crowd was at Brockville, where Liberal candidate John R. Matheson waited with a pipe band to greet "one of the most noble human beings in our history."

"I've now been to every part of Canada," said the prime minister, "and I've found a tremendous loyalty to our country. Regardless of traditions, culture or language, they are all Canadians."

At Cobourg he told about 300 in the main street that Liberal candidate Pauline Jewett was fighting "just about the most important contest" in the country against Conservative George Hees. He said he was also up against a candidate who came into Algoma East riding from outside—Conservative Joel Aldred — who was trying to "glamorize and buy his way into Parliament."

When Miss Jewett returns to Ottawa, he said, "we will find responsible work for her to do there."

About 500 people blocked off the main street in Belleville for Mr. Pearson's speech. At most stops he spoke for five or 10 minutes, saying all signs pointed to a Liberal majority, and workers should not let up in their efforts until 6 p.m. Monday.

Mrs. Pearson, who had spent two days at home with the flu before rejoining her husband Friday night, travelled with the prime minister. But at several stops she remained in the car.

MR. TWEEDY by Ned Riddle

"Mind standing up for a second? Yes, sir, business has really been bad."

Aides said she still felt the effects of her illness.

Mr. Pearson's final week of campaigning was designed to bring his efforts to a peak on the eve of the election. And organizers were confident this had been achieved, as he held three of his most receptive rallies on consecutive nights.

ENDS WITH CHEERS

After an outbreak of rowdyism at Montreal Tuesday night, the prime minister spoke to 1,400 in Lindsay Wednesday night, to some 2,000 in St. Thomas Thursday night, and at Hamilton Friday night an estimated 2,500 packed into a downtown theatre for a well-organized, cheer-filled rally that was televised into about 40 constituencies.

Through southwestern Ontario, the prime minister hit hard on the theme of "another-

POLICE VIGILANCE!—Constable keeps eye on windows across the street while fellow officer watches crowd as Prime Minister Pearson spoke in Belleville Saturday outside committee rooms of Liberal Robert Temple.

Big Crowd Welcomes Pearson In Campaign Wrap-up in City

By HARRY MULHALL

Hemmed in by heavy security precautions, Prime Minister Pearson Saturday launched his campaign wrap-up in Belleville.

In the warmth of the Pearson personality and local political hullaballoo, the drama of the occasion went unnoticed.

Despite the tenseness of his police guards, the Prime Minister projected himself as a politician at his best with crowds, shaking hands by the score, affably pausing to trade personal greetings.

"The Maple Leaf forever, Mike," shouted an elderly supporter in the crowd, thrusting his palms above the crush.

"You bet!" rejoined the Prime Minister as he returned the grasp.

RCMP and city detectives mingled with the early afternoon crowd as it collected around city hall. When the Prime Minister spoke from a platform outside the Liberal rooms he was closely guarded by two uniformed police constables who scanned the crowd and adjacent sections during his speech.

Mr. Pearson's personal contact with crowds asserted itself immediately his car was driven to a halt amid the estimated 2,000 that clotted the area around the Liberal committee rooms of candidate Robert Temple opposite city hall.

CLEARED PATH

City police nudged motorcycles into the crowd and slid a cruiser with open doors behind him in attempts to clear a path for the Prime Minister's car.

Yet the crowd swamped his vehicle as it pulled to a halt.

"Oh don't hurt them — for goodness sake," he admonished a hard-pressed police officer as youngsters, seized with crowd enthusiasm, scrambled toward his car.

The stepped-up security, precautions followed discovery of a bomb at Montreal during a rally of the Prime Minister's earlier this week and a telephone threat on his life at Peterborough.

Security measures since have been increased for all political leaders.

Indicative of the minute preparedness designed to safeguard lives was the fact only top local party members were allowed to view the advance itinerary of the Prime Minister's visit. Then they were ordered to burn it.

As RCMP and city detectives scrutinized the area while the crowd collected, an RCMP man spotted people ranging around the windows ogeity hall. A man was detailed to watch the building.

City police took no chances and patrolled the area around city hall and the Liberal rooms long before Mr. Pearson's arrival.

Inspector Harold Reid, head of the department's detective branch, was on the scene conferring with the RCMP while his plainclothesmen moved through the crowd.

Crowd control was directed by Inspector Ralph Blatchford, who apparently detailed the burliest men on the force for the job. Not one of them under six feet, they formed flying wedges round the Prime Minister as he arrived and departed the throng.

And as the Prime Minister mounted the platform outside the Liberal rooms for a brief address he was again flanked by two police constables.

Throughout his 10-minute speech one officer kept his eyes trained on the crowd—the other on opposite rooftops and windows.

Mr. Pearson's speech was brief and emphasized his party's call for majority government.

This appeal, he said, wasn't greeted favorably by everybody.

"But it is greeted favorably by the majority—and it's the majority we're talking about," he added amid cheers from his audience.

He called Robert Temple an example of an "effective member of parliament" and said there was a surging swing towards Liberal government.

In the crowd someone was holding a sign with the motto: "Stay Pat; Vote Mike."

Mr. Pearson said it was the first time held seen such a motto during his coast-to-coast campaign.

VISITED COMMITTEE ROOMS

"I don't know about staying pat," quipped the Prime Minister, "Perhaps we shouldn't stay pat. We're going ahead," he added mentioning comparative employment statistics.

"But," he added, "We cannot go ahead with the kind of government we had between 1958 and 1963."

He drew his biggest cheer when he said Canada had been experiencing unprecedented prosperity under his government — then added:

"What's wrong with continuing that kind of government for Canada?"

Immediately following his speech Mr. Pearson entered the committee rooms for a few minutes.

As he left, city police again formed a wedge around him to aid him to his car.

As soon as he emerged Police Sergeant Douglas Ellis led his men into the crowd but the jostling of the crowd began all over again.

At one point the Prime Minister halted as he noticed a youngster with her face dirtstained, obviously frightened in the crush.

Taking her hand he asked her: "What's the matter? Are you alright?"

Finally, police made one more indiscriminate heave and cleared a path to the Prime Minister's car.

The cavalcade moved off slowly as Mr. Pearson reached out to grasp hands all the way down Front Street.

Another sharp ground action was reported 135 miles east of Saigon, where 500 Viet Cong overran a hamlet. The defenders suffered heavy losses. The government force later regained the hamlet with help from U.S. air strikes.

HIT HAMLET

In another development a U.S. spokesman disclosed that U.S. marine planes accidentally bombed a friendly village Sunday, killing one woman and injuring 10 other persons. The bombing was due to a mistake in target data—one similar to the incident last week in which U.S. Air Force planes bombed a friendly village after receiving incorrect map co-ordinates from the South Vietnamese and killed 48 civilians.

Intelligence reports from Plei Me indicated more than half of the 500 Viet Cong guerrilla troops who engaged U.S. 1st Air Cavalry troops in a bitter weekend battle were either killed or wounded. The Americans also took heavy losses in the savage fighting eight miles west of the special forces camp at Plei Me.

A U.S. spokesman said 71 Viet Cong were known dead and an additional 200 were believed to have been killed or wounded.

About 1,500 cavalry men searched Monday for remnants of the enemy unit, but no contact was reported. It was believed the Viet Cong had broken up into smaller groups and dispersed into the jungle near the Cambodian border.

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—A 60-man search party of provincial police officers and civilians Sunday found no trace of Mrs. Mel Cooke, 47, who disappeared Friday from her home in Allensville, about five miles southwest of here.

Neighbors saw Mrs. Cooke about 11 a.m. Friday walking away from her home, dressed in light clothing. It is believed she may have wandered into the bush. There have been freezing temperatures since.

Mrs. Cooke's son, Cpl. M. E. Cooke of the provincial police, is directing the search. About 60 persons took part Saturday.

When it comes to heaters, we're full of hot air.

Ever heard anyone complain about how long it takes the heater to get going in a Volkswagen?

We have.

That's why we've added a heater booster this year. Built in, not stowed away in the luggage compartment like the old unit.

It fills the VW with hot air faster. And keeps it filled automatically. A thermostat shuts it off when things warm up. And switches it on again if things cool down.

So no matter what goes on outside, it's always good and warm inside a 1966 Volkswagen. And the windshield is always good and clear because our new heater booster pumps extra warm air through the defroster vents, too.

There are one or two other things that might give you a nice warm feeling about driving a Volkswagen in the winter-time.

Like the extra traction you get from having the engine over the rear wheels. And the snugly sealed bottom that keeps snow and salt from damaging vital parts. And the fact that there's no radiator to fill with anti-freeze.

If the idea of owning a Volkswagen has left you a little cold up until now, why not come in and see what we've done for 1966?

We think it will thaw you out.

SPORTS SLICES

TORONTO—Leonard "Red" Kelly, veteran star of the Toronto Maple Leafs, told the Ontario Minor Hockey Association convention here Saturday that what Canada needs hockey-wise "is more good amateur players if we are to regain lost international prestige."

"I saw Canada's team perform in the Tokyo Olympics and I was surprised at the calibre of the play. It left me with the impression our amateurs are not what they should be."

"I seems to me," said "Red", "the pros are having too much control over amateur players. After all they appear to have the last say about who is who and where they will play."

Kelly paid tribute to the work the OMHA is doing for the youngsters. "I played minor hockey and owe a lot to what I learned there.

"Minor hockey can do just so much but after the player 'graduates' where can he go? The amateurs cannot offer him much and as a result a lot of good hockey players are falling by the wayside."

"I wonder," said Red, "if we are not starting hockey-playing youngsters too young in organized hockey?

Organization is fine, Kelly hinted, "but is it good for a youngsters who has not yet learned to skate properly."

"I wonder," he said, "if giving them a stick and a puck and playing by themselves until they got the 'feel' of things and were sure of their feet, would not be a good idea?"

In lighter vein "Red" told the delegates "that hockey has been good to me. It gave me a good living and a good income plus a fine pension plan. It also has been an education for me."

"I must say if helped me a lot in my political career; as it helped me get elected. It's cost has been light, a few broken bones, loss of hair and a change in my usual set-up."

Red drews rounds of laughter from the delegates when he said that no one knew the age of Johnny Bower, the Leafs' ageing goalie, because he signed under another birth certificate "and they've never been able to find the original."

Kelly got a standing ovation when he left the banquet hall.

WARNS PLAYERS' PARENTS

Past president Herb Parker of Stratford told delegates that a new ruling will be entered in the 1965-66 constitution regarding players playing for two teams, or for a club outside their home district.

Parker hit hard at so-called win-at-all-costs hockey mgr who are tampering with players on other clubs.

He mentioned specifically the Ottawa Alta Vista club whose officials have been indefinitely suspended for such action.

"This club," he charged, "had players commuting from Kingston, Brockville and other eastern centres. They tried to get one from Belleville."

"If is not going to stop at suspension of clubs and officials," he pointed out. "The new ruling also calls for a two-years' suspension for any player who leaves his playing club to go further afield."

"We believe," Parker said, "that youngsters should be loyal to the locals and team they grew up with. Glib-tongue'd men tell them they can play for another team for a year—then play for them. Then the home club has no claim."

"The new ruling will stop this," he said. "And I want you to go home and tell the kids—and their parents, that if they leave their home club to play for another a year and then expect to come back they'll find a two-years' suspension facing them."

Rushing Leader

Charger Star Sets Record

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Paul Lowe, San Diego Chargers' big, busy back, has gained on record and is gunning for another.

The 205 - pound speedster, clipped off 112 yards in 17 carries against Denver Broncos Sunday and became the American Football League's all-time rushing leader.

His performance in the Chargers' 33-21 victory at Denver pushed the 5-foot-11 hayburner of Denver with a career total of 3,930 yards.

And his one touchdown was the tie-breaker that enabled the Chargers to maintain their 1½-game lead in the league's western division.

Buffalo Bill's, meanwhile, opened up a 2½ game lead in the east, whipping Boston Patriots 23-7 while the second place Houston Oilers lost to Oakland Raiders, the No. 2 team in the west, 33-21. New York Jets upset Kansas City Chiefs 13-10.

SCORES THREE TDs

Keith Lincoln, the other half of San Diego's fearsome running combo, provided the scoring heroes for the Chargers with three touchdowns but Lowe did the heavy work.

He took a flare pass from John Hadl with the score tied and 6:15 left to play, and rambled 45 yards for the touchdown that clinched it. Lowe also set up another touchdown with a 33-yard dash to the nine.

The performance gave him a league-leading 802 yards for the season. With five games left to play, he is gunning for the league single season rushing record of 1,099 set by Clem Daniels for Oakland in 1963.

Oakland had to score three enough for Houston in the passing combination of Dick Wood and Clem Daniels, four field goals by Mike Mercer and the running of Mike Todd, who reeled off 138 yards on 20 carries.

Charlie Warner returned a kickoff 102 yards while Pete Gogolak kicked three field goals for Buffalo, boosting his league-leading scoring total to 73 points for the season.

Joe. (8400,000) Namath came off the New York bench and directed a 75-yard third-quarter drive that pulled the Jets from a 10-6 deficit and brought their first road victory since 1963.

WINS WALK

TORONTO (CP)—Felix Cappella, 33, of Midland Ont., Saturday won the Eastern Canadian 20-kilometre championship walk, beating the previous record by three seconds. His time for the 12.5 mile distance was one hour, 39 minutes, six seconds.

Scores Three, Helps Three ★★★★★ Rangers Move Up

Hull On Spree; Hawks Crush Leafs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

They say it's dangerous to wave a red rag in front of a bull. Its getting hull as dangerous to wave the blue-and-white sweaters of Toronto Maple Leafs in front of Bobby Hull.

Two weeks ago Chicago Black Hawks visited Toronto and drove four goals home against Leaf goaltender Johnny Bower without reply. Hull scored three of them.

Seeking revenge, the Maple Leafs went into Chicago Sunday night and were badly gored. Chicago won 9-0, including three goals and three assists for Hull.

While Chicago was trimming Toronto as its personal cushion for a share of first place, Montreal Canadiens, co-holders of the top rung, split a weekend series with Boston Bruins, losing 3-1 Saturday night in Montreal and winning 5-2 Sunday in Boston.

In other weekend action, New York Rangers startled the Leafs on their last weekend with a 4-2 victory Saturday and then edged Detroit Red Wings 3-2 Sunday.

The victories moved New York into sole possession of third place ahead of Toronto, Detroit and Boston.

SETS HAWKS RECORD

Hull's performance Sunday put him atop the list of the Hawks' all-time scorers. The left winger, in his ninth season, now has scored a total of 354 points. The record had been held by Bill Mosienko, who collected 349 points in 13 seasons with Chicago.

Hull also leads this season's individual scoring race with 11 goals and six assists.

The Hwaks launched their attack at 6:38 of the first period when Phil Esposito backhanded a rebound of Chico Maki's shot past Toronto netminder Terry Sawchuk. Less than a minute later, Eric Nesterenko flipped in a 10-footer after taking a pass from Len Lunde.

Chicago's Doug Mohns was in the penalty box when Maki make it 3-0, climaxine a two-on-one breakaway with Hull at 10:42.

Mohns knocked a five-footer behind Sawchuk less than four minutes later and Bill Hay capped the first-period outburst by scoring at 18:39 after skating through the entire Leaf team.

Hull scored twice and Stan Mikita hit for his second marker of the season in the second period. Hull's final tally came mid-way in the third frame.

Hawks' goalie Glenn Hall, who blanked the Leafs in the league opener in Toronto, turned aside 40 shots in registering his second shutout of the year.

RANGERS FOR PLAYOFF?

The Rangers, second-division inhabitants the last few years, appear to have the speed and hustle to shoot for a playoff spot by the end of the 70-game schedule.

Saturday night, centre Earl Ingarfield paved their way with a pair of goals including the winner against Toronto. Rod Gilbert and veteran Donnie Marshall accounted for the other Ranger goals.

Defenceman Allen Stanley and Doug Mohns, each with his first of the season, scored for Toronto. Both goals came with Leafs holding a man advantage.

Sunday, Bob Nevin, a former Maple Leaf, drilled in two goals as the Rangers edged Detroit. Don Marshall scored the other goal.

The Rangers, who didn't win a game from Detroit at home last season, ran their current unbeaten string to four games by taking a 3-0 lead and holding on despite a late surge by the Wings' Gordie Howe.

Howe scored one goal and set up another as Detroit peppered rookie goalie Ed Giacomin in the last period. The goal was Howe's second of the season and left him three short of the 800 mark in this, his 20th NHL season.

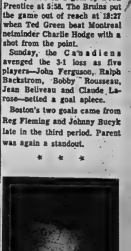
ROOKIE GOALIE STARS

After a sterling performance by rookie goalie Bernie Parent was the main factor in Boston's 3-1 win over Montreal Saturday, Leighton (Hap) Emms, Bruins' freshman general manager, was impressed with Parent's performance and said the 20-year-old native of the Montreal suburb of Longue Pointe "has earned a place on the team."

Montreal took a 1-0 lead on a goal by Bobby Rousseau, but former Leaf Red Stewart evened the count midway through the second period.

The Bruins went ahead in the third period on a goal by Dean Prentice at 5:58. The Bruins put the game out of reach at 18:37 when Ted Green beat Montreal netminder Charlie Hodge with a shot from the point.

Sunday, the Canadiens avenged the 3-1 loss as five players—John Ferguson, Ralph Backstrom, Bobby Rousseau, Jean Beliveau and Claude Larose—netted a goal apiece.



Boston's two goals came from Reg Fleming and Johnny Bucyk late in the third period. Parent was again a standout.

Tunney Blasts Boxing

BERLIN (AP) — Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight champion, said Sunday that professional boxing in the United States must be cleaned up or outlawed.

Tunney, on a brief visit to West Berlin, said he favors the appointment of a World boxing commissioner to "get the sport back to what it was in the early 1920's." He was in the ccrowd from Jack Dempsey Sept. 23, 1926.

Tunney addressed a press conference at Tempelhof Airport together with former champion Max Schmeling, now a businessman in Hamburg, West Germany. It was their first meeting in nearly 30 years. They never met in the ring.

The two differed somewhat on whether the Nov. 22 title fight between heavyweight champion Cassius Clay and ex - champ Floyd Patterson would improve boxing's image.

Tunney predicted a knockout victory for Clay.

Snow Given Assist

Bombers Oust Sasky Riders 15-9

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

WINNIPEG (CP)—Coach Bud Tallbert and his Winnipeg Blue Bombers defeat Saskatchewan Roughriders 15-9 in the Western Football Conference sudden-death semi-final Sunday.

The snow came in the final minutes of the second quarter after halfback Dave Raimey had scampered 75 and 25 yards for touchdowns to power the Bombers to a 14-6 lead.

It's hard to shift on a slippery surface and it hurts most when you're playing from behind," was Grant's post-game observation.

The snow-slick ground hindered his players, he said, but it also stopped George Reed, powerful Saskatchewan fullback who rushed for more than one mile during the regular season.

Norm Winton's two converts and Ed Ulmer's 45-yard punt single provided the other points that launched Winnipeg into a first-of-three final against Calgary Stampeders.

STARTS SATURDAY

The final starts in Calgary Saturday, switches to Winnipeg Wednesday night, then returns to Calgary if a third game is needed.

Flanker Hugh Campbell got Saskatchewan's touchdown and guard Jack Abendschan kicked a 28-yard field goal in the third quarter which reduced the deficit to 14-9.

Despite a slide into oblivion on the ground—16 yards in 10 trips—and a charging Winnipeg defence led by Al Miller, scrambling Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster still gave 21,600 fans a few anxious moments in the fourth quarter.

Switching to the pass, he found halfback Bob Good for 51 yards with seven minutes to go. Campbell then grabbed a throw at the Winnipeg 10-yard line.

But the Bomber defence increased the pressure and Lancaster was forced to hurry. His first pass to Campbell, stationed at the goal line, was knocked down by Ernie Pitts. His second, intended for Jim Worsley, struck the goal post. His third was a desperation effort to Good at the eight-yard line but it was too close to the sideline and the Saskatchewan halfback couldn't avoid stepping out of bounds.

USE PERKINS

The Bombers took possession and fell back on fullback Art Perkins to move the ball out of danger. Perkins responded with five-, 17-, and 30-yard drives.

Grant said Lancaster wasn't at his best. "He was having trouble getting set and was floating a lot of his passes."

The result was three Winnipeg interceptions, two by Dick Thornton and one by Henry Janzen. Lancaster did complete 12 of 29 for 197 yards. Campbell grabbed five for 85 yards and Good three for 58.

Both clubs were tough, as shown by injuries to three players and 22 penalties, 11 to each.

Saskatchewan tackle Reg Whitehouse hobbled to the dressing room in the first quarter, Rider end Martin Fabi followed him in the second and Winnipeg quarterback Kenny Ploen needed first-aid in the third—all for leg hurts.

Brian Palmer proved a capable replacement for Ploen, directing a 43-yard march that ended with Ulmer's single. Palmer collected 11 yards himself on a good run.

Oakville Shades Aces 5-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Three goals in less than five minutes by Earl Balfour, a former National Hockey League player now with Galt Hornets highlighted weekend action in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

Balfour's goals in the third period gave the Hornets a 5-3 overtime tie with Guelph Regals in Galt Saturday.

Galt's other two goals came from Carl Hatt and Larry Pfaff. For the Regals, who're Sutherst in the games, Walt Bradley, Dave Luciuk, Jimmy Robertson, Elmer Skov and Joe Malo scored.

In Oakville Sunday night, Oakville Oaks moved into second place in the standings when they defeated Kingston aces 5-4. The Aces remained in first place.

A goal by Norm Sibbick with less than four minutes left in the game gave the home-town Oaks the win.

Garfield Ball, Davey Jones, Stu Muirhead and Bob Collins scored for Kingston.

Gak Harris moved into fourth place in the standings when they defeated Woodstock Athletics 4-2 in Woodstock Sunday.

Two-goal efforts by captain Don Hogan and Jimmy Cheri gave Hatt accounted for the Galt scoring while Dino Leggio and Bobby Robinson scored the Woodstock goals.

Riders Clobber Als; Ready For Cats

—Interceptions Fatal

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders defence hauled in three second-quarter pass interceptions Saturday to set up a 36-7 victory over Montreal Alouettes and move Riders to the Eastern Football Conference final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"Annihilation by interception" was the way Montreal coach Jim Trimble described the sudden-death semi - final, and most of the 19,171 fans who watched the game would agree.

Riders offence looked as if it was in for another erratic game after giving ball away twice on first-quarter fumbles, one of them on the Montreal 10-yard line when fullback Jim Dillard dropped a quick pitch.

But when Montreal quarterback Bernie Faloney tried an aerial attack the defence went to work, banding the ball over to the offence twice deep in Montreal territory and scoring a touchdown on a 65-yard interception return by halfback Gene Gaines.

RIDERS PREPARE

Riders concentrated on pass defence during touchdown last week but probably will be spending more time on their pass attack in preparation for next Sunday's opener of the two - game, total - point final against Hamilton to determine the East's Grey Cup representative.

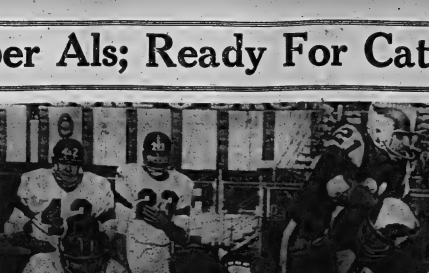
The Rider defence was bolstered by the return of corner linebacker Mike Blum who missed five games with knee injuries. Blum and Billy Joe Booth kept constant pressure on Faloney.

On offence, the return of Dillard and Scott steadied Ottawa's running and improved Jackson's protection. Moe Racine, Rider's place - kicker, went all the way at offensive tackle after having his leg frozen to deaden pain from a pinched nerve.

Jackson had trouble hitting his receivers on long tosses. And some of his receivers didn't hold on to ball when it was on target, a common fault that plagued the Riders in the last half of their season as they lost six of eight games.

JACKSON RURLS

In all, Jackson completed nine of 18 passes for 125 yards, while back-up man Bill Cline, who took over late in the last quarter, hit on two of four for 34 yards.



Ottawa's running attack took up the slack, rolling up 266 yards. Dillard was the workhorse with 82 yards in 15 trips. Scott accounted for 81 on eight carries.

Fullback J. W. Lockett picked up 68 of Montreal's 115-yard ground attack, carrying 15 times.

Jackson's favorite regular-season targets looked after the major share of Ottawa's 159-yard aerial passing gain. End Ted Watkins took four for 55 and flanker Whit Tucker, who played centre end — zone toss, caught three for 30 yards.

Faloney managed to complete 12 of 25 passes for 156 yards, but except for a late flurry, most were in his own end of the field. Don Fuell, who filled in for one play when Faloney hurt his ankle in the second quarter, was good on his only pass, a five-yard toss.

Halfback Jackie Simpson, a two-way man for the Alouettes, and end Don Davis each caught four of Faloney's passes, for 55 and 44 yards.

FIRST TOUCHDOWN—Ron Stewart (11) of the Ottawa Rough Riders scores the first touchdown in Saturday's sudden-death semi-final Eastern Conference Football game between the Riders and the Montreal Alouettes. Doug Daigneault (21) after failing to knock down Jackson's pass to Stewart runs into teammate Jim Andreotti (45). Riders won the game 36-7. (CP Wirephoto).

Browns Nip Eagles

Colts Maul Bears; Lions Claw Packers

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

In the hectic race for the National Football League's western title, Baltimore Colts will take all the help they can get from anybody.

That includes their own little-known Gary Cuozzo. And Chicago Bears defensive back Dave Whitsell. And the entire Detroit Lions defence.

The Colts stood off the charging Bears 26-21 Sunday and Detroit mas-handled the slumping Green Bay Packers 12-7. That left Baltimore on top in the west at 7-1 after its ninth straight victory and dropped Green Bay to second at 6-2 after its second straight loss.

Cuozzo took over for Johnny Unitas in the third period at Chicago, after the Colts' established quarterback suffered a back injury, and led Baltimore to what proved the winning touchdown—with an assist from Whitsell slapped into the arms of Baltimore end Ray Berry.

At Green Bay, the Lions' defence allowed the Packers 68 total yards—minus two passing—got the clinching field goal after an intercepted pass by Bruce Maher, and later added a safety by Roger Brown.

BROWNS SAVE LEAD

Cleveland Browns barely saved their eastern division lead, outlasting Philadelphia Eagles 38-34.

St. Louis Cardinals stayed one game behind Cleveland, at 5-3, with Charley Johnson and Billy Gambrell connecting on a 39-yard scoring pass play with 37 seconds to go that gave them a 21-17 victory over Pittsburgh Steelers.

Washington Redskins won their third straight 22-7 over New York Giants. Minnesota Vikings kept in the western fight by beating Los Angeles Rams 24-13. And Dallas Cowboys downed San Francisco 49ers 39-31.

Unitas had scoring passes of 27 yards to John Mackey and 49 yards to Tony Lorick before he left the game in the third period with the Colts ahead 17-0. Rudy Bukich's 19-yard pass to Jimmy Jones gave Chicago its only touchdown after the Colts' talented quarterback suffered a back injury, and led Baltimore to what proved the winning touchdown—with an assist from Whitsell slapped into the arms of Baltimore end Ray Berry.

At Green Bay, the Lions' defence allowed the Packers 68 total yards—minus two passing—got the clinching field goal after an intercepted pass by Bruce Maher, and later added a safety by Roger Brown.

Leafs Will Make Play For Brewer

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey league will make a further attempt to sign Carl Brewer to rejoin the team, a Leaf executive says.

Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, said Sunday that an overture to the 27-year-old defenceman, who quit the team several weeks ago, will be made soon.

Ballard said the Leafs without Brewer are "like a ship without a rudder. You don't realize how important he is until you haven't got him."

OMHA Had Record Season

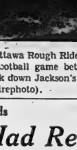
(Sports Editor)

TORONTO — Nearly 400 voting delegates gave the Ontario Minor Hockey Association's new president Doug. Patterson, of Stirling, his vice-presidential board and executive a clean slate to spreslight the 1965-66 operations here Saturday.



The 32nd annual convention of the association broke all previous records. Well over 500 delegates and guests attended the closing banquet where outgoing president Albert Watkins of Peterborough handed over the official gavel to President Patterson.

Guests included officials of the OHA, the Toronto Hockey League, the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, past presidents and CAHA representatives Comptroller W. Dennis extended the official welcome to the city.

BOWS AWARD

The most surprised delegate there was Bob Ewer of St Catharines who was presented with the OMHA special Honor Award.

man 1964-65 executive were re-elected to office. These are William Burrell, Malton; Lloyd Davidson, Chatham; Jim Kunkley, Etobicoke; Albert Moore, Guelph and Ron Smith of Galt.

New members elected were Lou Jeffries of Gananoque and Ken MacDonald of Orillia.

During the morning business session delegates turned down a proposed new rule that all players in the OMHA must wear skates equipped with steel heel guards.

They approved an amendment that while all players must wear guards they can be of other material and if broken replaced by others or by padding. Violation will not be grounds for protest. The ruling goes into effect after Dec. 31st.

They rejected an amendment that minor fees be a straight ten dollars per classification and upheld the executive amendment for the proposed juvenile, midget, bantam and peewee fees of $12.00 each and $8.00 for novice, effective Sept. 1, 1966.

A motion that body-checking be permitted in all zones for all series was defeated.

And the convention turned down almost unanimously the plea that all immortalize stop the plea if the puck shall have entered the goal, the icing will not be called and a goal, shall be allowed."

At the banquet "change-of-command" ceremonies, first vice-presidents were paid to Lloyd-president Watkins and president Patterson. The past-president was presented with a handsome gift by his successor.

Eastern Ontario will be well represented on the executive with President Patterson as "chairman of the board"; Gordon Hawes of Whitby moving up to the first vice-presidency and Lou Jeffries of Gananoque elected to the executive for the first time.

Mr. Jeffries was an executive appointee last year and according to President Patterson did an excellent job. "He will be a valuable asset to the executive this year" he said.

The association had a record year also, secretary Gary McLeod pointed out in his report.

"In 1957" he told the delegates, "we had 1,411 teams and 22,335 players. Last year we had 3,007 teams playing with an aggregate of 54,126 players.

"Red" Kelly was the guest speaker at the banquet. Details of his address and other comments appear in the sports column.

Chelsea Dethrones Leeds

LONDON (Reuters)—A goal scored by Chelsea's right half John Hollins dethroned the Leeds United soccer team from the English League's First Division leadership Saturday.

Up to the head of the table went Burnley, which beat West Ham United 3-1 at home. Liverpool, 2-0 away winner over Sheffield Wednesday, is second, nudging Leeds into third place on goal average.

Burnley has 21 points and Liverpool, Leeds and fourth-placed West Bromwich Albion 20 each. Arsenal, Tottenham Hotspur and Sheffield United have 19 points each.

DOMINATED BY DEFENCE

Tight defences dominated the play in the Chelsea-Leeds game. Hollins' goal, fired from 25 yards and entering the net off a defender, made Leeds' third visit of the season to London another unhappy one.

Leeds earlier was beaten by Tottenham Hotspur and West Ham in London.

Inside forward Bill Irvine was the star of Burnley's forceful display against West Ham. He scored twice—in the 37th and 86th minutes—and set up the other goal.

After a drive of his was blocked, Andy Lochhead fastened on the ball and drove it in.

Irvine's second goal was a great solo effort.

Liverpool's better finishing power gained the club its win over Sheffield Wednesday, which had plenty of the ball but could not make much use of it.

Both Liverpool's goals came in the last 15 minutes—from inside right Roger Hunt and outside left Peter Thompson.

Incidents among the crowd marred the game and at least a dozen persons were removed from the ground by police.

There was trouble also at Manchester United's ground, where Blackburn Rovers forced a 2-2 draw.

In the first half, police broke up a fight in the stands and carried a bottle and some stones off the field.

In the third minute Manchester United goalkeeper Harry Gregg was sent off following a clash with Blackburn Rovers centre-forward Mike England, and Mike Harrison beat David Herd from the resulting penalty.

Providence Reds chased Cleveland Barons 3-2 and Hershey Bears walloped Buffalo Bisons 6-1 in the remainder of the Sunday schedule.

Both leaders also won Saturday night, the Americans downing Buffalo 5-3 while the Aces thumped Springfield 5-1. Cleveland nipped Hershey 3-2, Baltimore whitewashed Providence 3-0 and Pittsburgh Hornets took a 7-2 thrashing from Portland Buckaroos of the Western League in an interlocking game.

Pressure is building up for what looms as a U.S. college football championship game between Michigan State Spartans and Notre Dame.

The top-ranked Spartans won their eighth straight game Saturday, crushing Iowa 35-14 with the aid of four touchdowns by Clinton Jones, but Notre Dame saw to it they didn't get too cocky.

The Irish, seemingly gaining in momentum since their early-season loss to Purdue, piled it on Pittsburgh 43-13 with awesome power. Bill Wolski led the assault with five touchdowns.

Marlies Down Petes

Hawks Jump Into 4th

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines Black Hawks jumped into fourth place from eighth by defeating last - place London Nationals 6-4 Sunday night in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game.

In other junior games Sunday, Toronto Marlboros downed Peterborough Petes 8-5 and Montreal Junior Canadiens and Niagara Falls Flyers battled to a 2-2 tie. Saturday night, Oshawa Generals defeated Kitchener Rangers 8-5.

PACE MARLBOROS

At Toronto Sunday afternoon, the line of Tom Martin, Jim Davidson and Terry Caffery paced the Marlies with Martin and Caffery each scoring a pair. Davidson, Mike Byers, Brent Imlach and Jim Keon scored the other Toronto goals. Peterborough marksmen were Drake Jopling, Dale McLeide, Gord Tucker, Andre Lacroix and George Godanc.

After the game, Byers, Davidson and Doug Dunville boarded the Rochester Americans' plane and when the big injury - riddled Americans against Baltimore Clippers in the first game of a League night game in Rochester.

Devlin Wins Willis

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Bruce Devlin won the Willis Masters golf title Saturday, overcoming a five-stroke deficit on the final round as nightmarish winds blew Bob Charles' score to an eight-over-par 80.

Devlin, the slim Australian star, shot a pair of 72s on the day's two rounds and finished with a 72-hole total of 286, one stroke better than British Open champion Peter Thomson, also of Australia. Thomson carded two 74s.

Charles, the New Zealand lefthander, fired a 69 on the third round for a 208 and a five-stroke advantage over Devlin and Thomson. But then came his 80 in the treacherous southerly winds that hit the Kensington course, and a third-place finish at 288.

Doug Sanders of Ojai, Calif., tied for seventh at 294 after a brief challenge and Jack Nicklaus, U.S. Masters champion and record - breaking money winner, was one stroke farther behind.

South Africa's Gary Player withdrew after Friday's second round because of a painful back ailment.

Sets Land Speed Mark At 576

BONNEVILLE, Utah (AP)—Art Arfons boosted the world land speed record to 576 miles an hour Sunday, surviving a collision with a steel post which damaged his jet-powered car and ripped a tire from a rear wheel.

The record—a two-way average through the measured mile —returned to Arfons the speed title taken only last week by Craig Breedlove, who drove a streamlined jet car 555.127 m.p.h.

Arfons regained the record in the same car with which he set the record of 536.71 m.p.h. a year ago.

Arfons survived a 500 m.p.h. blowout. His car, the Green Monster, lilted slightly off the track as he emerged from the measured mile on the second of two runs and struck a steel post.

The impact tore into the fibreglass front, ripped a right front tire and tore the right rear tire off the careening vehicle.

Arfons, however, kept the car on a straight line and came to a stop three miles down the track.

He was shaken but unhurt.

Shenandoah One of Few Solid Hits This Season

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The man called Shenandoah almost didn't make it to the television channels this season.

It was touch and go whether Robert Horton, five-year veteran of Wagon Train and more recently star of Broadway and night clubs, would be able to fulfil his commitment to the series. Make it be did, and ABC is glad. Shenandoah is one of the few solid hits among the season's new shows.

At least the Monday night show seems to be a hit in the audience ratings despite cool responses by TV critics.

"I'd estimate the reviews were 60 per cent against the show," Horton said without vindictiveness. "Of the other 40 per cent, most were not completely favorable, but found things to like in it, particularly my own performance."

The plot device—an amnesiac in search of his identity—was scorned by the critics, but Horton finds it workable and dramatic.

His only doubts were whether he would be physically able to continue on the show.

He was shopping with his wife a few months ago and picked up a bag of groceries. Something snapped, causing intense pain in his back.

Doctors diagnosed his problem as a severe strain and warned that under exertion might bring serious results.

They figured the injury was due to some earlier accident.

For weeks, any movement brought a stab of pain to the actor. Meanwhile the start of the 1965-66 television season was approaching, and Shenandoah had only eight finished reels.

The prospect of Horton performing in a half-hour action drama seemed impossible. But he agreed to try.

"It was all worked out with great ingenuity," he said. "Never have I done so many closeups and over-the-shoulder shots. Never have so many stunt men and doubles been used for me."

His recovery is progressing to the point that he can now drive a car. Ride a horse? Forget it. He'll be on his own two feet until next season, at least.

Blues Bow To Redmen

Mustangs Defeat Gaels

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

University of Western Ontario Mustangs did themselves a favor by beating Queen's University Golden Gaels 26-12 Saturday.

They avoided a tough three-team playoff for the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association Football Conference championship.

But the Mustangs must still conquer University of Toronto Blues, the only team to beat them this season, if they want to win their first championship in six years.

Blues gained a sudden-death playoff, will be staged in the Mustangs' home park next Saturday.

The winner gets the Yates Cup, symbolic of the conference title.

The Blues were defeated 17-14 by McGill University Redmen as the conference concluded its regular schedule Saturday.

The victory Saturday enabled the Mustangs to clinch first place in the standings. They finished with a 4-1 won-lost record.

WESTERN CHALLENGED

Under conference rules, the second-place team can challenge the leader for the championship if it has taken points away from the leader by either a win or tie. The Blues defeated the Mustangs a week ago.

Fullback Art Froese paced the Mustangs' victory over Queen's with 13 points on a touchdown, a field goal, three converts and a single. Larry Burridge and Robbie Campbell also scored touchdowns for the Mustangs, while Robin Wearing got a single. Glen Penwarden and Hilliard Miles scored Queen's touchdowns, both unconverted.

In Montreal, McGill had to scramble all the way to win its first game of the season. Jim Dickie and Dick Fiedler each scored touchdowns for McGill. Brian Pilgrim picked up four points on two converts and two singles. Quarterback Rick Ripstein had a single.

The Blues got touchdowns from Bryce Taylor and Terry Sternberg. Both went unconverted. A two-point safety touch rounded out the Toronto scoring.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Victorian Era recorded his first victory in four starts by winning the $12,000 Sidney Dillon Stakes at Greenwood Race Track Saturday.

The three-year-old son of Victoria Park, owned by Allan Case of Toronto covered the eight furlongs in 1.38.

The victory was worth $7,000 and increased Victorian Era's earnings for the year to $86,653 in 17 races.

The daily double of What a Time and Shining Wings returned $552.40.

Mexican Comic Cantinflas Woos Audience

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The pint-sized comedian with the baggy pants, blackberry eyes and a mountain of black hair over a shaving accident braced him-self haughtily, sword poised, for the moment of truth as the bull thundered down on him.

Then his pants fell down. The bull, confused, ran the other way.

And so Cantinflas, Mexico's most famed and richest comedi-et toro and 20,000 fans at Dodger Stadium Sunday.

A charity performance, Fiesta Mexicana marked Cantinflas' U.S. debut as a comic bull-fighter.

But he had the audience in the palm of his hand even be-fore the show began.

As a comic, he is a latter-day Charlie Chaplin—a descrip-tion so apt that even Chaplin once called him the greatest comedian in the world.

Born Mario Moreno, one of 13 children of a poor family, he began to work in show business "while supposedly still going to medical school, to help bring in some money.

Cantinflas, at 48, is a million-aire many times over. His con-tributions to charity are re-puted to be enormous.

PROFESSOR PARDONED

OTTAWA (CP) — An official of the Nationalist Chinese em-bassy said Saturday that Pro-fessor Ming-Chih Peng, a for-mer staff member of McGill University in 1953, has been pardoned from a sentence he received at a court martial in Formosa last March 27.

Legal Action May Be Taken By Gas Co.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A move by more than 60 strik-ing service employees of Union Gas Co. Ltd. to extend picket lines to the company's com-pressor plant 25 miles south of Sarnia has been termed "il-legal" by company spokesman.

More than 400 workers, mem-bers of the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (CLC), struck the company's plants in Hamilton, Windsor and Sarnia when contract talks were ad-journed without settlement.

The striking workers in Ham-ilton returned to work Friday to continue contract talks.

At the compressor plant near Sarnia, picket lines were set up and observed by members of the Natural Gas Workers union (CLC). Company spokesman said the slowdown had no ju-risdiction" at the compressor plant, and if picketing contin-ued, "appropriate action" would be taken.

Company officials also said acts of vandalism had taken place at the plant. A spokesman said rocks were thrown through windows, water heaters were pushed over inside the company's service centre in Sarnia.

SEEK POLICE AID

"As a result of these and other harassments, we have had to seek police protec-tion for men providing emer-gency service," a spokesman said.

The company's statement re-garding possible "legal action" said lawyers' letters were sent on the heels of an application for a court order to restrict picketing at Union Gas' Wind-sor service depot.

In Windsor, company officials said they would take action to "compel pickets to dem-onstrate peacefully and allow employees and others to enter unmolested and free from intim-idation."

The company said Windsor pickets had on three occasions refused to let supervisors on to the company property to main-tain emergency service.

The union is seeking a 20-per-cent across-the-board in-crease in a one-year agreement with increased health, welfare and pension benefits.

Workers now receive from $2.16 to $2.75 an hour.

Chinese Run Hong Kong Store To Acquire Foreign Exchange

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Faced with the problem of ac-quiring foreign exchange for purchases from the West, China has opened a large new low-price department store on this bustling island.

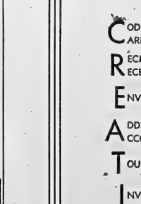
Its window dressing will never win any prizes for eye-catching appeal, but inside it is as brightly lit and spacious as many Western suburban stores.

Prices, too, are in some cases cheaper than those of compar-able goods at other stores in this British Crown colony—and that is saying something in a place which has the reputation of being the shoppers' paradise of the Orient.

On the ground floor, for in-stance, a set of men's good-quality cotton underwear can be bought for the equivalent of 77 cents, while ready-made light-weight suits of dacron and wool cut in the latest styles sell for $36.

Women buyers may be disap-pointed by the dresses. Although made of good material and cheap at about $3.50, they are rather dowdy in style. But by way of compensation there are exquisite hand - embroidered pure silk blouses for $5.80 and attractive brocade housecoats in hush reds and blues for less than $8.60.

Leatherware is cheap, and ob-servers have been quick to note that the packaging and bottles of cosmetics sometimes bear marked resemblances to those of certain well - known American and European products.



NO COPIES

But no hint of copying could be found at the food counters on the second floor. These are strictly Chinese, and the air is full of their aromatic smell.

Medical equipment and toys are also on sale, the latter in musical instruments. Pianos, flutes and clarinets are mixed with the traditional Chinese stringed instruments and Span-ish-style guitars.

Instalment terms are avail-able for low-priced radios, elec-tric sewing machines and bicy-cles.

On the third floor, a wide range of well-designed materi-als, pottery and glassware in traditional styles and good qual-ity men's and women's shoes are for sale at prices which are

B.C. Govt. Will Take Hand In Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Les Peterson said Sat-urday the British Columbia gov-ernment could not stand idly by if oil workers extend a strike to all oil refineries in B.C.

Mr. Peterson said the govern-ment "will not tolerate a threat to the provincial economy."

The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union (CLC) earlier Saturday began striking the strike all oil companies in B.C. unless there was a settlement of the dispute by Nov. 15.

"The B.C. government would not tolerate that situation," Mr. Peterson said in an interview.

R. T. Philp, the union's inter-national representative, said the Nov. 15 deadline was set under pressure of the B.C. Labor Relations Act, which stipulates that strikes must occur within 10 days of a government - super-vised strike vote. The union failing to meet the deadline for-feits the right to strike.

Mr. Philp said the industry has been given a final round to settle the dispute since union members went on strike at five British Columbia Oil Co. refin-eries from here to Ontario eight weeks ago.

Union members struck the Imperial Oil Co. refinery in nearby Port Moody on Friday.

Mr. Peterson said the provin-cial labor department has not become involved in the dispute because the union and companies wished to negotiate on a nation-wide basis.

However, he added, "if the economy is threatened the labor department in Victoria will act."

The union said the Port Moody walkout occurred after Imperial refused a 24-cent-an-hour wage increase and seni-ority rights to 35 men return-ing to work after being sus-pended for refusing overtime.

The larger dispute involves union demands of job security in face of automation in the in-dustry and a pay increase of 50 cents an hour over two years. Current basic wage in the in-dustry is $2.75 an hour.

Imperial spokesmen said supervisory personnel were run-ning the big Port Moody refin-ery Saturday.

UP ONE FIFTH OF POINT—The consumer price index edged up one fifth of a point to 139.3 for October, just a shade below its record high of 139.5 in July, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported. The index slid to 139.4 in August and 139.1 in September. The Index, based on 1949 consumer prices equalling 100, was 135.6 in October last year. The bureau said higher prices for clothing, health and personal care, housing and recreation and reading, sent the general index up despite lower food prices. (CP Newsmap).

Hotel 'Skips' Frequently Display Considerable Nerve

TORONTO (CP) — Now the summer holiday season is over, hotel managers are totting up their profits—and, on the red side of the ledger, their losses to "skips."

People who sneak away without paying their bills are of three sorts, says Joe Gershon, president of the Toronto Hotel Credit Managers' Association.

There are real professionals who make their living at it. There are enthusiastic amateurs. A third group is composed of honest people who find themselves tempted when short of money.

"You can't tell a skip by looking at him," the association says.

"They usually operate in large downtown hotels with big staffs and plenty of suites. They move from one hotel to another, staying several days in each.

"The skips are good tippers because they don't want the hotel staff against them. They usually sign for everything—bar, restaurant, cleaning, room service—but they are very careful about using the telephone. They don't want to leave any clues."

Large hotels usually experience about one skip a day during the busy season and credit managers are continually amazed by their nerve.

TOOK SIX ROOMS

A large Toronto hotel reported the case of a skip who left one room in the hotel, went downstairs and registered for another room.

His repeated this operation five times, using different names with different clerks.

It wasn't until the room clerks exchanged notes that they realized they were dealing with the same man.

But the life of a skip is not an easy one. Hotels have their own methods for dealing with the eager check-out men.

Maids and bellhops report on a guest's clothing and luggage. If it is cheap, it could mean the man is a skip, willing to leave his clothes behind in favor of a hasty retreat.

When a bill reaches $50 with no payment in sight, the guest's registration card is checked to see if he is known to the hotel. The next check—a lot more thorough—comes when the bill reaches $100.

The guest is telephoned by the credit manager and courteously asked how he intends paying his bill. The credit manager also asks if the guest has a credit card or a bank courtesy card.

It's all part of the job for the credit manager, who must "get tough" rather than face the risk of finding an empty room with no clue as to the skip's identity.

Arrested Man Hangs Self In Jail Cell

ORILLIA (CP)—The body of George Thompson, 37, of Orillia was found hanging in a cell at the town police station shortly after he was arrested and charged with drunk driving Saturday.

Provincial police said Thompson was arrested Saturday night after they investigated a complaint. A policeman making a routine check found Thompson hanging in his cell about a half hour after he had been jailed.

Thompson was the father of Charles P. Thompson, 28, of Toronto, the self-styled minister and spiritual adviser to the leader of a Toronto Nazi group.

The younger Thompson was sentenced last Friday to eight months in jail after being convicted of public mischief for telling police he had been kidnapped and held for several hours by anti-Nazis.

Two Novels Among Latest New Books

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Emperor of Ice - Cream (McClelland and Stewart), Brian Moore's fifth novel, is the story of a youth in Ireland during the "phoney war" of 1939-40.

A failure at school because he is too busy musing, usually about girls, to do any work, Gavin Burke is delighted to find he can sign on as a first aid attendant in Belfast and be paid a fairly good wage just for waiting for things to happen.

Once he joins up he finds there are disadvantages, such as a sadistic squad chief, but he is generally content to drift along. In the course of drifting he loses his girl and his chance of graduating from high school but he is too occupied with petty adventures to care.

It seems the war will never come. But it does. In a single night of horror, and Gavin finds resources of strength he never mined before. He refuses to flee to the safety of Dublin and he ends up preparing the bodies of air raid victims for identification and, burial.

Gavin's self - discovery gives this novel a relatively happy ending, especially in comparison with earlier works by the Irish-born author, a Canadian citizen who no longer lives in this country.

Sketches of Old Toronto (Longmans Canada) is the third book of local history by Frank N. Walker, a Toronto doctor, aided in research by his wife. It concentrates on the period between 1793, when Governor Simcoe arrived, and 1851, when Jenny Lind gave a memorable concert in St. Lawrence Hall.

Amongst Thistles and Thorns (McClelland and Stewart) is the second novel of Austin C. Clarke, born in Barbados, who came to Canada 10 years ago and now is a professional writer and broadcaster.

The book deals with childhood poverty in the West Indies. It is not an adventure, except in so far as all experience, seen through the eyes of a child, is an adventure.

The child hero is poor, black illegitimate — the prey of white and black snobs alike. The only development in the story is that — perhaps — his father may marry his mother, though he did not care to in the boy's first nine years of life.

The value of the book is in the pictures of people, giant-sized, brightly colored and grotesque, as the boy sees them.

Quebec Seat, Waterloo North Are Two Of the Oldest Loyal Seats in Canada

TRUDY

"WASHDAY!"

OTTAWA (CP) — St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville in Quebec has a history of loyalty to the Liberal party that dates back to Confederation in 1867.

Waterloo North in Ontario has elected either a Conservative, Welchel or a Liberal ever since 1908.

Those two are among the constituency loyal records that will be up for renewal or removal in Monday's federal elections.

In St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville, former Liberal cabinet minister Yvon Dupuis is running as an independent Liberal against official Liberal, Conservative and NDP opponents.

The constituency was established in its present form under the 1933 redistribution and has returned a Liberal member ever since.

From 1867 to 1892 the area was made up of three constituencies—Iberville, St. Johns and Napierville. Each went Liberal in seven consecutive elections from 1867 to 1891.

Under 1892 redistribution, Napierville became part of a Laprairie - Napierville constituency and the counties of St. Johns and Iberville were amalgamated into St. Johns - Iberville. In 10 elections from 1896 to 1930, these two ridings went Liberal.

CARLETON CLOSE RIVAL

Its closest rival for continuous loyalty to one party is Carleton in the Ottawa area which voted Conservative from 1867 to 1962, then swung narrowly into the Liberal camp in 1963.

Russell, also in the Ottawa area, has been Liberal since 1887. The Liberals have captured Gloucester (N.B.) since 1900, Nipissing (Ont.) since 1921, Essex East, Renfrew North and Welland (all Ont.) since 1935.

The Liberals have also claimed victory in several ridings ever since their formation. Some of the share:

From 1917: Hull (Que.), Montreal Hochelaga and Montreal St. Denis.

From 1925: Kenora - Rainy River (Ont.) and Montreal St. Marie.

Royal (N.B.) has been Conservative in every election since 1914 when it was established in its present form. Three others, in Ontario, have been Conservative ever since their formation in 1924: Dufferin-Simcoe, Grenville - Dundas and Prince Edward - Lennox.

MacINNIS SINCE 1935

The New Democratic Party and its predecessor, the CCF, has a loyalty record dating back to 1935 in Vancouver East. In 10 elections, it has returned only two MP—the late Angus MacInnis in four elections from 1935 to 1949 and Harold Winch, a candidate again Monday, in the next five.

The oldest Waterloo North string began in 1908 when the late Mackenzie King won it for the Liberals.

The Conservatives struck back with William Weichel in 1911 but the Liberals too kower again in 1917 and held on until William's nephew, O. W. (Mike Weichel) carried it back into the Conservative camp in 1958 and repeated his success in 1962 and 1963.

Mike Weichel isn't running in this election. He has retired for health reasons. If the Conservatives come through this time, it will be with Frederick J. Speckeen, not with a Weichel.

Before the present Liberal-Weichel run began, the Conservatives won Waterloo North in five elections, twice with H. Bruce and three times with J. E. Seagram.

Man's Ability to Survive Depends on Saying 'No'

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Man's ability to survive today depends on his ability to say no.

To endure, a fellow must learn to turn a deaf ear to enticing suggestions. For example, here are a few commonplace invitations that can lead only to confusion, bankruptcy, regret or disaster:

"It's only a small friendly game, and we'll put a limit on the size of the bets. You'll be home before midnight, I promise you."

"But supposing I am the one to go first, Henry. Would you want to marry again, supposing you met someone who was really attractive? Now tell me the truth."

"Let me pick up the tickets for the show, and you handle the dinner tab for the bunch. Okay?"

"Try one of these. It's a recipe I made up myself. You mix a quart of gin, a quart of creme de menthe, a pound of brown sugar, three ounces of prune juice and . . ."

"I don't care, how many fillings you've got, Henry, anybody can crack walnuts with his teeth. There's a trick to it—it's all a matter of leverage. Open your mouth, put the walnut right there and . . ."

"We'd appreciate it very much if you'd accept the chairmanship of our PTA committee on readership problems in the sixth grade. It will take only a few minutes of your time each month."

"Anybody can dance the frug. Come on, step out on the dance floor and I'll show you."

"Buy now, pay at your leisure."

"Be a sport, Dad. If you make the down payment, I'll save up and meet all the installments. Cross my heart I will."

"You don't have to take that kind of language from him, dear, even if he is an officer of the law. Tell him who you are."

"If, after taking 10 lessons in our home course in karate, you aren't able to handle any bully in your neighborhood, we will gladly refund your money."

"Just climb out from behind that wheel, buster, and I'll show you what I mean."

What's foreign about Mrs. Reed of Oshawa?
Bell is owned — by far the biggest part of it, anyway — by people like Margaret Reed.
When we counted up recently, there were some 208,000 Bell shareholders. Over 203,000 of them were Canadian residents. And altogether, they held 93.6% of the total shares.
That's how it has been for a good many years now. So if some people think Bell is foreign-owned — well, they'd better not let Mrs. Reed, or any of those 203,000 other Canadians hear them say so.

LESS COST
CONTINUOUSLY! OIL HEAT
Almost everywhere in Ontario and Quebec
– oil costs less to heat your home than gas or electricity.
So if you're interested in savings in home heating . . .
Phone the oil supplier of your choice and let him explain why oil is the lowest-cost heating fuel you can buy. Depending on where you live, you can save $50 or more every year on fuel bills by choosing oil instead of gas—and save much, much more by choosing oil instead of electricity. This is one of the reasons most Canadian homes heat with oil. Another is the dependability of oil. Your dealer is on the job 24-hours a day to give you personalized, no-cost service.
Safe—unquestionably! Oil is non-explosive. You could safely extinguish a lighted match in it. Of course, all fuels are safe—if handled and consumed with proper care. Oil, however, is safe under all conditions.
Clean—extraordinarily! Dark streaks above vents and radiators occur with all systems—oil, gas, electricity—but not because of the heating fuel. The cause is dust and grime entering the house and circulating in heated air.
When you are considering a new heating system, remember the known dependability and economy of oil heat.

Forces' Poll To Decide S. Hastings

Liberals Largest Party Group
Majority Plea Falls On Deaf Electorate Ears

By BEN WARD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prime Minister Pearson's plea for a majority government fell on many deaf ears Monday as Canadians elected their fourth minority Parliament in 8½ years.

The Conservative and New Democratic parties managed scattered gains to offset the Liberals' small increase in seats in their traditional Quebec bastion. But generally the outcome was almost a repeat of the last election.

With all seats reported, an astonishing 223 of the 265 seats showed no political change from 1963.

The standings:

Communications disrupted by a storm kept one seat in doubt until this morning.

A Liberal held a 28-vote lead in Algoma West with one remote poll unable to report Monday night because a storm knocked out communications.

LOSES TWO MINISTERS

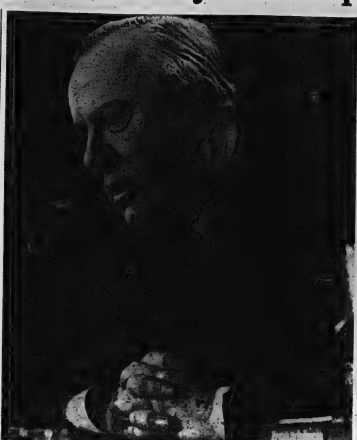
Mr. Pearson, who lost two of his cabinet ministers, said he was disappointed but "all of us are concerned now with carrying on in the best interests of the country."

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said the prime minister called the election to obtain a Commons majority and "he has received his answer."

T. C. Douglas, leader of the NDP, said the election was useless and unnecessary and another would follow soon. He called on a possible NDP-Liberal coalition except in "some unforeseen crisis." A few hours earlier External Affairs Minister Martin had said such a coalition might be studied.

Social Credit Leader Thompson called the election "Pearson's greatest political blunder" but said there should not be another election until 1969.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said his party would support legislation of benefit to Canadians.



SERVICE VOTE NEXT

There remained a possibility that some narrowly-won victories might be reversed when results of the armed services vote are announced Saturday and added to the civilian results in each riding. There was almost no chance of this changing the overall situation.

A new session of Parliament is not expected to be called until early in 1966, probably in January.

The question then will be the willingness or otherwise of the opposition parties to unite on a confidence issue and overthrow DEJECTED PRIME MINISTER — Prime Minister Pearson announces the failure of his party to form a majority government in Ottawa Monday night. Mr. Pearson said Parliament now must carry on in the best interests of the country.

Denis Sent To Trial February 8

OTTAWA (CP) — Raymond Denis' preliminary hearing into an alleged conspiracy and the former executive assistant to the federal immigration minister was committed for trial on two charges arising out of the Lucien Rivard affair.

In the wake of a surprise defence motion to dispense with the rest of the preliminary hearing, then set in third day, Magistrate Glenn Strike committed Denis for trial in county court at sessions starting here Feb. 8.

No specific date was fixed for the trial and Denis' $5,000 bail was continued. Bail of $5,000 for Mrs. Marie Rivard, wife of the convicted dope smuggler, also was continued. She was put on bail to guarantee her appearance as a witness.

Denis declined Magistrate Strike's invitation to make a statement or to call any defence.

The committal followed a four-hour discussion between defence counsel Louis Assaly and Crown attorney John Cassells while the hearing was suspended.

FOLLOWS DECISION

Mr. Assaly had introduced an unusual motion for immediate committal after a decision by Magistrate Strike to admit certain evidence to which the defence objected.

Mr. Assaly first asked for leave to appeal the decision to the court of appeal but was turned down.

He then said "I'm waiving the balance of the preliminary hearing as I am entitled to do and submitting that you should commit my client at this time."

A 15-minute adjournment was called but it stretched to more than 90 minutes before the hearing was suspended until the afternoon.

Two Lost In Madoc Bushland

MADOC — A search was being pressed through bush country north of here today for two brothers missing on a hunting trip since Monday afternoon.

Deer hunters in Queensboro, 12 miles north of here, joined provincial police as the hunt continued for Gordon Ramsey, 40, and his 43-year-old brother Ray Ramsey, both of Bannockburn.

They were at last seen by a third brother, Robert Ramsey heading through the bush back to their car. When Robert Ramsey reached the automobile, parked on a country road, there was no sign of the two men.

Provincial police said, the plight of Gordon Ramsey might be aggravated by the fact he has had a bad back condition.

Aussie-U.S. Force Cleans Up Viet Cong

SAIGON (Reuters)—A combined U.S. and Australian force virtually annihilated a Viet Cong main-force battalion near Bien Hoa Monday in one of the most savage battles of the Viet Nam war, it was announced today.

In a bloody encounter fought in dense jungle some 30 miles northeast of Saigon, U.S. and Australian troops killed an estimated 291 guerrillas, a U.S. spokesman said.

U.S. losses were officially described as "moderate," but a reliable source said they were actually the heaviest suffered by the Americans in a single encounter since the marine victory over a Viet Cong regiment south of Chu Lai last August, which cost more than 230 U.S. dead and wounded.

Australian troops of the 1st Battalion, Royal Australian Regiment, joined the Americans in Monday's battle.

Three companies of the U.S. 173rd Airborne Brigade, totalling about 500 men, took part.

The Viet Cong force was estimated at more than a battalion, which could mean anything up to 600 men.

The whole U.S. force was encircled by Viet Cong troops, on two occasions during the six-hour battle, but each time they smashed the Viet Cong ring.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Strong northerly winds have brought a strong outbreak of cold air into Ontario and its depth indicates the cold spell will last several days.

Little change is forecast for today but some clearing will occur in most areas this evening and overnight temperatures will drop sharply.

Cloudiness will return to most areas Wednesday. Snow flurries are expected in the north and southwestern Ontario late in the day. Temperatures will remain well below the seasonal normals.

Princess, Fighting Cold, Stays To End of Dazzling Ball

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fighting fatigue and laryngitis, Britain's Princess Margaret said little and danced not at all at a dazzling charity ball that broke up in the wee hours Monday. The occasion was a dinner-dance for the World Adoption International Fund.

One incident marred the evening's gaiety, but only briefly. The princess, in a cornflower blue gown, wore a diamond crown and a necklace with marble-sized diamonds. Her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, chatted affably throughout the dinner with any and all about him, including comedian Bob Hope.

The princess appeared momentarily upset, witnesses said, by one incident. An unidentified man in a brown business suit, a drink in one hand, made his way to within 10 feet of where she sat when security officers stopped him.

The man, described by witnesses as "obnoxiously drunk," put up a shouting unintelligible and officers hustled him out of the ballroom.

Police did not arrest the man because, they said, the incident had occurred on private property. He was released and cut off down the street.

Princess Margaret put in a long day. She didn't return to her hotel until about 3 a.m., Monday, after an exclusive Hollywood party at a nightclub.

She began growing hoarse after arising early to look at British-made goods at a department store.

The hoarseness increased as she visited an art museum, had lunch with Hollywood luminaries and watched movies being made at Universal Studios.

She attended, despite her laryngitis, to carry on today, visiting a British old folks' home, the California Institute of Technology and Jet Propulsion Laboratory in nearby Pasadena, attending a reception at the home of the British consul-general and yet another Hollywood party tonight.

LEE GRILLS

Airliner Crashes, 58 Die

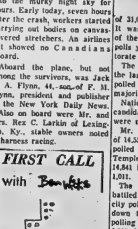
CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—A jet airliner within landing sight of the runway crashed and exploded during a thunderstorm Monday night killing 58 of the 62 persons aboard.

Five persons were thrown clear of the exploding wreckage. One died in hospital. Four lived, but one was in critical condition.

The American Airlines three-engined 727 jet smacked near the top of a 300-foot wooded hillside a mile and a half from the greater Cincinnati airport after a flight from New York.

"About 75 feet more and he [veteran pilot Capt. Daniel Teelin would have made it," said William Wilkerson, operations director at the airport in Kentucky 13 miles from downtown Cincinnati.

The crash was the third major air disaster in the world in less than a week.



96 DIED EARLIER

The two other crashes were last Wednesday. An Argentine Air Force C-54 carrying 68 persons crashed near Costa Rica and no survivors were found. Thirty French soldiers were killed when a French military DC-3 went down in French Somaliland.

In Monday night's disaster, the wreckage flashed fi a me a into the murky night sky for hours. Early today, seven hours after the crash, workers started carrying out bodies on canvas-covered stretchers. An airlines list showed no Canadians aboard.

Aboard the plane, but not among the survivors, was Jack F. A. Flynn, 44, son of F. H. Flynn, president and publisher of the New York Daily News.

Also on board were Mr. and Mrs. Rex C. Larkin of Lexington, Ky., auto dealers noted in harness racing.

Doug Alkenbrack, Rod Webb Win

For the second consecutive time traditionally Tory Hastings South literally tossed its federal election result into the hands of the armed services yesterday.

A below-record constituency vote gave Lee Grills, Progressive Conservative candidate, a majority of 719 over former sitting member Robert Temple, Liberal.

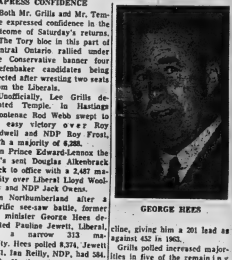
According to election headquarters here, Grills polled 14,558 votes; Temple 13,837, and Thorold Hoskin, NDP candidate, 1,284.

The political future of Grills and Temple lies in the vote of the armed services at home and abroad. These figures will be released at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The armed services vote swung the tide to Temple in the 1963 elections. They gave him a majority of 598 to overcome the Grills "home" lead of 45 votes.

EXPRESS CONFIDENCE

Both Mr. Grills and Mr. Temple expressed confidence in the outcome of Saturday's returns.



The Tory bloc in this part of Central Ontario rallied under the Conservative banner four Diefenbaker candidates being elected after wresting two seats from the Liberals.

Unofficially, Lee Grills defeated Temple, in Hastings Frontenac Rod Webb swept in an easy victory over Roy Eadwell of NDP Bay Frost, with a majority of 6,288.

In Northumberland after a terrific see-saw battle, former PC minister Clarence Hees defeated Pauline Jewett, Liberal, by a narrow 313 majority. Hees polled 8,374, Jewett 8,061, Ian Reilly, NDP, had 584.

The Hastings South electorate sent 29,560 voters to the polls in yesterday's election. This was 1,367 below the 83 percent vote cline, giving him a 201 lead as against 452 in 1963.

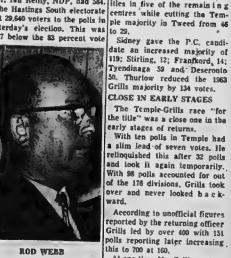
Grills polled increased majorities in five of the remaining seven while cutting the Temple majority in Tweed from 46 to 29.

Sidney gave the P.C. candidate an increased majority of 119; Sidney Station, 12; Frankford, 14; Tyendinaga 39 and Deseronto 26. Thurlow reduced the 1963 Grills majority by 134 votes.

CLOSE IN EARLY STAGES

The Temple-Grills race "for the title" was a close one in the early stages of returns.



With ten polls in Temple had a slim lead of seven votes. He relinquished this after 32 polls and took it again temporarily. With 98 polls accounted for out of the 176 divisions, Grills took over and never looked backward.

According to unofficial figures reported by the returning officer Grills led by over 600 with 151 polls reporting later increasing this to 700 at 160.

At one time Mr. Grills was reported leading by a 827 margin by but a final recount reduced the majority to 719.

Prince Edward-Lennox and Hastings - Frontenac winners Douglas Alkenbrack and Rod Webb were never in doubt as to their election.

Liberal Lloyd Woolsey gave Mr. Alkenbrack a few anxious moments at the start, but the former sitting member pulled of 31,007 in the 1963 elections. It was estimated 79.9 percent of the electorate went to the polls yesterday. The total electorate numbered 30,001.

The armed services vote in the last election saw 1,000 votes polled giving Temple his 598 majority.

Mr. Grills constituency vote of 14,556 was 230 less than that polled in the last election. Mr. Temple polled 13,830 votes in 14,841 in 1963, a decrease of 1,011.

The two political stalwarts battled to the last ditch at the city polling booths. They took it down to the wire with Grills polling 7,132 votes as against 6,827 for Temple, a difference of 189 votes.

In the 1963 elections Grills had a city majority of 318.

Mr. Grills gained majorities in seven of the eleven constituency polling centres, a decrease of one over 1963. This was Hungerford which gave Temple a majority of 11 as against a Grills majority of 100 in the last election.

Mr. Grills cut in the Trenton town a Temple majority of 1063 when the Liberal polled a majority of 689 as against 167 on Monday.

The Trenton RCAF Station also noted a Temple majority de-every return.

The day of the street parade and noisy demonstration is apparently over. There were no outward "shows" last night.

However there was a quiet confidence in Liberal headquarters after the final returns were submitted, a confidence arising out of the knowledge that ultimate victory through the armed services vote.

The Grills' triumph was optimistic, too, through the fact that the candidate had polled a much larger majority than in 1963.

Confidence was borne out in statements issued by both candidates in brief post - election statements.

At 11:45 p.m. with a Conservative plurality of 719 against him in the riding, Mr. Temple commented once more a definite result will have to be decided by the overseas vote.

"Naturally," he said, "I would be happier if I were ahead by 726 at this point.

"It happens that we're destined again in South Hastings to

As Goes The Student Vote . . .?

As parents went to the polls in Hastings South yesterday Belleville Collegiate students also voted.

Directed by student returning officers in conditions designed to simulate federal polling stations 72 per cent voters turned out.

The results? Pretty close to the actual thing for the government.

The Liberals received 49.1 per cent; 36.4 per cent went to the Conservatives and 23.5 per cent to the N.D.P.

Theoretically, the students were voting not for candidates — but on party principle.

wait for the service vote which will be announced Saturday.

"This year" he said, "the overseas vote is considerably higher than it was in April, 1963 he added.

"At present," he said, "there were service units stationed overseas in Sardinia, Cyprus and Kashmir.

"In 1963, from 1,175 it will probably run in the neighborhood of 1,500."

Mr. Grills also mentioned the inconclusive nature of the balloting because of the overseas vote.

"It's difficult to make any complete statement due to the narrow margin," he said.

"However, I'm very hopeful that it will be enough to decide in my favor.

"I feel the campaign was conducted on a very high plane,"

"Now I think the best thing we could have is a good night's rest," he added, signing off his latest election campaign.

In Hastings-Frontenac, despite the expected massive majority of Conservative Rod Webb, there was still no concession from Liberal Roy Cardwell by 9:30 p.m.

At that time, Mr. Webb had run up a massive 10,707 votes to the Liberal's 4,270 with Roy Frost, NDP candidate and a worker at Marmaraton Mining Company, trailing with 1,280.

NEWSROOM BUSY

Meanwhile the election was outwardly more or less quiet the newsrooms of The Intelligencer were busy with an augmented editorial staff manning a battery of telephones.

The calls were not as numerous as in other elections due to the excellent coverage given by television and radio. Newsmen from all parts of the district relayed returns to their headquarters.

The returning officer's headquarters was a hive of activity with officials doing a check on collecting returns and making them available for members of the covering news media.

Old Paper Cites Bravery Of Local Man

A phone call from a local resident this morning brought back some memories of a Belleville man who won a military medal in World War I and was subsequently killed in World War II when the Athenia was torpedoed and sunk. O. W. Manning's whose brother Samuel Mannings lives on McDonald Avenue in Belleville, served in the Ordnance Corps at the time of his death. He was employed with the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario while he lived in Belleville.

The resident calling on the phone today had found a copy of the Mail and Empire (now the Globe and Mail) dated November 15, 1918. The article read:

BELLEVILLE: NOVEMBER 15: Sgt. O. W. Mannings of this city has been awarded the military medal for an act of bravery on the field in France and has also won three stripes.

Dief Not Yet Ready To Retire

By KEN CLARK

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said Saturday night he says is available to form a government to forestall another election.

In a post-election television appearance here Diefenbaker said in answering questions that Prime Minister Pearson "has been saying that unless he gets a majority there would be another election in a year or 18 months."

Apparently referring to the calling of another election, he added:

"I say to him this. Constitutionally he has no such right."

Before Mr. Pearson "could take any such stand" it would be necessary for him to advise the Governor-General that a second party that believes it can form a strong administration, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

His party would "carry on the government of this country without delay and serve it at all times . . . the danger of another election to be brought on by this prime minister simply for dissolution (of Parliament)."

Diefenbaker was questioned by CBC commentators in Toronto after delivering a television address in Regina and in addition as the last election results trickled in.

The 70 - year - old politician said Mr. Pearson called the election to get a majority because he was relying on the result on the government of Canada.

VOTERS GAVE ANSWER

"He has received his answer," he said.

The Liberals were re-elected, but with a parliamentary minority as in the last Parliament.

Asked how long he expected to remain as Conservative leader, Mr. Diefenbaker said people have been predicting his political demise for years.

"I'll allow the pundits and the prophets to enjoy themselves while I continue to serve the people," he said.

He said he will continue to help assure that unity will be brought to Canada.

Earlier, Mr. Diefenbaker in his committee rooms and that of Mr. Pearson called an election Sept. 7 was that "we had to carry on."

He added:

"Without a majority, he (Pearson) cannot. I go no further at this moment, but I would say his potency has not been increased.

HOW SAY YOU NOW?

Mr. Pearson having called an election to get a majority "without which he could not carry on," Mr. Diefenbaker said he "looked forward with interest to his explanation as to what the prime minister would say now."

Mr. Diefenbaker spent election night in his military car on a Prince Albert siding. Wearing red sock-slippers, he watched the returns on television.

Aides said he got a particular delight out of watching Peter Dempsterfist, a publisher, appear as a CBC commentator. Mr. Regenstrief had predicted a Liberal majority. He was said to have "hooted" when the pollsaker explained on television why it did not happen.

Mr. Diefenbaker, clearly jubilant, invited the press corps from an adjoining car to have a piece of bilingual cake.

On one side, it was lettered with Always Chief. On the other it was Toujours le Chef.

Mr. Diefenbaker joked with reporters about the election night appearance of External Affairs Minister Martin on television.

Mr. Martin has a reputation for never using one word where two will do. Mr. Diefenbaker said Mr. Martin might have summed up the election with this comment:

"Never compute the quantity of your position until all the processes of incubation have been entirely completed."

Fire Razes Block in Brockville

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Four stores and two homes were reduced to rubble today by a spreading fire that blazed through a downtown block. One fireman was injured.

With damage already heavy, firemen from four departments fought the blaze still raging in two other stores and apartments above them.

Destroyed was Brockville's biggest furniture store, Adams furniture, Singer sewing Centre, Doyle's Men's Wear and the English Chiss Hall.

Also lost, south of the burning block on King Street, which is No. 2 Highway as it passes through this city of 18,700, were the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cravens and their two sons and Mr. and Mrs. William Connell and three children.

All stores in the two-storey, brick - front block had apartments above them and tenants, ranging from 13 to 25 were driven out.

Taken to hospital with broken leg and bruises after being hit by the section of a falling wall was Fire Chief Robert Bell of Smithville, chief of the Augusta fire department.

Mayor George E. Smith issued a plea for clothes for the victims made homeless. The exact number could not be determined immediately as some took refuge with friends and neighbors.

As the blaze spread along Home street close to the centre of town firemen worked feverishly to protect homes besides the two already destroyed.

Final Returns For Riding Late In Coming in

It happens every time!

Final returns for the Hastings South riding were not received at the office of returning officer William A. VanTassel until close to 11.30 last night.

But all the votes had been counted an hour or so before that time. However the results had to be checked by one of the candidate's committee rooms instead of to the returning officer.

From the time the first poll result was received shortly before 7.35, the four polls at the returning office never stopped ringing until all but one closed at 8 p.m.

OFFICE IN DOLDRUMS

Then the office was in the doldrums. The phones went silent and the returning officer and his staff waited — and waited.

Finally it was learned the long awaited results were at the committee rooms.

And the true results of all those one poll will have to remain in doubt until the official count is made.

One deputy returning officer phoned in his poll results, then shoved at his election papers into the ballot box which can't be opened until the official count is made.

Seek Home For Retarded

TRENTON — Following last weekend's meeting of the Trenton-Brighton and District Association for the Retarded, president Bert Boers and several executive members decided to visit Smiths Falls — to enquire into ways and means of establishing a home for retarded adults in this area.

Mr. Boers has an ambitious plan whereby the association would buy a farm west of Trenton and turn the farmhouse into a shelter for adults. A barn on the property could be used to stable animals. The men would be taught skills; the women housekeeping, gardening and other skills.

Primarily it would be a haven for many whose families are unable to give them expert care.

Retarded children from this area attend school for the retarded until they are 18. After that, there seems to be no place for them in society. Parents do their best, but there is the constant worry what becomes of the children should either parent die.

Mr. Boers feels a "real home" would be the answer.

3 New-guard Liberals Had Easy Victories

QUEBEC (CP) — The Liberals' three new-guard intellectuals, Jean Marchand, Gerard Pelletier and Pierre Elliott Trudeau, all were elected Monday in their first tries for elective office.

Mr. Marchand, 47, former president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and also once a member of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism, emerged on top in Quebec West after a see-saw battle with Lucien Plourde, two-term Creditiste MP.

Mr. Plourde was one of the six former Social Credit MPs who pledged their support to the Liberals after the 1963 election and then retracted when their party threatened them with expulsion.

In Montreal Hochelaga, newspaper columnist Pelletier, 46, former editor-in-chief of Montreal La Presse, swamped his three opponents. The runner-up was New Democrat Claude Richer.

Hochelaga had been the preserve for 25 years of Liberal Raymond Eudes, who also retired from politics with this election.

Mr. Trudeau, 45, law professor and journalist, won in Montreal Mount Royal with a big margin over New Democrat Charles Taylor. The seat had been held since 1949 by Alan Macnaughton, Liberal Speaker of the last Parliament, who is returning to his law practice.

Rod Webb Easy Winner In Hastings-Frontenac

With just over 70 per cent of the 23,185 voters going to the polls, Progressive Conservative incumbent Rod Webb of Norwood, handily won the riding of Hastings-Frontenac in Monday's federal election.

The Progressive Conservative candidate from Norwood, who took over the riding following the death of the late Sidney Smith, more than doubled the vote of his nearest competitor Liberal Roy Cadwell.

The vote was Mr. Webb 11,305, Mr. Cadwell 5075, and N.D.P. candidate Roy Frost 1305. Both of Mr. Webb's opponents lost their $200 deposits.

The Hastings-Frontenac riding was never in doubt from the receipt of the first polling booth results. Of the 25,185 eligible voters, 17,743 persons went to the polls.

HASTINGS POLLS

Mr. Webb's home poll at Norwood gave him 392 votes with Cadwell receiving 88 and Frost 22. At Havelock the vote went Webb 252, Cadwell 102 and Frost 48.

Hastings county polls went as follows:

Election Breaks With Tradition

OTTAWA (CP) — The voters toppled some long-lived traditions in Monday's federal election.

In St. Jean-Napierville they ended the longest tradition of loyalty to one party in Canada's history by electing a Conservative. That area had returned Liberals in every other election since Confederation.

In Halifax and Kings, for the first time since 1930 constituency voters elected MPs from other than the party which won most seats in the country.

In Algoma West, they came close to ousting a 35-year veteran of the Commons. Liberal George Nixon, first elected in 1940, had only a slender margin over his Conservative opponent when counting ended for the night — with one poll still to come.

But in some ridings, voters kept traditions alive.

Renfrew South for the 11th consecutive election picked a member of the party that won the most seats in the country by returning a Liberal, tying a record set by Richmond-Wolfe in 11 elections from 1867 to 1908. Renfrew South began its present string in 1930.

NO WEICHEL, SO — LIBERAL

Waterloo North adhered to a custom dating back to 1949 by electing a Liberal. Ever since that election 57 years ago it has returned either a Liberal or a Weichel. This time there was no Weichel in the field to replace C. O. (Mike) Weichel who retired for health reasons after three victories in a row for the Conservatives.

External Affairs Minister Martin won his 10th consecutive election in Essex East, retaining his title of dean of the Commons which he first entered 36 years ago.

Two MPs who first entered the House in 1940 continued their victory string—Conservative Lucien Diefenbaker in Prince Albert and Works Minister McIlraith in Ottawa West.

Three men with continuous Commons service dating from 1945 are back again — Liberal Jean T. Richard in Ottawa East, Conservative Douglas Harkness in Calgary North and NDP member H. W. (Bert) Herridge in Kootenay West.

Pearson to Have Problems Choosing New Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Monday's general election result presents Prime Minister Pearson with a problem of cabinet reconstruction which has wide ramifications.

Mines Minister MacNaught and Agriculture Minister Hays were defeated in the Conservative sweeps of Prince Edward Island and Alberta. Hazen Argue, former CCF MP seeking election as a Liberal in Saskatchewan, also went down to defeat.

This leaves Mr. Pearson with three provinces without any Liberal MPs from which to choose his cabinet ministers. Moreover, the minority position of his administration poses difficulties in elevating any present cabinet minister to the Senate to facilitate a cabinet shuffle.

There now are 11 vacancies in the Senate and there are 32 senators who can choose by next June 1 to retire at age 75 and receive a pension of $8,000. That leaves ample room for any appointments.

TAKE NO CHANCES

However, appointment of any Liberal MP to the Senate would create a vacancy in the House and a byelection. And minority government is anxious to avoid the possible loss of any Commons support.

The biggest topic of speculation in Ottawa is who Mr. Pearson will pick for the important agriculture portfolio. Traditionally the post is held by a Prairie MP. The only Prairie Liberal elected to the new House is Roger Teillet of St. Boniface, Man., now veterans minister.

Maurice Sauve, MP for the tiny Quebec riding of Iles-de-la-Madeleine which will be absorbed into a larger riding in the redistribution of constituencies which now is due, is forestry minister with responsibility for eastern agriculture.

One of the uncertainties is whether Mr. Sauve will switch to" western agriculture and, perhaps more important, whether western agriculture would "take to" him politically.

WINTERS IN RUNNING

One other candidate for the cabinet — although unlikely for agriculture—is Robert H. Winters, reserves minister and Liberal government of Louis St. Laurent. An engineer and business man, he ran in the Toronto Rosedale riding of York West.

Other possibilities are the three new looks Liberals elected in Quebec, editor Gerard Pelletier, academician Pierre Elliott Trudeau, and labor leader Jean Marchand. Of these, Mr. Marchand appears to be favored.

Although Mr. Pearson represents an Ontario constituency, Algoma East, his cabinet responsibility can be regarded as all Canadian. Appointment of Mr. Winters and Mr. Marchand would give Quebec and Ontario nine ministers apiece. This would be in line with the new equal Liberal representation in the Commons from the two central provinces.

Reckoning on Monday's election results, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta now have no cabinet representation. The other provinces have one apiece except British Columbia, with two, and Ontario and Quebec 9.

Douglas A. Alkenbrack Gains Large Plurality In P. E.-Lennox Win

PICTON — Traditionally Conservative Prince Edward - Lennox yesterday returned Douglas A. Alkenbrack to Ottawa with the PC candidate rolling up a plurality of approximately 3,000 votes over his Liberal and NDP opponents.

Mr. Alkenbrack gained about half of his overall plurality in his home county of Lennox with his Prince Edward majority being just over 1400 votes.

The Prince Edward count was Alkenbrack 3575, Lloyd Woolsey, Liberal 3130, and Owen, NDP 357.

Following the vote tabulation last night, the successful Progressive Conservative candidate expressed his appreciation to party workers at his committee rooms.

"I salute you for a job well done," he told an exuberant crowd of riding workers. "I humble before you to assure you that I might represent you in the way you would like."

One of the surprises in the Prince Edward vote was the increased PC vote at the Picton Army Camp which at the last election went heavily Liberal.

The vote by township in Prince Edward was as follows:

Minority Again

Canada's fifth election in eight years has ended, disappointingly but predictably, with another minority administration. The Liberals have held on to the reins of government, but once again have no clear advantage.

At dissolution the Liberals had 127 seats and their standing today remains substantially the same. The Conservatives, with 92 seats in the last Commons, have improved their position slightly.

The New Democratic Party, with 18 seats at dissolution, have gained at least three seats and the possibility of a Liberal-NDP coalition looms as a possibility if the country is to have effective government in the days ahead. NDP leader Tommy Douglas has indicated the price of such a coalition is the adoption of part of the NDP platform. Beyond that is the possibility of yet another election in about a year or 18 months' time.

The Liberals finished with a clear lead in both Ontario and Quebec. In the Maritimes, however, the Conservatives gained six seats—two in Prince Edward Island and four in Nova Scotia.

Former Conservative cabinet ministers George Hees (trade) and Richard Bell (immigration) were returned in Northumberland and Ottawa Carleton respectively.

In South Hastings, Conservative Lee Grills, last night held a majority of 726, with 14,556 votes to Liberal Bob Temple's 13,830. Mr. Temple, who squeezed in by a narrow margin in 1963 on the strength of the service vote will have to win a big slice of the 1,500 or so service votes on this occasion if he is to retain the seat.

From the point of view of the national interest, this election has achieved little if anything. Another long and costly appeal to the voters has simply brought us back to the point of indecision we had reached last spring. Prime Minister Pearson embarked when he went to the country in the hope of achieving a clear mandate.

It is not the voter who has failed. Rather it is the government which, faced with a minority but not untenable situation, has failed to govern in the manner it was capable of. There are now hints of yet another—and possibly futile—attempt in a year or so to secure majority government. But Canadians have had enough of elections and electioneering. For all the lack of a strong party mandate, Canada is now entitled to a firm hand in Ottawa, an end to party strife and some promise of orderly progress for the nation as a whole.

Princess' U.S. Visit

Recently we felt to wondering if that master of the dance, Fred Astaire, had finally hung up his shoes. The answer would seem to be in the affirmative. Astaire, now past 60, is a symbol of an age now dead and an art form that has been superseded by such phenomena as the frug and the watusi.

Still, it is good to see he is still around—as well as the rival Gene Kelly. It has taken Princess Margaret to bring the two back into the light once again. At a Hollywood party, the Queen's sister danced with Astaire, Kelly and Danny Kaye.

The princess and her husband seem to be enjoying their American tour. It is probably the most informal Royal tour ever held, as the couple take to such interesting modes of transportation as the San Francisco cable car.

Thus far the American Americans are getting a closer look at the princess and her husband than would be possible on a more tightly-organized and formal schedule.

"She is awful small but awful pretty too," said one woman of the princess. And there was this gem from a small boy, riding along with them on the cable car: "Boy, they look neat, but they are not much bigger than I am . . ."

Perhaps for the first time in her life, Princess Margaret is having an opportunity to be herself, while still under public gaze.

Compassion

Relations between whites and Negroes in the deep south are not one long chronicle of hate and misunderstanding as might be supposed from the recent history of that region, and indeed before that.

Lamar Thomas is a Negro tenant farmer in Georgia. He is nearly blind and when fire broke out at his rural home near Rutledge a week ago he and Frank McRee, a white furniture salesman were talking in a nearby cotton field.

McRee sprinted to the house, kicked in a window encased in flames, grabbed 10-month-old Lamar Jr. and tossed him out to Thomas. Blinded by smoke and flames, McRee was unable to locate Thomas' other child, a four-year-old girl.

Since the tragedy nearly $2,000 and other gifts of clothes, furniture and food have poured in to the Thomas family. Many of the donations came from white persons. White neighbors also found them a house nearby, rented it for them and started collecting furniture.

Often it takes adversity before mankind's innate compassion shows itself. Just the same, the incident is typical of many that go unnoticed amid the bustle of everyday life.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

It seems that lipstick has an utilitarian use as well as purely esthetic. So far its chief use has been to adorn the lips of mothers and their daughters. They seem to think that its use adds to their appearance, and perhaps it does. In fact it has got to be that no woman or girl would think of going out on the street without a liberal use of lipstick, any more than a business man would go down to his store without his shirt. But this is beside the point.

Usually the complaint against lipstick has come from restaurant and hotel men who say it stains their linen which sometimes is difficult to wash out. Possibly that is the kiss-proof type which used to be publicized in certain advertising although we haven't noticed any such appeals to the feminine heart lately. That may be because we do not read the right magazines.

Now the restaurant proprietors have another complaint against the practice, or have they? If it forces their kitchens help to take more care in washing and drying dishes and cutlery, they should be delighted.

Payne; second vice president, W. Finkle; secretary treasurer, R. J. E. Graham. The executive is composed of W. H. Black, W. Green and C. Kiser.

Years ago there was not a public library in this city and what was called the Mechanics Institute was the lending library for all many citizens obtained books there. Besides the library there was a reading room with papers and magazines and also a billiard room with two tables. The Institute was located on the second floor in the West Robertson Block on Front Street for some years and later in part of the ground floor in a building at the south east corner of Front Street and Victoria Avenue. The Institute was governed by a board of directors.

City Clerk Wilfred Holmes and city assessor John A. Kerr have about completed the survey of the local option petition which was presented to the city council on October 30. They are reported to have found that 950 of the names are those of property qualified voters. Of the 280 names remaining, the majority are new residents, who will be qualified to vote at the municipal elections in January but who are not voters in the sense required by the petition, which has a last year's lists for its basis. Total number of names appearing on the voters' list is 1,230 of these 314 have been found to be duplicates, leaving a balance of 3,239 to be considered in the petition. The petition, therefore, to compel action on the part of the city council requires a total of 810 names. The petition will be taken up at the next meeting of the city council and if found satisfactory the local option bylaw will be given its first and second reading.

Capital Back in Business After Pre-Election Snooze

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The long, nine-week sleep is over.

The National Capital, especially Parliament Hill and the enclaves of Federal departmental administration buildings scattered about the city and its suburbs, ran up the blinds and pulled back the curtain.

With a sudden overnight lurch, the vast and complicated administrative machinery of government, idling quietly these past campaigning weeks, roared back into high gear.

The quiet that an election always brings to the Capital was shattered.

The place was in business — the nation's biggest business — once more at the same old pace 38 billion tax stand.

These last nine weeks have been a time of waiting for the decision at the polls.

Where London and Washington bounce and boil with political activity in the weeks between the calling of an election and the polling of the ballots, Ottawa snoozes.

This is not where the action is — that is out on the campaign trails, with the Prime Minister, the Conservative Leader and chiefs of the assorted splinter bands.

About the only loud noise in the Capital has been the thumping of those mimeograph machines that John Diefenbaker for a time was accusing Lester Pearson of hiding behind. Where just about all else was still, the duplicator mills were spinning out that endless stream of Party Leaders' statements, itineraries, speech texts in the silent war of the press releases.

LONELY OLD TOWN

This has been the "second front" in the recurring political war of the Grits and the Tories, the Socreds and the Democratic Crusaders behind and on the flank of the front line whose the key leaders, Lester B. Pearson and their lieutenants have fought and bled and finally won by the narrow margin of parliamentary field of action where the taxpayers could see and hear, through all many citizens obtained books there. Besides the library there was a reading room with papers and magazines and also a billiard room with two tables. The Institute was located on the second floor in the West Robertson Block on Front Street for some years and later in part of the ground floor in a building at the south east corner of Front Street and Victoria Avenue. The Institute was governed by a board of directors.

The machinery of govern ment will keep humming over in this "the silent time" in the Capital, kept turning very quietly and slowly, but only on the junior levels—where pension and family allowance cheques are prepared and run-of-the-routine correspondence kept moving.

But at the senior levels of the Federal paper factory where policy and decisions are made, all was still.

The departmental deputy ministers, the men who keep the machinery that runs the government, sat tight, waiting for the election to be over with itself out and the political dust settle.

The idea is to keep the machinery ticking quietly over, like an idling motor, revved just enough to keep it from stalling.

With the members of the Cabinet — and in these past three weeks, especially Mr. Pearson, Prime Minister — these men of ultimate decision off The Hill and out in the country on the campaign trail, "everything put-offable," as one deputy minister deftly phrased it, "that is postponable," is stored on administrative ice.

Now, after weeks of intervals, with luck once weekly, the Cabinet, or a fraction of it met, briefly in the Privy Council Block.

INSIDERS' POLL

But these meetings have been more of an "insiders' opinion poll," more of an information survey than a Cabinet session. The big decisions have been where the PM stood on issues and what should be the line rather than what to do about the current and accumulating national administrative problems.

Now, we know, for dead certain sure, up until the eleventh hour — and then it was only insistence-by-next-of-kin-and-political guesstimating — what was going to happen? So how could any really basic, longrange decisions be made?

While the $8 billion plant idled sweetly, the people men mas the main switches, the 50,000 Civil Servants here in Ottawa's Federal establishments at the departmental elections in January but who are not voters in the sense required by the petition, which has last year's lists for its basis. Total number of names appearing on the voters' list is 1,230 of these 314 have been found to be duplicates, leaving a balance of 3,239 to be considered in the petition. The petition, therefore, to compel action on the part of the city council requires a total of 810 names. The petition will be taken up at the next meeting of the city council and if found satisfactory the local option bylaw will be given its first and second reading.

What to do with dragging time?

Inconspicuously — and who, being in the know, can blame the senior bureaucrats had a problem peculiarly their own.

And then so, with the tourist season done and the half-million flood of visitors at ebb-tide, the hotels, has seldom seen a time like it — with nobody here but the full-time residents.

Now the time of waiting, overnight, is done. "Postponables" are no longer "put-offable" but readied for action.

The Capital is back in business — alive and politically living.

Parking Body Should Remain

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Sometime, I would like to read your opinion regarding the dissolution of the Parking Authority. Meanwhile, here is mine.

This was set up by-law. I believe under Mayor Hyde, to bring order out of chaos. I think that the intervening six years have shown much progress, which indicates to me that a small interested group can do much better than a larger group which has many interests.

Taking the management of parking in the City Hall just super-imposes bureaucracy on top of bureaucracy. Who was it that said, "you can't fight City Hall?" If the Authority's terms of reference were too vague, amend the by-law. Spell out the control.

A few days ago, you report, that the Planning Director's projections indicating that in the next 20 years our population will double. No doubt the vehicles will double, too. If the downtown merchants wish to keep their share of traffic, they had better make sure of accommodation and convenience of getting there.

The city has many millions of assessment in the central business district — as, for the sake of everyone, we must keep it flourishing.

This is a downtown business man's problem, and as long as they can charge it to the shopping public, let them handle it. When it becomes an expense to the taxpayer, then council should be very concerned.

You know as well as everyone else, the parking management reverts to council, very little will be done. They will be handled they have saved a few dollars.

Surely, 25 to 40 new parking lots should be created each year — just to keep up to the growth. There is much to be done, and I feel that there are other opportunities will come up from time to time (e.g. when the old police building was).

I hope your conclusions, like the parking lots, be created much more and more parking, and the best way to get it is to leave this expression of thought.

Traffic Lights Make Area Safer

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Early in the year I wrote you and you were kind enough to print my letter, which complained of the many accidents occurring here at the corner of Coleman and West Moira and of the danger to motorists and pedestrians alike.

Now that traffic lights have been installed, may I have the opportunity to say "Thank you" to the City Council and persons responsible, thus making this part of the city safe to live in. Many of my friends and neighbors would like to join me in saying thank you.

Pass the Vitamins! Fat Fasting Away

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Would you discuss fasting to reduce weight? I have heard of taking only water and vitamins for 20 to 30 days, without hunger, and with beneficial results. Is this method really safe? Must it be supervised by a doctor? Is there an age limit? —H. K. E.

I would say that there is some difference of opinion on this method of reducing. So far as I know, it is safe enough when properly supervised — but this means much closer supervision than you suppose: either in hospital, or under complete daily supervision of a doctor who understands this method thoroughly.

It is not safe to attempt any such regimen and see your doctor once a week, or to call him and say you still feel good. Rather, a battery of laboratory tests must be employed repeatedly. For just a couple of examples, the mineral balance in the body is important. If it begins to get out of balance, it should be corrected promptly. Or, under such a rigid fast, gout may occur due to uric acid accumulation. This must be corrected at once.

Obviously it is possible to lose weight rapidly and in large amounts by this method, and after the first few days people report that they stop feeling hungry. However, as you can understand, it is neither a simple nor inexpensive method because of the amount of testing and supervision required.

I don't know of any age limit, but a person should be in robust health before starting such a program.

Possibly the most basic objection is that the method doesn't teach the patient new eating habits. He got fat before? If he goes back to his former habits, he can get fat again. For this reason, since there is a great deal to be said for the slow, simple way of reducing — learning to eat a little less of everything, and especially to eat less of the more fattening foods.

That, in fact, is the strongest argument against all special methods of reducing. If they don't establish a new eating habit, the patient may become slimmer, temporarily, but he won't stay that way.

Why, some people, under special "crash" reducing programs have lost 100 pounds and more, according to scientific reports, and then in a matter of months gained it all back. What's the profit in that?

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about glandular fever — particularly what to do in the period of recovery, etc.—B. T.

I've done more than that. I have a booklet on the subject, but under its more formal name, "Mononucleosis." To receive a copy, send 20 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me and ask for the booklet on "Infectious mono." It and glandular fever are exactly the same thing.

Dear Dr. Molner: My boy, 3½ has hemorrhoids, I can't say he complains too much, but they protrude after a bowel movement. Is this uncommon for his age, and is surgery necessary? — Mrs. C. M.

Hemorrhoids, are not common in children but they do occur occasionally. Faulty bowel habits and constipation usually precede the trouble.

As a rule they are not treated by an operation unless they are bleeding and very painful. The treatment instead generally consists of a gradual process of training the child to have more regular movements and a shift in stool. This involves paying more attention to the method thoroughly.

Labor union leader John L. Lewis organized the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) 30 years ago today—in 1935. The former head of the United Mine Workers of America formed the CIO to rival the American Federation of Labor (AFL) after breaking away from the parent organization due to a policy dispute which resulted in the ouster of the UMW. Lewis, revered by the workers, invented the sitdown strike and other bargaining weapons. The AFL and CIO subsequently merged in the 1955s.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1915 — Russian troops captured 3,500 prisoners in an encampment near Suki on the Styr river; the British destroyer Louis was abandoned in the Mediterranean.

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940—former British prime minister Neville Chamberlain died at his country home at age 71; the British submarine Sturgeon destroyed two German supply boats off English Channel ports.

Chief Predicts Hard Winter

(Sarnia Observer)

Prosperity is due to backfire on us this winter. This information comes from the lips of Walking Chief, a venerable and venerated Indian, who lives simply and without laboring, in the rocky Mountain foothills of Alberta.

Walking Chief says the coming winter is going to be what the decadent white man would call a doozer. The dormant seeds will be buried under much snow as we shiver in cold weather. According to the chief we are due for one gargantuan blizzard and a covey of small ones.

In Alberta, especially where the province blends into the foothills of the Rockies, Walking Chief is Big Medicine when it comes to peering through the coming years to predict what winter holds. He is reported to have been fairly accurate over the past five years. He has acted for snow and cold, blizzards and warm spells. Unknown to or forgotten by his champions they have been having this kind of weather ever since the first cold killed the last snowfall.

Where the chief goes into detail about the coming season of extremes are the reasons for it. According to the gentleman we have brought it upon our selves through our own acquisitiveness. He explains that "The white man is getting too big and rich. Manitou does not like this and he gave bad weather". He goes on to that Walking Chief can get an argument there. There are the ban - the - bombers, who blame it on the tests; Republicans blame it on the Democrats; the Liberals blame it on the Conservatives; the NDP and Social Creditors blame it on both the old parties; and even French-Canadians blame it on English - speaking Canadians. They all cannot be altogether right, though this mis-meeting of minds may provide an astral combination which returns to earth to plague both those responsible and the innocent.

If the big and wealthy among the white men are responsible for the coming rugged blasts of Arctic air and piles of snow it is going to be the chief and the little and unwealthy who will pay for it.

When and if the blizzards sweep the nation the big and wealthy who have brought it about with the size of their gifts and bank accounts will have long since departed for the balmy breezes of the south and left the innocent to shiver for somebody else's sins.

You Dog You!

The next time somebody calls you a dog, maybe you should wait a minute before you hit him.

Think about it! A dog!

When it comes right down to it, they do not fare badly. I've got a dog at home. His name is Sam, or, properly, Samuel Jackson. He is named after golfer Samuel Jackson Sand.

To start with, he is terribly spoiled. We cannot go anywhere without him. If Sam is left alone in the house he howls. If he is left in the car, he is fine.

One time when we lived in a sixth-floor apartment in Toronto, Sam was left alone for a few hours. When we drove into the parking lot across the road, we could hear a strange strenuous noise coming from the direction of our building. You are right. It was Sag, voicing his disapproval of the situation. It was the only time I ever had the stamina to run up six flights of stairs, neither stopping to rest nor slowing down enough to even touch ground.

Sam is a black and white terrier . . . almost anyway. He does have some Dalmatian sketches.

Everyone who meets Sam falls in love with him right away. He is so cute, and such a baby.

The last time my wife and I went to a drive-in movie, naturally we had to take Sam along. Think of it from Sam's point of view. He sees a movie and does not have to pay a cent.

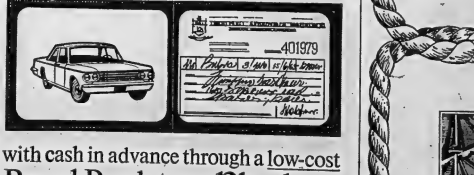
It was his first movie. It was also his last. When the picture came on the screen he jumped up, startled, and ran from the back seat up to the front, placing his front paws on the dash. When the hospital matron in the movie came into the picture, Sam growled ferociously. His growling grew steadily more violent until it was soon an outright bark.

Sam spent the first five minutes of that movie barking. My wife and I spent the first five minutes slinking down in our seats to avoid the cold stares coming from the people in the cars beside us.

Two weeks ago we stopped at a service station-restaurant near Hamilton. Outside the restaurant there stands a huge wooden statue of a highlander playing bagpipes.

I was getting the gas tank filled while my wife took Sam for a walk. Suddenly I heard a terrific outburst of growling and barking, and there was Sam, attacking the big wooden statue, rushing to within three feet of it, then jumping back cautiously and continuing with a verbal onslaught.

When people ask us over for the evening, Sam comes along. Not too long ago a young couple we know casually asked us over to watch the hockey game and play cards. How were we to know the man of the house was allergic to dogs? Sam did not believe it either. He kept jumping up on our best, trying to see if he really would break out in a rash.



When I come home at lunch or for dinner, Sam trots up to me with a ball in his mouth. He loves a ball. Plays with a ball for hours. Even if I were mad at him over something, how am I supposed to resist those sweet, warm, brown eyes of his? It does not seem fair really.

Sam is not really a freeloader. He does do a few things to earn his keep. He sits up pretty and growls when he hears a noise at night . . . this makes my wife feel more secure. It makes me angry because it wakes me up.

Sam is a clever dog. If he is given his food just as we are sitting down for dinner, he ignores it until after he has hummed what he can from the table. Or if we are eating and Sam is given a piece of meat, he will eat the meat. Then if he is given a piece of bread say, he stores the bread in his basket and will not eat it until he is sure nothing better is forthcoming.

Some people may think Sam is pampered. He's not really. We just believe in treating him as one of the family . . . like, the boss.

Remembrance Day Has Special Poignancy Rotarians Told

When you lose two brothers in one conflict and friends in another, Remembrance Day has special poignancy. This was the message of Archdeacon A. S. McConnell in an address to the Belleville Rotary Club Monday.

Archdeacon McConnell described his experiences as a serving soldier toward the end of the First World War and as a chaplain in the 1939-1945 conflict.

In Toronto at the end of the First War, the St. Thomas' rector said he linked arms with some of his comrades and walked down Yonge Street — met with tears streaming down his face because he had lost two brothers in action.

Archdeacon McConnell went on to refer to the French surrender in the last war, and said he wondered how Canadians would have fared in similar circumstances.

Some of the incidents which Archdeacon McConnell said made him remember: the death of his best friend—a sergeant-major—in the Caen-Falaise Gap fighting—a man with his face blown off—a Belgian businessman in Bruges who had had his fingernails torn off by the Gestapo.

"I look back on the men I buried—when you get that close to it you remember," said the Ulster-born chaplain.

Archdeacon McConnell recalled some words of Sir Winston Churchill to Hollywood actor David Niven who served with distinction in the last war. "It was wonderful that you returned to your homeland prepared to give your life," said Churchill, adding, "Of course if you had not come it would have been deplorable."

And Nelson's memo before Trafalgar: "No captain can do very wrong if he places his ship alongside the enemy."

"That is what these fellows did whom we remember to-day," said the Belleville rector.

He recalled that Canadians volunteered in their thousands for both wars, many lying about their age in order to serve.

Max Smith introduced Archdeacon McConnell and he was thanked by Canon R. B. Wright, Rotary president Ernest Burnham presided.

Unemployment in Area Lowest in Eight Years

The month of October saw the least unemployment in the Belleville area than in any month in the past eight years.

At the end of last month there were but 327 men registered at the local employment office — less than half the number for October last year.

At the same time there were 641 women job seekers, down only fractionally from the same period last year. In the over-all picture the number of job seekers was down about 33 per cent from last October and was even below the September figure, which normally is the low point in unemployment for the year.

"The picture is very encouraging," stated employment office manager Cecil Hiuser. "The number of persons registered is the lowest since 1958."

HOPE ALL REGISTERED

"We are hoping of course that all unemployed persons are registered with our office," Mr. Hiuser went on.

The employment office manager admitted, however, that it was possible that through a misunderstanding a few persons looking for work may not be registered.

The reason for this is that if an unemployed person is not receiving benefits his name is not automatically dropped from the list of job seekers after 14 days. Mr. Hiuser said it was important that such persons reregister at the employment office.

The claim load at the local office is also down commensurate with the lower number of job seekers. At the end of the month 536 persons were receiving benefits as compared with 792 at the same period last year. This is a drop of about 40 per cent.

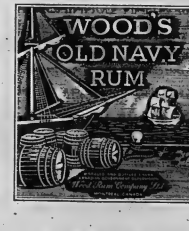
Beadle In London For Talks

By MILTON MARMOR



LONDON (AP) — Sir Hugh Beadle, chief justice of Rhodesia, arrived today for talks with the British government on his country's constitutional crisis in apparent defiance of Prime Minister Ian Smith's government.

Beadle is the chairman-designate of a proposed royal commission to chart a passage for Rhodesian independence agreeable to the British and Rhodesian governments.

IF RUM IS YOUR DRINK, THEN WOOD'S OLD NAVY IS YOUR RUM

Make no mistake about it: Wood's Old Navy is every bit a man's rum. It's dark and deep, rugged and robust, a blend of the world's finest rums (many as old as 9 years).

Next time get all the real, full-bodied flavour you expect and deserve from a rum. Next time try Wood's Old Navy.

MENU Magic from the TEST KITCHEN

Luncheon Treat

Hot sandwiches are more inviting then cold ones this time of year . . . and they're almost as easy to fix. Here's one combining a 7-ounce can tuna fish with ¾ cup shredded Canadian Cheddar Cheese and just enough mayonnaise to moisten. Spread on buttered hamburg rolls, top with a tomato slice and sprinkle with additional shredded cheese. Broil until bubbly and serve with tall glasses of cold milk.

More Milk

Here's a delicious way to get extra milk into the breakfast menu. Serve any of those ready-to-eat cereals the youngsters love, with milk sweetened with maple syrup. For an added treat top the cereal with fresh apple sauce as well.

Dinner Special

Next time you're serving ham in any way sliced or form, serve it with glazed apple rings. Melt ¼ cup butter in a heavy frying pan and stir in 1 cup of lightly-packed brown sugar. When bubbly, add apple rings and cook over very low heat until just tender. Large tart cooking apples are best for this and keep the apple rings fairly thick.

Holiday Preview

As a special treat some night soon, serve festive ice cream. Start with 1 quart of vanilla ice cream, softened slightly with an electric mixer. Then fold in ¾ cup each of well-drained mincemeat and cranberry sauce. Freeze until firm. That's all there is to it!

Deluxe Apple Pie

Sneak some peanut butter into the next apple pie you bake and just listen to the applause. Combine ¼ cup lightly-packed brown sugar and 1 cup all-purpose flour. Cut in finely ½ cup chilled butter then mix in ¼ cup peanut butter. Sprinkle this crumbly mixture over your unbaked open-face apple pie, then bake as usual. MMM . . . good with ice cream too!

Pineapple Cabbage Toss

Coleslaw enthusiasts take note of this new dressing: Blend together 2 tablespoons vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt, a few grains pepper, 1¼ tablespoons sugar and ¼ teaspoon dry mustard. Stirring constantly, gradually add this mixture to 6 tablespoons evaporated milk. Chill and toss with 2 cups shredded cabbage and ¾ cup well-drained crushed pineapple.

WAYS OF COOKING POTATO

A reader in Manitoba writes: "Would you consider printing ways of cooking our most common food — the potato? — such as baking, mashed, etc." The day before this letter arrived I had made Potatoes au Gratin from some that were leftover and will give them here first because they were so good.

TUESDAY (Guests)

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Emem's Crisp Fried Chicken (see Monday); Curried Rice; Creamed Cauliflower; Tomato Aspic on Shredded Lettuce; Apricot Whip; Oatmeal Cookies; Coffee.

POTATOES AU GRATIN

(Serves 4 — may be prepared in advance)

2½ to 3 cups cooked potatoes, cut in ½" cubes, 4 tablespoons butter, 5 teaspoons flour, 1¼ cups hot milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 or 2 teaspoons chopped chives (optional), 3½ to 4 tablespoons grated old Cheddar or Parmesan or Romano cheese.

In a large saucepan heat, stirring, the butter and flour until blended. Stir in hot milk until thick. Add salt, accent and chives if used. Stir in potatoes and 1 tablespoon of the cheese. Turn into medium casserole or baking dish. Sprinkle remaining cheese over top. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until bubbly and lisged with gold — 20 to 25 minutes.

BAKED POTATOES

NOTE: For mealy baked potatoes you must bake them at a high temperature — preferably 450 deg. Fahr. — time depending on size — until when squeezed between thumb and finger they indent and feel soft. Make crosswise slits in top, drop butter in centre and serve at once.

MASHED POTATOES

(1) As recommended by nutritionists: Cook potatoes in jackets until tender. Remove skins. Mash thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper. Add butter (2 or 3 tablespoons for each 6 medium potatoes) and hot milk (¼ to 2/3 cup for each 6 medium potatoes). Whip potatoes until light, fluffy and perfectly smooth over low heat. Serve hot.

(2) Wash, pare and halve potatoes. Barely cover with boiling water to which you have added salt. Boil covered until tender. Drain. Shake over heat to dry. Mash until smooth. For each 6 medium-sized potatoes, add ½ teaspoon salt, 3 or 4 tablespoons butter and ½ cup hot milk. Mash until smooth and fluffy over low heat.

Ann Landers

Forsaken Wife Says Hatred No Solution

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I lost my husband to the Other Woman. This is an old story and I hate to bore you, but maybe it will help someone else. It could happen to anybody. Tomorrow.

For two years I ate myself up with bitterness and hate. I had only one goal — to hurt them as much as they had hurt me.

I aged ten years in two. Finally I became so ill I was unable to get out of bed. An internist suggested psychiatric help. I know now that I literally drove myself crazy.

A therapist opened my eyes. He said, "Look, your ex-husband and the Other Woman ARE LANDERS are happy as doves. He is the picture of health and she is radiant in her victory. You are bitter and sick. They aren't suffering from your vindictiveness. You are."

Today I am a well person. No longer do I harbor murder in my heart. I enjoy life. I wish them well.

What a fool I was! I didn't hurt them but I almost put myself in the grave. — EX-DUMMY.

DEAR EX: I've said it before, but it's worth saying again. Hatred is like an acid. It can do more damage to the vessel in which it is stored than to the object on which it is poured.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You had a letter in your column from a woman who lives in La Crosse, Wisconsin. She said the dentist in La Crosse are so nice it's a shame everyone can't move up there. She described how she fell and broke the caps off her front teeth and her wonderful dentist rushed right down to his office at 6 p.m. to fix her up.

That letter must have been a phony. I don't believe anyone in La Crosse can afford capped teeth. We used to live there and it's impossible to make a living in that town.

There's no money in La Crosse. Business is lousy and industry is down at the heels. Maybe you could find a good dentist in La Crosse but a decent living is out of the question. — EX-RESIDENT.

DEAR EX: You must be crossed up on your La Crosses. La Crosse, Wisconsin, is one of the most progressive and prosperous cities in the nation.

Retail trade was 34th, in the United States in retail sales per household. Building permits in La Crosse this year exceed 12 million dollars. There are more than 200 manufacturing plants in La Crosse. Wisconsin State Employment Service reports that unemployment in La Crosse has dropped to 3%. (The national average is a good deal higher.) Any dentist who has a decent living in that city should be ashamed to admit it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I add my nickel's worth to the rhubarb about saying "God bless you" when a person sneezes?

Nobody in our family ever blessed a sneezer and it wasn't customary among our friends. Then we moved to New York. My husband and I joined a church and I will never forget that first Sunday. It was during one of those silent periods of prayer when suddenly the hush was broken by a window-washing man. All eyes were on him. He felt like crawling under the pew.

The kindly pastor, in a rich baritone, bellowed, "God bless you." A wave of quiet laughter swept the church. My husband felt an enormous sense of relief.

Now both my husband and I bless every sneezer. I think we are actually blessing the pastor who came to his rescue. — CONVERTED GEZUNDHEITERS.

DEAR CONVERTED: Your pastor is not only a quick thinker but a true gentleman. God Bless Him.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Number of Women in House Reduced From Six to Four

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The number of women in the Commons was reduced from six to four in Monday's general election. Three were returned and one newcomer was added.

The New Democratic Party fielded 16 of the 27 women candidates but elected only one, Mrs. Grace MacInnis, 60, of Vancouver-Kingsway. She is the first woman member of the Commons for British Columbia and the first for the NDP anywhere.

Mrs. MacInnis is the daughter of CCF founder J. S. Woodsworth, and widow of six-term MP Angus MacInnis, who held for the riding from Arnold Peterson of the NDP, who has retired.

The Liberals returned Mrs. Margaret Rideout in Westmorland in New Brunswick and Health Minister Judy LaMarsh in Niagara Falls.

WINS FOURTH TERM

Mrs. Jean Wadds won Grenville-Dundas for the Conservatives for the fourth time.

Jr Northumberland, Liberal defender Pauline Jewett was defeated by George Hees, former Conservative cabinet minister.

Mrs. Margaret Konantz, also a Liberal member of the last House, lost Winnipeg South to Conservative E. R. (Bud) Sherman.

The sixth woman member of the 26th Parliament, Mrs. Elsie Jones of Saskatoon, did not run.

Four women were elected in the 1963 election. Mrs. Rideout and Mrs. Jones won their seats in bytelections in 1964.

Four Quints Hold Party With Chums

ST. BRUNO, Que. (CP)—The four surviving Dionne quintuplets got together with a dozen old school chums Saturday for a class reunion.

The husbands weren't invited," said Germain Allard, husband of Annette Dionne, at whose house in this community 10 miles east of Montreal the reunion was held.

Three of the quints live at the "Allard home regularly—and Yvonne and Marie as well as Mrs. Allard. Cecile, Mrs. Phillippe Langlois, lives in Quebec City. The fifth of the multiple-birth girls, Emilie, died in 1954.

But for the girls who went to school with the quints in Ville Notre-Dame, a convent built especially for them in Corbeil, Ont., near their birthplace of Callander, it was the first time they had seen their famous classmates for 15 years.

Also attending were three nuns who taught the quints who were born to Mrs. Oliva Dionne on May 28, 1934.

Swapping Mascara Pencils Now Way to Cause Blindness

WASHINGTON (AP)—A California doctor said Monday swapping of mascara pencils like germ, affects approximately one-sixth of the world's population—mostly in Africa.

Dr. Phillips Thygeson of the University of California's Proctor Foundation at San Francisco told about the new - found cosemtic link with trachoma in a report to a conference sponsored by research to prevent Blindness, Inc., a voluntary health agency.

Among other things, Thygeson disclosed a previously unreported epidemic of the cause of the ailment occurring in San Jose, Calif., two years ago.

The outbreak, he said, was largely due to interchange among school girls of mascara pencils—employed to give an illusion to their eyelashes by drawing a line on the eyelids close to the lashes.

He said also there is evidence that interchange of cosmetic pencils can spread germs of another eye disease called "follicular conjunctivitis." A malady, Thygeson said, that rarely causes any permanent eye damage.

Thygeson said the sulfa drugs and some of the antibiotics are used in treating trachoma, but that re-infection often occurs. Vaccines have been prepared, he said, but so far they have not proved very effective.

Susanna's Family Fare

A TASTE OF COFFEE

Dear Susanna: I am writing to you for advice on making coffee in an electric percolator. I have tried to no avail various brands of coffee, different measurements and strengths, as well as various cleaning methods. My coffee has an odd taste. Several of my friends have stopped using their electric percolator for the same reason. Can you throw any light on the subject and help us out? Thanking you in anticipation. — Mrs. James Mayer.

There is an oil in coffee which will cling to the metal parts of the pot, and when not removed an odd taste will develop in the freshly brewed coffee. Now comes the miserable part. These oily coffee stains are not removable with soap, detergent or water. A special cleaner and sweetener is necessary. Fortunately, the makers of your brand of percolator have a service man in your area who can purchase their particular cleaner and sweetener — made especially for your purposes.

They also very kindly suggested one other method that anyone might try first for any type of coffee maker: dissolve two teaspoons of baking soda in a coffee pot filled with water and let it brew through the complete cycle. Allow to simmer for a while and the results are usually excellent. Be careful when using this method on aluminum ware. Too old baking soda is the rescue again! — SUSANNA

SHINE ON, SHINE ON

Dear Susanna: My hint may come in handy for your column. Dry steel wool, rubbed along tile-floors under the toe of one's shoe will, with a little "toe-scrub" action take off food that has become stuck, and will remove crayon, grease or scuff marks, without marring the polish.

This steel wool method plus a whisk over with the dust mop at the same time to catch up any loose particles, leaves the shine on your tile floor completely intact. — Mary A. Phoenix.

Psychologist Outlines Discipline Methods

The assurance that "most of us are not as bad parents as the magazine articles make us out to be" was given a group of Belleville parents Monday night by Richard Shooter, psychologist at Toronto's St. Michael's Hospital.

Mr. Shooter was making his second appearances as a lecturer in the Mental Health Association series, "Meet your school aged child," held in Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital.

The psychologist began his lecture on "Discipline" by saying there is no pat formula for disciplining children.

"We must recognize that each child is an individual, and the approach that helps one child may harm another," he said. "The free, creative and fulfilled person is one who has learned self-discipline. This is...the ultimate goal of all child training."

Mr. Shooter said children misbehave because they get some satisfaction from it, no matter how severe the punishment. To correct bad behavior, parents must meet the child's needs in a constructive way.

DECIDE ON BEHAVIOR CODE

"But before parents can teach a child self-discipline, they must decide what kind of behavior they want and set up a family standard. When their decision is made, psychology can offer clear, scientifically exaluated ways of shaping behavior," Mr. Shooter claimed.

Human behavior can be shaped in two ways, he explained. One is the positive, kindly way, which respects the person. The second is the negative punishing way, achieved with arbitrary commands and the infliction of pain for misbehavior.

Experiments with nursery school children have proved the value of the positive method. When away from the home of school that practices the kindly approach, the child continues to follow the same pattern of good behavior he has learned. When the fear of pain and punishment is removed from the child disciplined in the old negative way, he reacts with bad behavior and even delinquency.

The ground rules of the positive approach are courtesy, respect and example. A child's attitude toward his parents is summed up in Emerson's words, "What you are speaks so loud I cannot hear what you say."

LEARN BY EXPERIENCE

Youngsters must be allowed to learn by experience. They must accept the consequences of their actions and decisions.

"If they are always bailed out of tight situations they get into, they will never learn self-discipline," the speaker emphasized. "Such inconsistancy is the bane of a child's life."

In his closing remarks, Mr. Shooter turned from psychology to philosophy. "A child is the greatest gift life can give us," he said, "All any of us ever really has is the present, but most of us are too busy planning the future to enjoy our children now, while they are with us. Forget the experts and enjoy your youngsters."

Next speaker in the series will be Dr. John Rich, child psychiatrist and noted television personality.

Successful Living

Idle Sex Talk Can Lead to Trouble

DEAR DORIS: I have been going steady with a shy, wonderful guy for six months. When we are in the car alone, he's not afraid to neck, but I'd like to kid him about sex, I mean just to talk about it. But should I be the one to mention it first or him?

He's asked me to marry, many times, but I have refused because of my career. He has never attempted sex or even talked about it. I'd like to talk about it to make our lives complete, when we do marry. — HIS HONEY.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR HONEY: You can't be more than 17. If you go by me, you'll leave the whole thing strictly alone, and thank your lucky stars for a boy who has some respect for himself and for you.

Ido discussion could lead to more than you bargain for.

DEAR DORIS: Having just read your suggestions to "In Doubt" concerning a shower for her daughter who would be absent, may I offer one?

The guests could bring their gifts unwrapped and display them; then each one could wrap her gift as part of the evening's activities. In this way the bride would be given the pleasure of unwrapping her gifts at her convenience.

This and the assembling of a Bride's Book would make a complete evening. — INTERESTED.

DEAR INTERESTED: A happy variation. Gives the bride added pleasure, too. Thank you.

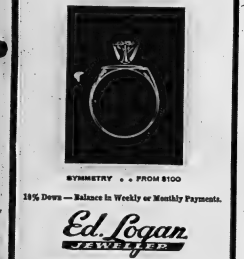
DEAR DORIS: I hate my sister. She won't allow me to talk when she's watching television. She yells at me to shut up, and if I don't she asks me if I want a swat across the face. She's 22. I'm 13.

I always have to ask my sister if I want to do something. I never go to my mother or father. My sister can poke fun at me and do anything she wants to do to me while my parents watch and do nothing.



Sometimes I feel like running away from home and staying with relatives, but never had nerve. Other times I try to stand up to her and say, "I've got my rights in the house too!" But she usually runs me down, then I just run upstairs and go into my bedroom. She's driving me up the wall. Somehow she always manages to shrink me back to a little kid, without any right or authority in the house.

But it's funny to realize that my other brother and sisters don't yell at me or boss me around. They take for granted I've grown up. — SUFFER.

DEAR SISTER: If yelling and swatting are your sister's best proof of mature years, they are not convincing. She is actually showing how childish she is. Her behavior is that of a bully.

By their silence, Mom and Dad are teaching her that such tactics are o.k. — Poor preparation for good relations with friends or working partners! I am sorry for a sister who thinks she can order people around; because others just won't take this, and will avoid her.

My best advice to you is to let your tears teach you understanding of people in trouble: and to enjoy your other sisters and brother. Very soon now you will be coming into your own.

Majority Plea Falls

the government. If this happened, Mr. Pearson could ask Governor - General Vanier for another dissolution of Parliament or suggest he call in Mr. Diefenbaker to form a government.

Mr. Diefenbaker Monday night declined to say whether he planned to present an early non-confidence motion to the House.

With 96 per cent of the civilian polls reported Monday night, the Liberals had 39 per cent of the popular vote. The Conservatives had 33 per cent, the NDP 18, Creditistes five, Social Credit four and others one.

This compared with the 1963 preference of 41.7 per cent for the Liberals, 32.8 for Conservatives, 13.2 NDP, 11.9 Social Credit and .4 per cent for others.

TURN OUT DOWN

The voting turnout was about 73 per cent of the 10,225,000 eligibles, well below the 79 per cent of 1963 and the record 79.8 per cent of 1962.

Canada now has had five elections since 1957 when the Conservatives took office on a minority win. In 1958 the Conservatives won a record majority, slumped back to a minority in 1962 and lost to a Liberal minority in 1963.

It cost the taxpayers $13,500,000 to finance the latest election. It has been officially estimated.

The Liberals were shut out in three provinces — Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta—and lost the two cabinet ministers in the process.

Agriculture Minister Harry Hays, who missed most of the campaign because of a bout of pneumonia, was defeated by Conservative Ray Ballard in Calgary South, the only Alberta seat won by the Liberals in 1963.

Mines Minister J. Watson MacNaught fell in Prince as the Conservatives swept all four Prince Edward Island seats. He lost t the first clergyman ever to seek political office in P.E.I., United Church minister David MacDonald, 29.

Conservatives romped home again in all 17 Saskatchewan seats.

GAIN IN QUEBEC

Only in Quebec did the Liberals manage to improve on their 1963 showing and even there the increase fell far short of what many observers had predicted. They gained 11 seats but lost three for a net gain of eight.

That Quebec performance was nullified by the loss of two seats in P.E.I., four in Nova Scotia, at least two in Ontario, one in Manitoba and one in Alberta. There was no change for the Liberals in Newfoundland, which they swept, or in New Brunswick and British Columbia.

Conservatives improved their 1963 standing in four provinces. In addition to the two seats in P.E.I., they gained four in Nova Scotia, one in Quebec and one in Alberta. Their nine wins in Quebec jolted most of the experts who had looked for a decline of Conservative strength there.

The NDP collected three extra in Ontario and one more in Manitoba.

Social Credit was cut to five seats nationally, winning only two in Alberta and three in British Columbia, and the Quebec-centred Creditistes fell to nine.

In 1963 these two groups won 24 seats under the Social Credit label. Shortly after, Mr. Caouette and 12 others broke away to form the Creditiste band two other Quebec members defected to the Conservatives leaving Mr. Thompson to lead a party of nine.

WIN IN CITIES

Only the big cities gave the Liberals the kind of support they sought. Montreal elected Liberals in 20 of its 21 ridings, a duplicate of 1963; Toronto 14 out of 18, a drop of two, and Vancouver four out of six, repeating 1963.

On the Prairies the government party ran into a stone wall, winning only one of 48 seats. They took three of them two years ago.

Four former Conservative cabinet ministers made it back into the Commons.

George Hees toppled Liberal Pauline Jewett in the Ontario riding of Northumberland after a fiercely-fought campaign that caught national attention. The former trade minister, who resigned from the cabinet after a policy split with Mr. Diefenbaker in 1963, has been considered a contender for his party's leadership.

Davie Fulton regained the Kamloops seat he left in 1963 to take over the Conservative leadership in B.C.

WINNERS GETS IN

Robert Winters, Liberal works minister prior to his defeat in Nova Scotia in the 1957 election, won easily in the York West seat vacated by Liberal Red Kelly, the hockey star. He turned back George Hogan, prominent Conservative organizer.

Several former cabinet ministers were defeated, including Howard Green who was the Conservative external affairs minister when the Diefenbaker government fell.

Three Quebec newcomers to Liberal ranks were elected, surprising almost no one. Jean Marchand, 47, former president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions; newspaperman Gerard Pelletier, 46, and law professor Pierre Elliott Trudeau, 45, had been hailed as "new look" Liberals in the province and potential cabinet material.

Some comments after the result became known:

Finance Minister Gordon: "I guess the people decided they were right and those who wanted a majority government were wrong."

Health Minister Judy LaMarsh: The voters "have again spoken with an unclear voice."

Mr. Hees: "I can hardly wait until Parliament opens again."

Mr. Caouette: "We'll get back our losses at the next election."

Real Caouette Said Ready to Support Govt.

By DONAT VALOIS

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Dully appointed and hoarse, Real Caouette said Monday night his Ralliement des Creditistes will support a Liberal government if it agrees to peg family allowances to the cost of living.

The northwestern Quebec auto dealer heads a party whose numbers in the next House of Commons have been cut to nine from the 13 it had at dissolution.

A minority government will have his group's support if it accepts Creditiste - promoted measures, he told some 100 party workers at his headquarters in Villeneuve riding, which returned him to the Commons with a cushion of 1,500 more votes than his nearest adversary.

Chief among the measures the Creditistes will insist on is the introduction of a baby bonus cheque which rises as the cost of living does.

"Canada is in no better a position than she was before the election," he said in a CBC television declaration earlier.

SAYS PEARSON FOOLISH

"Mr. Pearson was foolish to call elections instead of presenting legislation which could have helped reduce poverty and misery in Canada."

Asked by a reporter why Quebec Social Credit had failed to implant itself in Montreal and had lost ground in Quebec City, he said:

"The Montreal every newspaper without exception has carried on a campaign to discredit and denigrate Social Credit. That had an influence."

But the loss of Lucien Plourde, Robert Beaule and Gerard Perron in the Quebec City region was, the Creditiste leader admitted, hard to take.

NDP's Douglas Says Coalition Out of Question

By MICHAEL GILLAN

BURNABY, B.C. (CP)—T. C. Douglas Monday night brushed aside talk of a coalition between the Liberals and his New Democratic Party and laid down preliminary conditions for supporting another minority government.

Mr. Douglas said in an interview a minority administration would not have to implement the entire NDP platform, but must offer good legislation to improve the way of life of Canadians.

The national NDP leader said a coalition was out of the question except in "some horrendous crisis."

Declining to detail conditions for NDP support, Mr. Douglas said, however, he would put up a major battle in the Commons if there is any attempt to water down the recommendations of the Hall royal commission on health services.

During the latter stages of the campaign, Mr. Douglas said Prime Minister Pearson had tossed away two important essentials of the Hall report, Mr. Pearson was prepared to give private insurance carriers a role and had backed down on providing medical insurance for everyone at the outset.

Mr. Douglas also said Canadians want increased old age pensions, increased federal aid for education, a comprehensive manpower training program and protection for consumers.

Mr. Douglas, personally victorious in Burnaby - Coquitlam constituency, said with good legislation a minority Parliament might last four or five years, as the last one could have if the prime minister had not called Monday's "useless and unnecessary" election.

HAPPY WITH INCREASE

The NDP failed to make the gains Mr. Douglas hoped for, but he expressed satisfaction at the party's increased number of Commons seats and its higher percentage of the popular vote.

The NDP is "no longer a splinter party — we are now a major factor in the Canadian political scene."

He was disappointed at failing to break into the Atlantic provinces, and at the defeat of Robert Cliche, his Quebec leader, in his bid to win Beauce riding.

"The first thing that has to be decided in Canada is whether the prime minister is going to resign or whether he's going to carry on," he said.

He added that he was referring to a possible resignation of the government, not the prime minister himself.

If Mr. Pearson decides to carry on, he should draw up a program for Parliament and try to win approval from opposition parties.

Mr. Douglas said the election had changed nothing, except that the prime minister's "pre-

31 Whoopers Now at Refuge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Interior department confirmed Monday that a dead whooping crane had been found in northwestern Kansas.

The department said it was not known what caused the death of the rare bird but an examination is to be made at the Wildlife Research Centre in Denver.

Two hunters found the adult bird and notified a Kansas state game warden. There was no outward sign of injury.

The latest count shows 31 whoopers, including seven young birds, have completed their fall migration south and now are on the National Wildlife Refuge on the Texas Gulf coast.

A record 42, the total wild population of these large wading birds, wintered on the refuge last year.

AWAITS RESULTS—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker keeps one eye on the election returns board as he chats on telephone at committee room at Prince Albert, Sask., Monday evening. (CP Wirephoto)

Canada Faces Minority Govt. Prospects Fourth Time in 8 Yrs.

OTTAWA (CP) — For the fourth time in eight years, Canada faces the prospect of minority government.

Nobody here is firmly predicting how long it will last, or how well it will work this time.

Minority party leaders T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party and Robert Thompson of the Social Credit say it could last and work well. But in their post-election comments Monday they were deeply divided on the sort of policies they would support.

Prime Minister Pearson, who may command 128 or so seats in the 263-seat House, declined any prediction beyond noting he is still prime minister and that the Liberal government intends to carry on.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, with about 100 supporters, gave every indication of keeping up his drive to regain the office of prime minister, in line with his stated ambition of becoming the third Canadian prime minister to return to the office after a defeat.

The other two were Conservative Sir John A. Macdonald, the country's first prime minister, and W. L. Mackenzie King, long-time Liberal prime minister.

Mr. Diefenbaker's Conservatives took office as a minority government in 1957 and then won a sweeping victory in 1958. They fell short of a majority in 1962 and then defeat in the Commons on a confidence issue involving nuclear arms forced another election in 1963.

That vote returned Mr. Pearson's Liberals as a minority. On Monday the country rebuffed his bid for a majority.

Governments won support of less than a clear, majority in four earlier elections and survived on—for a time.

In 1921, King's Liberals won 117 seats in a 235-seat House, with 50 Conservatives, 65 Progressives, and three Labor members in opposition. That was the first time third parties as such won seats in a Canadian general election.

Mr. King was able to control the House with parliamentary support. In 1925, the Liberals won only 101 seats in a 245-seat House. But Mr. King retained office for nine months, stickhandling his way through an opposition of 116 Conservatives, 24 Progressives and four others.

When he appeared likely to meet defeat in the House, he sought an election but dissolution was refused by Governor-General Byng. Conservative Arthur Meighen was called on to form a government and his military fell in three months. Mr. King had his election.

In 1926 the Liberals won only 118 of the 245 seats, but the support of 10 Liberal-Progressives enabled them to carry on.

Again, in 1935, the Liberals won only 118 of the 245 seats. But before Parliament met, enough independent Liberals—many of whom had defeated official Liberal candidates—joined the Liberal caucus to preserve the government.

New NDP Leader Douglas, heading a 21-man group, has the fiercest grip on the balance of Parliament in the new Commons. On crucial issues, his party could give the government a clear win over other opposition forces.

But Mr. Diefenbaker made it plain Monday night that he believes it would be improper for the Pearson government to seek a new general election without advising the Governor-General first to call on the Conservatives to form a ministry.

A Conservative administration in the newly-elected Commons would need the support of all other groups now in opposition to have a working majority—an even more difficult arrangement to maintain than a tacit or actual Liberal-NDP alliance.

The widest split among the smaller parties appears to be between the Social Credit and the NDP.

Mr. Thompson, whose party elected five members, said the election result clearly was no mandate for the Liberals to introduce compulsory medical care insurance.

Mr. Douglas, however, saw the increase in popular support for his party as clear evidence the public wants such legislance, and he said his group will abide no watering down of the university principle.

Hees Captures Large Share Of Farm Vote to Defeat Miss Jewett in Close Race

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — George Hees charmed the voters of Northumberland into sending him back to Ottawa Monday, giving him an all-important Commons seat from which to vault into any Conservative leadership race.

The 53-year-old former Conservative trade minister, who resigned his cabinet post in 1963 after a policy dispute with his leader John Diefenbaker, narrowly defeated Liberal Pauline Jewett by capturing a larger than share of the farm vote in this mainly rural riding.

"I can hardly wait until Parliament opens again," he said. But he would not comment on the possibility of seeking the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

"I'm afraid I'm unable to answer a question that is hypothetical," he said. "Mr. Diefenbaker is leader and will remain so until he wishes to relinquish his post."

Mr. Hees represented Toronto Broadview in the Commons from 1950 to 1963. He became transport minister after the Conservatives gained power in 1957 and in 1960 was made minister of trade and commerce. In the early days of his career he became president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, and seemed at ease as he sat out this campaign, as he did the one in 1962, until offered the Northumberland nomination.

The Hees family has had a farm near Cobourg for more than 50 years, and the suave Toronto millionaire had used it as a weekend retreat. With this claim to residence in the riding, he jumped at the chance to do battle with Miss Jewett, a political scientist who won Northumberland from the Conservatives in 1962.

Knocking on doors in Cobourg, Northumberland's main urban area, and meeting the farmers on their land in a strenuous personal campaign helped him reduce the Liberal strength in Cobourg and hold rural Conservatives. His margin was 313 votes with 191 of 123 polls reporting.

"We had a good, clean, hard contest and I enjoyed every moment of it," he said. "My opponent, Miss Jewett, campaigned very hard and I don't think I've ever met a finer competitor than she turned out to be."

Miss Jewett, 42, visited Mr. Hees at his committee rooms after the results became known to offer him congratulations.

A professor at Carleton University in Ottawa, Miss Jewett first sought the Northumberland seat in 1962, losing by 758 votes to Conservative Harry Bradley, a Cobourg high school teacher.

In the next year's campaign she reversed this, winning the seat by 305 votes.

After 21 years on the academic side of politics, she found herself a working politician in the Liberal back benches of the Commons.

A native of St. Catharines, she chose Northumberland to enter politics because of family ties stretching back to the first settlers in the county. After her 1963 victory she took up residence in Brighton, a village about 20 miles east of here.

Miss Jewett was greeted by applause and a chorus of For She's a Jolly Good Fellow when she entered Mr. Hees's committee rooms.

Shaking hands with him, she said "Judging from the applause, you'd think I'd won this election."

Later she told reporters that Mr. Hees was "a great fellow and the toughest opponent anyone could have."

Prince Refused Any Damages In His Suit

NEW YORK (AP)—A state supreme court jury refused Monday to award Prince Felix Youssoupoff any damages for the Columbia Broadcasting System's television account of his part in the assassination of the mad monk Rasputin.

Youssoupoff had sued CBS for $1,500,000, charging that the network's play If I Should Die invaded his privacy.

The jury of nine men and three women returned the verdict after deliberating a little more than 3½ hours.

Youssoupoff based his suit on the showing of the TV play over WCBS-TV in New York Jan. 5, 1963.

The Russian nobleman, 79, said If I Should Die contained fictional dialogue and actions in its account of Rasputin's assassination in the Prince's St. Petersburg palace during the last years of the czarist regime.

Historians say Rasputin exercised an unnatural sway over Czar Nicholas and his wife, the Czarina Alexandra.

Youssoupoff contended that the TV show implied that he used his wife, Irina, known for her beauty, to lead the lecherous Rasputin to his death.

Bell Returns Carleton to PC Fold

OTTAWA (CP) — Carleton constituency returned to the Conservative party Monday in the election of Richard A. Bell, the citizenship minister in the former government of John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Bell won by a narrow margin over Lloyd Francis, who took the seat for the Liberals in the 1963 election.

A newcomer to the Ottawa area constituency, Rev. Donald Macdonald for the Progressive Party, drew nearly 10,000 votes which local political observers said appeared to come from Liberal supporters in the last election.

Until 1963, Carleton had an unbroken record of Conservative support. Its MPs included prime ministers John A. Macdonald in 1882 and 1887, and Robert L. Borden in 1905 and 1908.

WON ONCE

Mr. Francis, fresh from a career in local municipal politics, took the riding by 1,157 votes in the last election, when an NDP candidate drew 3,144 votes and a Social Credit aspirant 609.

In Monday's election night results, nearly complete returns gave Mr. Bell an edge of slightly over 1,000 votes.

The riding has shown a considerable switch in rural-urban balance in recent years. Originally almost entirely rural, new housing developments including large apartment blocks have spread into its north end from Ottawa. The NDP strength apparently was in this area.

Mr. Bell, a native of Carleton, first won the riding in 1957. He is a lawyer, a former assistant director of the Progressive Conservative party and served as private secretary to three Conservative leaders.

GIRL SHOT

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Susan Blacky, 17, of Fort William died in hospital Sunday after being shot by a bullet from a .22-calibre rifle in a hunting accident near her home.

Progressive Conservative Lee Grills, with a 719-vote majority, talks over the prospects of Saturday's service vote with two of his workers, Ken Pinder, centre, and James Musgrove. A large crowd of well-wishers jammed Grills' headquarters last night to listen to the results.

Guy Marcoux Says Writings Cause Of Defeat But Hurt Liberals More

QUEBEC (CP) — Guy Marcoux, who became a national figure as a political author but lost his House of Commons seat Monday night, said following his election defeat that his writings hurt him in Quebec Montmorency but hurt the Liberals elsewhere in the country.

Dr. Marcoux, Social Credit member in the last House but independent in the campaign, published a pamphlet called Dans le Meme Sac (in the same bag) shortly after the calling of the general election. In it he accused Transport Minister Pickerseill of involvement in a money offer designed to bring Social Credit support to the Liberals after the last election.

"It may have had a harmful effect in my own riding, but outside I think the harm was rather to the Liberals—though that was not the reason it was published," he said in an interview on the French network of the CBC.

The physician-politician said he will not give up his research into the signing of an affidavit in support for the Liberals by six Quebec Social Creditors in 1963.

"It does not bound up with an election campaign. It was an attempt at purification of politics."

Was he disappointed at defeat? "Not at all. In politics you prepare for anything, and I have been expecting a defeat for some time." He was solidly beaten by Liberal Ovide Laflamme.

Dr. Marcoux charged in his booklet that a Social Credit organizer was offered $25,000 just after the 1963 election to round up five or six MPs who would agree to "sell themselves" to the minority Liberal group.

Six MPs and former MPs who signed a pledge to back the Liberals four days after the 1963 vote and retracted it a week later, vehemently denied they were bribed and said they would sue Dr. Marcoux for libel after this election. Provincial police investigated the allegations and did not find any evidence of a shady deal.

The six sought re-election as Creditistes Monday and five were beaten. Raymond Lanthier, popular 29-year-old schoolteacher, was the sole survivor, winning in Megantic.

Gilbert Rondeau was defeated narrowly by Conservative Paul O. Trepanier, mayor of Granby, in Shefford.

The other four lost to Liberals. They are Gerard Perron (Labrieve), Robert Beaule (Quebec East), Pierre-Andre Boutin (Dorchester) and Lucien Plourde (Quebec West), beaten in a close race by former labor leader Jean Marchand.

Creditiste representation in the Commons was reduced to nine from 13 seats at dissolution. The Quebec wing of the Social Credit party took 26 seats in the 1962 election and 20 in 1963.

The seven Quebec MPs who remained loyal to Mr. Thompson after the 1963 party split and defected later were wiped out at the polls. Five ran as independents and two as Conservatives. All seven got far less support than their Creditiste rivals.

Woman Killed By Mongrel Dog

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) — A woman who was in hospital for two weeks last month as a result of an attack by a large mongrel dog she kept in her home was attacked again and killed Monday by the same animal, Sheriff Mike Spencer said.

He identified the woman as Mrs. Louis Rasmussen, 60, whose mutilated body was found by her husband, Ross, when he returned to their rural home from his night-shift job.

Spencer said the dog had attacked Mrs. Rasmussen twice before and mauled her badly last month. At that time, the sheriff said, both Mrs. Rasmussen and her husband refused to permit destruction of the animal.

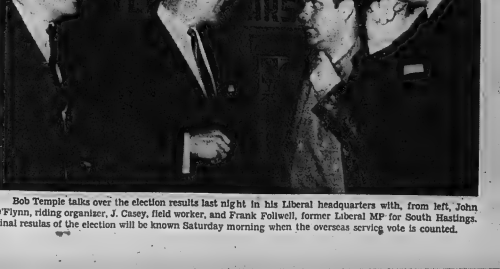
RCAF Yukon Becomes Mobile Polling Booth

OTTAWA (CP) — An RCAF Yukon plane bound for Tokyo became a mobile poll for 23 airmen from across Canada last week.

Flt.-Lt. W. M. (Bill) Bristow, the returning officer, said Monday in an interview most of the men voted for candidates in home ridings from Halifax to Vancouver.

A ladies' washroom—on ladies were aboard—at the rear of the Yukon was set up as the voting booth.



The Yukon was 43,000 feet above the Pacific, moving about 600 miles an hour from Hawaii to Hong Kong as ballots were marked.

The 23 airmen, on a long-range cruise and Pacific navigation training flight, made a non-stop 6,600-mile flight back from Tokyo to Uplands RCAF Station here.

The service vote will be counted Saturday.

According to a story from Picton, the Prince Edward Yacht Club will make all efforts to bring back world speedboat championship event to the county's famous Hayward Lake Roach nautical race track next summer.

The Picton Gazette said "it is forecast the World's Limited Championship Race" will take place at the Roach. This boat race is for 241 cubic inch displacement engines (7 litre class). Boats built must be fabricated in the country represented—and drivers must be residents, similarly.

Whatever the boats are the beautiful Roach won't echo to the deafening snarl of a World War II Rolls-Royce or Allison engine of some 2,000 horse-power kicking up a wall of water called a rooster-tail spewing 60 feet high and 200 feet long.

The story says the Windsor Yacht Club has provided a new "Maple Leaf Trophy," symbolic of the world championship in the seven-litre class.

The Prince Edward Yacht Club—it is understood—will make formal application for the race to be held on the Roach, to the Canadian Power and Boat Association which holds its annual meeting in Hamilton this week.

It is likely the application will be granted for CBF officials are thoroughly cognizant of the fact that the Roach is the best raceway in Canada.

The proposal to bring seven-litre boat racing to the Roach is not new. In fact it is a brainchild of the late Rob Finlayson, well known columnist and secretary-manager of the CBF for many years.

Finlayson, realizing that Canada could not answer a Harnsworth Unlimited challenge because of the lack of an entry, tried to arrange the seven-litre world championship for a Canadian course.

In fact Finlayson approached the rules committee of the Harnsworth Trophy Board of Governors in England and suggested that since there was a definite lack of unlimited entries in the world the rules could be changed to have seven-litre boats compete for the famous trophy.

This was met with a definite "No" and backed just as conclusively by United States racing interests.

Seven litre racing has plenty of enthusiasts in Canada, and perhaps this was part of the reason why the Americans would have no part of the Harnsworth rules-change suggestion.

For it seems that if the seven-litre world championships are brought to Picton—or anywhere else for that matter—Canada would take second-place to none, either in craft or drivers.

This country has a seven-litre "Miss Supertest III" set-up in owner Aubert Brilliant of Rimouski, Quebec, and the well known Canadian driver, Art Asbury of Ox Tongue Lake, Ontario, and their championship "Royal Canadian," among other speedsters.

Asbury drove his midget specs to victory in the United States National—and broke two world records in the doing. He crossed them in competition at 97 mph over a mile and three-quarter course and the straightaway for the kilo distance at 153 mph.

These mighty mites which toss pin-feather wheels instead of lacy arching rooster-tails, are powered with supercharged to non-supercharged motors of 427-16 cubic inch (to my records state) and are power plants used extensively in this country's motor cars. They are readily available to all potential competitors. Minimum overall size of the hull is 19 feet.

Name Zuger Tiger-Cat Quarter

HAMILTON (CP) — The party's over for Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

When the Ticats ended the Eastern Football Conference schedule in first place a week ago, coach Ralph Sazio gave them two days off.

But they were back to work Monday with a full week of hard sessions ahead of them.

The Tiger-Cats open a two-game, total-points eastern final Sunday in Ottawa against Ottawa Rough Riders. Ottawa finished second in the conference, and eliminated Montreal Alouettes in the sudden-death semi-final last Saturday.

Hamilton linebacker Herb Paterra, out of action since he was hurt in the Saskatchewan game Oct. 3 against Winnipeg Blue Bombers, is due to be taken from the injured reserve list in time to play Sunday.

But Sazio has not indicated what he plans for Bobby Kuntz, the veteran backfielder who came out of retirement to replace Paterra. Kuntz can start if the lineup because centre Chet Mlkzsa hasn't recovered from a knee injury of last August.

Joe Zuger will be the starting quarterback for Hamilton on Sunday, but beyond that Sazio hasn't decided on his starting lineup.

Trenton Bowler Defeated in Tourney Final

Trenton's Mary Fox, of the D. and A. Lanes, came within one game of winning the second annual Masters Bowlers of Ontario match play at Prescott on the weekend.

Mrs. Fox lost the final match to winner Mrs. Marg Walford of Scarboro, Sunday after knock-out five-pin competition. She had defeated Mrs. Walford with a 290 game but needed to defeat her twice in order to take the crown.

Earlier, Mrs. Fox qualified easily in the five-game round and went on to eliminate many of the top women bowlers from across the province, including Mrs. Evans, Mrs. McIlwee and Shirley Bedell. She lost a match to Barbara Baker while Mrs. Walford remained undefeated until the pair met in the finals. Included in Mrs. Fox's games were scores of 290, 263, 292 and 272.

In the men's consolation round, a three-game competition at Brockville, Jim McKenzie, of the Belleville Bowl-O-Drome was single with 727 and Tom Fletcher, of Trenton D. and A. was tenth with 781. The eight winners all rolled over 300, led by J. Pappas with 383.

Sugar Ray, Archer Eye Title Shot

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sugar Ray Robinson, who was middle weight champion five times, and Joey Archer, a title mad hungry for the same title, square off in a 10-round bout in Pittsburgh's Civic Arena Wednesday night.

The winner could be in line for a shot at the middleweight title now held by Dick Tiger, whom Archer has twice met. Archer, 27, who has won 44 fights and lost one, is a heavy favorite.

Robinson, 45, the grand old man of professional boxing who has been urged to quit for the good of boxing and his own health, says he wants the title "just one more time."

CONFERS WITH OBOTE

KAMPALA (Reuters) — Commonwealth Secretary - General Arnold Smith of Canada conferred for more than one hour Monday with Uganda Prime Minister Milton Obote. An official spokesman said Smith had discussions on matters affecting his new post.

By BEN GLAN

NEW YORK (AP)—There's a good reason, Bob Nevin explains, why he is the leading scorer for New York Rangers, surprise team of the National Hockey League.

"You get a day off once in a while," he said Monday. "When I was with Toronto there were no days off and you get sick of the ice sometimes. You can leave your best game on the practice rink."

Nevin, the Rangers' captain, scored two goals Sunday night in a 3-2 victory over Detroit Red Wings, last year's pennant winners. The triumph lifted New York into third place. The Rangers were picked to finish fifth in most pre-season polls.

Nevin, a right - winger, has four goals and four assists, and is sixth in the circuit with eight points.

'ALWAYS GOOD'

"Bob always has been a very good defensive player," said Emile Francis, Rangers' general manager. "He has the ability to be a big scorer, too."

Nevin came to New York in May, 1964, in a deal with Toronto.

"During the years I was with the Leafs I used to hear Toronto players say that New York was a tough place to play compared to New Toronto," Nevin said. "They said that there was no hockey atmosphere here and that the club management didn't do too much for the players. But I've found out different.

"We're very much improved. We have more depth and our goaltending is better."

Ed Giacomin, a rookie goalie, has been a standout for Jar.

Defencemen Arnie Brown and Rod Selling who accompanied Nevin to New York in the 1964 trade also are playing well.

City Teams In OMHA Groupings

The OMHA schedules for four divisions in the Quinte area were released today and will open this coming weekend.

Belleville is represented in all four divisions, the novice, peewee, bantam and midget.

In the novice group are Picton, Trenton, Consecon, Belleville and Napanee. The schedule opens November 20, with Picton at Trenton, until Belleville's first game is at home against Gananoque on Sunday, November 27.

Trenton, Belleville, Picton, Napanee and Gananoque are also entered in the peewee and bantam groupings. The peewee schedule opens on Sunday, November 14, with Napanee at Trenton. Belleville's first game is at home against Picton on Wednesday, November 24.

The bantam league is the first to open its schedule when Trenton goes to Napanee this Saturday, November 13. Belleville plays a home game against Picton on Monday next, Nov. 15.

The midget section has four entries, from Belleville, Picton, Napanee and Gananoque. That division schedule opens on Monday, November 15, with Gananoque at Picton and Napanee at Belleville.

This is the second season of schedule play among the district clubs and is credited with helping the teams greatly in preparing for OMHA play downs.

Train In Luxurious Show Rooms

The Trots

CAMPBELL VILLE, Ont. (CP) — George Hawke, a 41-year-old harness racing driver from Coldwater, Ont., scored three victories Monday night at Mohawk Raceway.

Hawke won behind Cherry Freeze in the first race, Fleety Frisco in the seventh and Silver Romie in the ninth. Cherry Freeze combined with Jipa, winner of the second race, for a daily double worth $86.20.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Cassius Clay and Floyd Patterson are training for their Nov. 22 heavyweight boxing title match in luxurious show rooms of hotel-casinos where good crowds pay $1 admission and lounge in padded booths.

Each fighter works out on stage amid a regiment of handlers, photographers, celebrities and hangers-on.

Last week, Patterson stoically sparred three rounds while comic Jack E. Leonard and singer Eddie Fisher swapped lizzils from a crowd of 500 in the showroom of his hotel.

In his showroom, Clay spars under batteries of Klieg lights, pausing for loud asides to his audiences and television interviews.

When Clay hits the speed bag, he is majestically raised four feet on an elevator stage. The crowds six drinks and see Clay silhouetted against a powder-blue background.

To end one workout, Clay ran off his stage, leaped 10 feet over a table, his six-foot three-inch, 215 - pound frame coming in for a perfect but loud landing.

As for the fight itself, Clay said: "I'll whomp him good for a seven rounds and knock him out after."

Patterson, twice champion himself, said only: "I want to win."

Betting odds favor Clay at 13 to 15, 5 to 14 and 1 to 3.

Don Byes Defeat Rollins 4-1

PETERBOROUGH — Belleville Rollins Construction scored a goal in the second minute of the game but never managed another while dropping a 4-1 decision to OHA Eastern Junior "B" decision to the Don Byes here last night.

Elsewhere in the grouping, Oshawa Crushmen stayed atop the loop standings by whipping Cobourg Cougars 6-3.

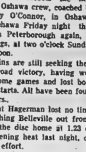
Belleville meeets the high flying Oshawa crew, coached by Tommy O'Connor, in Oshawa, in Oshawa Friday night then tackles Peterborough again, in Hastings, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Rollins are still seeking their first road victory, having won two home games and lost both away starts. All have been four-pointers.

Grant Hagerman lost no time in pushing Belleville out front, firing the disc home at 1.23 of the opening heat last night, on a solo effort.

It stayed that way until 15.12 of the period. Gary Foster notched the tying goal for Don Byes with Ric Chittick assisting. That's the way the period ended.

The winners scored twice in the middle heat. Jim Bell completed a three - way play with Bob Davis and Perry Chittick to put his club ahead for the first time.



Jim Blastorah beat Belleville goalie Wayne Brant, unassisted, late in the period to up it to 3-1.

Peterborough goalie Brian Caley continued to hold Rollins at bay in the final chapter, turning back their best bids, until his mates completed the scoring at 13.06.

Bill Stabler was the marksman one. He was assisted by Terry Blewett and Bell for the final 4-1 score. It was the night's only power-play tally.

Penalties were few, numbering seven in all with Peterborough getting four of them. Belleville collected three minors, as did the Don Byes, but the winners' Paul LaPlante drew a game misconduct at 16.50 of the first period when mate Pete McCarthy got a cross checking sentence.

International Race

Roman Brother Favored

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Roman Brother remained the strong 7-to-5 favorite Monday to win the $150,000 Laurel International Race Thursday.

But the American horse had to share attention with at least three of the seven rivals he will face in the 1¼-mile race over Laurel's grass course.

One of the rivals is George Royal, the big four-year-old bay owned by Ernest C. Hammond of Vancouver and Robert W. Hall of Aldergrove, B.C.

The only shift in the odds Monday was the shortening of the quotation on George Royal to 8 to 1 from 10 to 1 and the lengthening on the United States' Hall to All to 10 to 1 from 8 to 1.

Roman Brother, nearing the $1,000,000 mark in earnings with a bank account of $830,205, is a dwarf alongside such rivals as Hill Rise from George A. Polk's El Peco Ranch of California, Bernelmeat, the rangy Argentine, and Diatome, one of the two French entries.

The gelding stands just over 15 hands — 60 inches — and doesn't weigh more than 915 pounds soaking wet.

Bernelmeat was a distant second to Roman Brother in the recent Jockey Club Gold Cup at New York's Aqueduct.

Breathing Beezs will ride Roman Brother when the field takes off.

Victory will be worth $90,000, with $25,000 to second, $15,000 to third, $10,000 to fourth and $5,000 to each of the fifth-and sixth-place finishers.

The advance line quoted Hill Rise at 4 to 1, with Diatome next at 5 to 1.

Rawdon

RAWDON — Mount Pleasant United Church on the Rawdon circuit was filled to capacity on Sunday morning when many workers from Rawdon and friends gathered to celebrate the church's 20th anniversary.

Three floral arrangements of mauve and white 'mums were placed by their families in memory of Mrs. Ernest White, Mr. Donald Knight and Mr. Burton Wrightman.

Mrs. Mac Sharp, organist, played for both morning and evening services. The church choir sang two anthems, with the solo parts being taken by Mrs. Kenneth Watkins and Mrs. W. C. Cox. The choir was assisted by Mr. Howard Hutchison of Stirling.

In the morning, the pastor, Rev. W. C. Cox, preached on the requirements of church members. In the evening he paid tribute to the pioneers who built the church in 1871, and to those who had carried on the work down through the years.

The junior choir sang during the evening service, with Mrs. Cronkite and Wearen as accompanist. Mrs. W. C. Cox, Miss Sally McAdam and Miss Judith McAdam sang a trio.

Ushers were Bert Sharp, Howard Jeffs, Allen Wrightman, Larry Jeffs, Kenneth Smith and Doug Potts.

Ford Plants In Argentina Closed Down

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Ford Motor Co's two plants in Argentina were closed down Monday, leaving 3,200 workers and employees idle following a labor conflict sparked by the dismissal of one man.

The conflict reached a climax Nov. 2 when 500 workers built barricades and blocked the industrial area. Some 800 persons, including most of the administration executives, were trapped inside.

Company spokesmen told reporters that dismissal notices had been sent to 197 workers but no action would be taken against the rest.

Income Tax Explained

A column designed for the working taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax office.

By C. A. MILLER
Retired Supervising Assessor, Income Tax Department

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Workmen's Compensation payments and pensions are not income for any purpose under the Income Tax Act, but I have found many cases where the taxpayer has received full pay from his employer while off work due to an injury and turned over to his employer the compensation payments received by him. In such cases, when filing his return, he should deduct from his income the total of the compensation shown on the receipt. He should make this deduction on the line indicated as "Other Deductions" and state why the deduction is made.

The employer is now correct in issuing a T4 slip showing the amount of wages paid to the employee in the year. In a few cases docs the T4 slip show the employer's reimbursement for wages paid due to his omitting the employees compensation cheques.

In cases where a mother living with a son receives a monthly cheque from the Compensation Board due to her husband having been killed in industry, such cheques need not be considered when figuring the mother's income to determine if he can claim her as a dependent. It is only her income of a taxable nature that would have any bearing on his claiming her as a dependant. Be aware of double check with your district income tax office or a letter to me following the instructions given below will bring you correct information.

For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, five cent stamped envelope, plus 25 cents for each question.

QUESTION 1: I am totally disabled and my only income is a monthly Workmen's Compensation cheque. Should I keep filing non - taxable returns?

Answer: No.

QUESTION 2: My wife was injured in industry. She now receives a monthly compensation cheque. She has no other income. Can I claim full exemption for her?

ANSWER: Yes.

Whipper Is Knocked Out By Liberal

TORONTO (CP) — Wrestler William (Whipper Billy) Watson was knocked out of the political ring Monday by a 163-pound Liberal, Steve Otto.

Mr. Watson, who added eight pounds to his 155-pound frame during the federal election campaign, had no complaints about the fight for the York East riding held by Mr. Otto since 1962.

The professional wrestler said he was licked fair and square. He lost by more than 3,000 votes.

"You can't beat democracy," he said.

Does he want a re-match? "This has been a wonderful experience for me and I'd certainly have to consider running again."

Worked Plan to Swindle Woman Witness Testifies

QUEBEC (CP)—Gaston Constantin, a witness in the Moler Darabaner fraud trial, testified Monday that he and Darabaner worked out together on a plan to swindle a woman investment dealer.

Constantin, like Darabaner, is charged with fraud and conspiracy to defraud in connection with the investment firm of Junior Holdings. However, Constantin testified as a Crown witness Monday at the start of the trial.

Defence lawyer Raymond Daoust, cross examining the witness, cited his previous criminal record and pointed some of Constantin's past activities.

In testimony earlier Monday, Constantin, calling Darabaner "my boss", said there was a moment of joy when Constantin walked in. "I embraced him and by Rachel Smiley, the woman investment dealer.

"Now we can breathe a bit," he quoted Darabaner as saying.

Constantin said Darabaner had given him a courtroom cleared of all spectators except reporters. He also said the witness would have trouble speaking before the packed gallery, and Judge Cyrille Delage had granted a request that the courtroom be partially cleared.

He said Miss Smiley, president of Junior Holdings of Quebec City, handed the $45,000 over to him in a bank as a payment for a promised Quebec government contract to manufacture sidewalk edging.

To persuade her that his firm, Champlain Mortgage Loans, could get her the contract, Darabaner and Constantin had prepared letters with a forged signature of Rene Pierre, then public works minister, the witness said.

Constantin testified that the $45,000 payment was the first of two Miss Smiley handed to their group. The second was of $50,000.

Constantin said he had been named vice-president of Champlain "for services rendered" to Darabaner.

Champlain Mortgage Loans was set up after an earlier loan company, Universal Aid—which Darabaner operated, lost its licence.

The 42-year-old Quebec City business man's trial continues.

Man Protests War, Sets Fire to Self

NEW YORK (AP) — Police said a 22-year-old man set fire to himself in front of the United Nations building early Today and was critically burned.

Police identified him as Roger A. La Porte, 22. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital where he was reported in critical condition with burns over his entire body.

Police said La Porte told them he started burning himself because, "I'm anti - war, anti - war."

He identified himself as a member of the Catholic Workers, a group of pacifists who work with alcoholics and the poor.

Officers said La Porte poured gasoline over himself and ignited himself at about 8 a.m. in the middle of First Avenue, about 20 feet in from 42nd street.

Asked why he tried setting himself on fire early in the morning, he told police: "So nobody could stop me."

He told police, "I did this as a religious action."

Mickey Rooney Puts Blame On Own Small Shoulders

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — You think the life of a star is one large bed of roses? Then you should read some of the memoirs written by the acting folk. Almost any of them could be subtitled Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen.

Mickey Rooney, with no visible ghost writer on the jacket, has penned his life story with the curious title of i.e., an Autobiography (Putnam, $4.95). He describes his story at the outset:

"It's the paradox of a child who was a man and a man who was, or tried to remain, a child. At the age of 15 months I was working in burlesque and by the time I was two, I was ad-libbing scenes. But at 30 I was still shockingly immature, a con man's delight, a con woman's pot of gold."

Author Rooney is hard on few people in the book. Mostly, he places the blame on his own small shoulders for the parade of disasters that have befallen him. Reading about them, you wonder that he has retained his resiliency.

"Yes, I Can" (Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $6.95), written by Sammy Davis Jr. with Jane and Burt Boyar, makes Mickey's problems seem like small potatoes. Sammy's travails were not entirely interior, but also resulted from the fact that he is a Negro.

In the Davis saga, everything is related with a keen eye for drama and scope. And all is told in staccato style, but that is the way Davis lives, works and tells his story.

SPARES NO ONE

He spares no one and is particularly harsh on his family and himself. It may be overwritten in places, but it's more than a show business memoir; it is a social document.

You might not think that a jolly chap like Allan Sherman would have any problems. Think again. And read his autobiography A Gift of Laughter (Atheneum, $5.95).

Sherman marches through stages of starvation and overeating, of fame and failure in the harsh world of television variety and quiz shows. The worst came when he was fired as producer of the Steve Allen Show.

"I had reached the bottom of the locked - door syndrome," he writes. "Reality stinks. It never was any good, I thought, and nobody cares. Nobody gives a damn if you live or die, and every time I touch something tangible, somebody takes it away from me."

Soon afterward, though he left with My Son, the Folk Singer, and suddenly everybody loved him.

Miss Kilgallen Dies in Sleep, Cause Unknown

NEW YORK (AP)—Dorothy Kilgallen, dead at 52, started her career in fame as a columnist and television personality by circling the globe in a breathtaking 24 days.

The year was 1936, and by dirigible and by China Clipper she worked her way across land and sea. Her daily reports made her a celebrity.

But the name Miss Kilgallen Monday as she slept after appearing as a regular panelist on the Sunday night What's My Line? television show and writing her Voice of Broadway syndicated column.

An autopsy failed to reveal the cause of death. Dr. James Luke, the examiner, said further tests will be made.

BORN IN CHICAGO

Miss Kilgallen was born in Chicago into a newspaper family. Her father, James L. Kilgallen, was with the now defunct International News Service for many years and now is with the Hearst Headline Service.

She grew up in Brooklyn. As a summer cub reporter in 1931 she got her first byline and never returned to college.

Her race around the world in 1936 catapulted her into fame. The then New York Journal ran her cabled stories on the front page.

She and her husband, Broadway producer Dick Kollmar, 54, lived in a five-storey Manhattan town house. They had three children.

Queen Steals Spotlight at Performance

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen stole the spotlight from a star-studded gala famous performers at the Royal Command variety show Monday night.

She was laughing at herself as the command performance opened traditionally with gentle jibes in the direction of Royalty.

The performance netted £64,000 ($120,000) for the British Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund. Among the headline performers were veteran comedian Jack Benny, the singing trio Peter, Paul and Mary, and the pop - song couple Sonny and Cher—all Americans.

The Queen arrived in a shimmering blue and white diamante taffeta dress and white fur wrap, crowned by the blaze of her jewels. She was accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh.

British comedian Max Bygraves opened the show by saying he had been told to joke about schools in Australia, where Prince Charles will soon be a pupil, and to mention Rhodesia, Britain's current crisis spot.

For that, he said, he might get a medal—for bravery.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proves to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids without surgery. It relieves pain and discomfort in minutes and helps check healing of the inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "real satisfying improvement!" Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Many were covered in years of long standing, and most intensely painful. In each case, the thorough test that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal inflamed cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment or suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator) or Preparation H Ointment (with a special suppository).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Pearson Hides Disappointment Says Liberals Will Carry On

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson, his Liberal party virtually halted in its track by the Canadian voters, hid his disappointment Monday night and cheerfully said that Parliament would be carried on in the best interests of Canada.

There was no doubt about his disappointment. He already had a minority government and he called the election for the express purpose of gaining a majority. When he went to bed Monday night it was almost certain he had not received it.

"I think it's a disappointing result — naturally — because we campaigned on the issue of majority government," he said.

"The electors . . . have spoken."

The 65-year-old prime minister had gone through a long, tense day, suffering from the aftermath of flu. He was tired from the campaign that had taken him 25,000 miles by air alone and the results of his efforts gave him little joy.

"But I am gratified that there were more Liberals elected than any other party," he said into a bank of television cameras just before midnight.

NOT BITTER

He showed no bitterness over his failure to get the majority.

A reporter reminded the prime minister that he had said he didn't want to head another minority government; that he would prefer someone else to do so.

"Yes, I expressed a preference for that," he replied. "But you don't always get your first preference.

"At the moment, I am still the prime minister and leader of the government and we'll leave it at that."

Barring a major victory for either the Liberals or Conservatives, many observers suggested during the campaign that this would probably be the last election for both Mr. Pearson and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

HAD SETBACKS

Since Mr. Pearson became Liberal leader in 1957, he has experienced some massive ups and downs at the polls, but Monday's stand - pat results were easily the most disappointing.

When the Diefenbaker tornado of 1958 left Mr. Pearson's Liberals with only 48 seats, compared with the 105 they held previously, the resounding defeat was not surprising and the relatively new leader was not held responsible.

In 1962, the Liberals under Mr. Pearson more than doubled their representation to 99. A year later they formed a minority government with 129 members.

At dissolution, the Liberals were down to 127 and this campaign, costing untold millions, nudged them back roughly up to where they were two years ago.

FEWER HUNTERS DIE

Fatal hunting accidents in Ontario decreased from 36 in 1960 to 14 in 1964.

Agena Rocket Failure Due To 'Hard Start'

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The failure of the Agena rocket that ruined the two-man Gemini 6 flight last month probably was caused by a "hard start"—something like the backfire of an automobile engine—the U.S. Air Force reported Monday.

The Agena broke apart six minutes 10 seconds after it was launched from Cape Kennedy Oct. 25 and wiped out the launching of astronauts Walter Schirra and Thomas Stafford. The astronauts, who were waiting for blast-off from a nearby launch pad, were to have chased the Agena in an effort to conduct man's first linkup with another orbiting object.

An air force announcement said review boards had not definitely established the cause of the failure but that it most likely was a result of a hard start of the Agena's main engine.

The announcement said tests are being conducted to determine corrective action. It said it was too soon at this time whether future Gemini - Agena docking missions would be affected by the failure.

The last five Gemini flights—numbers 8 through 12—all involve hook-ups with Agenas to practise techniques for manned lunar landings. Gemini 6 has been rescheduled for December, when Schirra and Stafford will attempt to manoeuvre close to the Gemini 7 craft piloted by Astronauts Frank Borman and James Lovell. Gemini 8 is scheduled in February or March.

Meat Packers Must Show Fat of Bacon

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers Association of Canada said Monday Meat packers should be required by next May 1 to let customers see how much fat is on their bacon.

The association declared it would urge the federal government to permit no further delay in applying regulations stringently about bacon packages.

The Food and Drug Directorate of the federal health department issued instructions to all packers of meat products last February to end "any element of deception that may exist by the use of your present method of packaging bacon."

The directorate said it was difficult for a buyer to know the proportion of lean to fat in bacon which is packaged so that only the meaty edges show. It said it would take "appropriate action" if the deceptive packaging of bacon continues.

Siamese Twin Girls Separated

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—A pair of seven-month-old Siamese twin girls were successfully separated during a four-hour operation at North Carolina Memorial Hospital Monday.

Doctors said they were in "very satisfactory condition" late Monday, but still in danger. The girls were in an intensive care ward.

Doctors said they considered the next seven to 10 days a "crucial period."

The girls were born last April to Mrs. David Allen of High Point. Her husband is a factory worker in a furniture plant.

A four-man team of surgeons performed the operation. Eighteen doctors were involved, some for standby duty and consultations.

Known medically as ischiopagus twins, the girls were joined in the lower hip region, their bodies fused from the hip to a common navel.

Medicare Likely to Become Big Issue in New House

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP)—Medical care insurance is the Liberal election campaign promise that appears likely to become the big issue in the new Parliament.

Prime Minister Pearson pledged a national medical plan by July 1, 1967.

Any move by the minority Liberal government to implement the promise calls for fairly prompt action. It may not be easy sledding.

The New Democrats for years have backed a government-run universal medical care insurance program. Conservative Leader Diefenbaker during the campaign pledged to carry out the recommendations of the latest royal commission on health—including the one for medical insurance.

But both have criticized the Liberal position on the issue.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Liberal proposals for medical care, already placed before the provinces, were set out without careful investigation of costs or needs.

NDP Leader Douglas during late stages of the campaign said the Liberals were beginning to waver on two points the NDP considers essential — complete coverage for everyone and exclusion of participation by private insurance companies.

Social Credit and Creditistes want a plan less than universal, with choice left to the individual on whether to join or not.

The Liberals also came under fire during the campaign for their position on the old age pension.

The Conservatives promised an increase to $100 from $75 a month in the pension now paid to all at age 70. The NDP wants it at $100 a month from age 65.

The last Parliament passed legislation that would bring the eligible age for the current $75-a-month payment down in one-year stages so that it will be payable to persons age 65 by 1970.

During the campaign, the Liberals promised that pension payments to the needy would be increased to meet their needs under a joint program with the provinces.

This proposal drew opposition from about the means test necessary to establish the level of such extra payments.

"Water Department? I'd like to report a drastic drop in the water pressure."

Another area where a minority Liberal government could find the going tough is in carrying out some "unpopular" steps to keep the economy healthy.

Several ministers during the campaign mentioned such steps as an argument for a Liberal majority, saying action would have to put a dampler on some potential economic hot spots.

NOT SO TOUCHY

Other main promises by the Liberals were in areas less likely to stir prolonged parliamentary debate. They include:

—An improved and extended crop insurance program.

—National dairy commission, similar marketing agencies for other farm products and a feed grain agency for Eastern Canada and British Columbia.

—Unemployment insurance for full-time farm workers and income support for prairie farms if necessary.

—$500,000,000 over 15 years to aid medical and dental research and training.

—$40,000,000 university scholarship program over four years and higher grants for universities.

—$100,000,000 roads program for the north.

—More funds for the Atlantic Development Board and $25,000,000 investment in Nova Scotia's coal industry.

—Adjustment of the contributory Canada Pension Plan basic rate if necessary.

Massive Power Blackout Hits U.S.

Ten Hours of Blackness Halts Traffic, Strands Hundreds of Thousands

A CITY WITHOUT LIGHTS—Manhattan skyscra pers and apartment buildings are dark shortly after five o'clock during New York's massive blackout. In fo reground is the Hudson River, with ships lighted by their own power systems. This view was made from W est New York, N.J., by free lance photographer Phil Lase. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Lights flashed on in New York early today and transportation systems began to move, signalling the end to a massive and frightening power blackout that crippled the teeming northeastern United States and parts of Ontario.

After 10 hours of worried wailing the lights came back on at 3:35 a.m. EST in the heart of Manhattan—one of the last areas affected by North America's worst power failure.

New York's mammoth subway system staggered back into operation and commuter train service was slowly restored.

The city remained crippled because hundreds of thousands of persons could not get in to work.

Coming on with alarming suddenness during Tuesday's evening rush hour, the blackout at its peak enveloped 80,000 square miles, affected up to 30,000,000 persons in eight states, "scrambled transportation and communications and stranded hundreds of thousands of stalled subway cars and elevators.

Through the night, the Texas White House reported progress of experts trying to pinpoint the trouble that drained electric power from New York, Boston and hundreds of smaller cities, towns and hamlets.

Reports were contradictory, although President Johnson was advised the experts were "pretty well agreed" no sabotage was involved and the Pentagon said military communications and the Washington-Moscow hotline were not hampered.

As the night wore on, power began seeping back into most of the blackout area that at one time stretched over New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Vermont, Rhode Island and Ontario.

Johnson, however, ordered the U.S. Federal Power Commission to launch a sweeping

Causes of Failures

TORONTO (CP) — The electricity that browns your toast, the warmth that comes into your home on subways or street-cars went the wrong way Tuesday night. As a result 20,000,000 people in southeastern Ontario and the eastern United States had cold dinners and got home late.

Officials of the publicly-owned Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, at a candle lit interview during three successive blackouts in Toronto, told how it could happen."

A complex of interlocking power lines extends from Hydro - Quebec through Ontario Hydro to various power companies of New York state and south to the Gulf of Mexico and west to Montana.

This grid carries electricity from the the rivers of northern Quebec and Ontario, steam-op-

NEW YORK (AP) — The seeming densely populated area, including all of New York City. About one-fifth of the population of the U.S. was affected.

Today government and utility engineers are trying to find how to keep the system from failing again and spreading chaos.

The system is part of a power pool in which a number of independent and public utilities link lines for economy, efficiency, defence and—ironically—

TORONTO (CP)—A massive power failure—largest in North American history — plunged a large area of Ontario and the United State s northeast into darkness Tuesday night, snarling communications and disrupting industry.

Ontario Hydro officials said the failure in upstate New York near the Canadian border collapsed the entire system which supplies power to industrial areas of Quebec, Ontario and the eastern U.S. Quebec province was isolated from the system at the time and not affected.

In a series of power interruptions lasting from five minutes to two hours, thousands of home s and commuters were stranded as Toronto subways halted, auto—assembly plants shutdown, farmers sent their men home, oil refineries shut down and a London, Ont., bakery lost 4,500 loaves of bread when ovens cooled.

Hydro officials said the initial breakdown occurred at 5:16 p.m. EST, affecting most of southern Ontario east of Peterborough. There were disruptions in Trenton, Belleville, Smiths Falls and Brockville.

Ontario officials, busy restoring their own system to normal, were unable to pinpoint the cause. But they said an "unprecedented power surge" along lines carrying hundreds of thousands of volts flowed into the Ontario system at Cornwall, west to Niagara Falls, and back into New York State.

ISOLATE ONTARIO

Engineers pulled switches, isolating Ontario from the eastern power-exchange grid, and called all generating resources in the provinces into full operation. By 8:30 p.m. service was almost completely restored.

Meanwhile, this happened in Ontario's industrial heartland:

—Ford Motor Co. of Canada lost an estimated 1,000 shift at its Oakville assembly plant and sent home 2,000 workers.

—At Brampton another 500-600 workers went home.

—Shell Oil at Oakville fell 10,000 barrels behind in production after emergency procedures brought refinery production to a halt.

—Workers at Wolverine Tube Co. in London watched furnaces cool and molten copper

Belleville's United Appeal as now collected more than ever before in its history and is still going.

The City Department, including all city employees, collected a total of 50 per cent more than in 1964. United Appeal headquarters reports the large increase was made possible by returns just received by the Police Department. Belleville City Police gave 67 per cent more than their 1964 returns.

There were also good returns from the Public Works, the Recreation Department, the Health Department and Transit Commission, all making returns for the first time.

Persons wishing to donate directly to the United Appeal can do so by bringing or mailing their returns to United Appeal Headquarters, 180 Front Street, across from the City Hall in the old Ontario Intelligencer building.

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment fell to 171,000 at mid-October, easing off slightly from 178,000 at mid-September but down nearly one-third from a year ago, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the labor department said today in a joint report.

It said employment rose between September and October by about 25,000 to 7,000,000. In previous years, employment has tended to fall at this time of year, while unemployment has tended to rise.

The survey conducted at mid-month reported the total labor force at 7,179,000. This is an increase of 204,000 or nearly three per cent from a year earlier.

The 171,000 unemployment figures was felt in all age groups.

"Employment in agriculture was well maintained during the month, as late harvesting in Western Canada delayed the seasonal decline in farm labor requirements," the report said

"In non-farm industries, employment rose by 18,000, which was about in line with the usual seasonal increase."

The labor-force grew by 115,000 women and 85,000 men. The rate of growth of women, 5.7 per cent, was substantially higher than the rate for men, 1.8 per cent.

The report said job opportunities for women have increased substantially during recent months, largely as a result of expansion in the service industries. The number of women employed at mid-October was 67 per cent greater than at the same time last year. The number of men employed was up 3.4 per cent.

Total employment in October showed an increase of 250,000, or 4.3 per cent from a year earlier. Non-farm employment was up 209,000, or 4.9 per cent.

"Employment was noticeably higher than a year ago in all regions, the Atlantic region leading with a gain of 7.1 per cent," the report said.

This was the job picture in brief (estimates in thousands):

	Oct. Sept. Oct. 1965 1965 1964
Labor force	7,179 7,150 6,975
Employed	7,008 6,983 6,718

Cabinet Facing Big Task

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal cabinet meets today to tidy up any administrative loose ends which may have developed during the election campaign.

But political questions were sure to be uppermost in the minds of the Liberal ministers, shorn of two colleagues at the polls.

The major questions are a matter of how the ministers faced after they first took office April 22, 1963...

What legislative proposals will be placed before Parliament when the government again commands only a minority of votes?

The leaders of the four opposition parties have given plenty of occasion during the campaign where they stand on most of the major items, such as medical care insurance or tax cuts.

And the cabinet's task is further simplified by having a clear record of the positions of the four parties during the previous Parliament.

PC ATTACK LOOMS

What may loom larger in their minds is how to deal with the already - threatened attack of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker on government integrity.

Prime Minister Pearson made no secret when he called the Nov. 8 election that he was dissolving Parliament in anticipation of a combined attack by the opposition parties on this matter.

His thinking seemed to be that it was better to let the voters pass judgment than run

Remand Mother For Stabbing Of Uncle

TORONTO (CP)—A 24-year-old mother was remanded in custody to Nov. 15 for sentence Tuesday after pleading guilty to a charge of wounding her uncle with a knife after he allegedly offered her daughter a candy last June.

Katherine Hnard of nearby Cookville was originally charged with attempted murder.

Defence counsel Austin Cooper and psychiatrist Dr. Michael Tuchtie both said Mrs. Hunard had been using Mandrax, because he had mobilized her when she was young.

Mr. Cooper said that when Mrs. Huard saw her uncle offer her two-year-old daughter a candy at a wine-drinking party June 14 she imagined a repetition of her own childhood experiences.

Police said Mr. Lindsey, stabbed in the back by a knife that penetrated a lung, staggered around for some time at the party without knowing he had been stabbed.

When someone told him he had a knife in his back, he laughed. But later he saw the hilt in a mirror, had a child pull out the knife and then went for a walk.

Wilson Drafts Private Message to Rhodesia

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson today drafted a personal message to Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith in an effort to end the deadlock in negotiations over independence for the central African colony.

Final drafting of the message, due to be delivered to Smith later in the day, began after Wilson presided over a one-hour cabinet meeting to determine now a final break between the two countries could be avoided.

Unlike most recent exchanges between the two prime ministers, here, the message from Wilson will not be published.

Observers here believe it will amount to a final warning by Britain in the name for any illegal seizure of independence by Rhodesia's white - minority government will first solely on the Rhodesian side.

The British prime minister has stressed publicly and privately throughout the crisis that Britain is willing to keep up its efforts to seek a negotiated settlement of the independence issue that could be acceptable to Rhodesia's 4,000,000 Negroes as well as its 220,000 whites.

Wilson's message was not described in government quarters as a specific reply to Smith's brief message of Monday. This said the views of the two governments are basically similar.

Senior British ministers believed some kind of action amounting to an illegal seizure of independence by Smith's government was imminent.

They felt the main chance of averting such a step lay in the current visit to London by Rhodesia's chief justice, Sir Hugh Beadle, who played an important behind-the-scenes role during Britain's talks in Salisbury two weeks ago.

The British prime minister had two meetings with Beadle after he arrived Tuesday, apparently against the wishes of the Rhodesian leader.

Campaign Promises Could Test Temper of New Govt.

OTTAWA (CP) — Conflicting campaign promises could test the temper of the new minority Parliament.

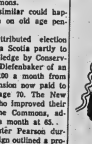
There could be parallels to the revamping of same government proposals under opposition pressure and the subsequent achievement of a broad consensus that marked the last minority Parliament.

Last session's flag debate was one example. The government's original proposal for a three-leaf flag wound up as a one-leaf design after a long and stormy voyage through a committee and the commons.

Something similar could happen this time on old age pensions.

Liberals attributed election losses in Nova Scotia partly to a campaign pledge by Conservative Leader Diefenbaker of an increase to $100 a month from $75 in the pension now paid to everyone at age 70. The New Democrats, who improved their standing in the Commons, advocated $100 a month at 65. . .

Prime Minister Pearson during the campaign outlined a proposal to increase the pension only for those in need under a co-operative plan with the provinces. The extra payment would be contingent on a form of means test.



New Democrat Leader Douglas says Canadians want higher pensions and Parliament must tackle this as soon as possible.

Princess Winds Up Holiday, Will Take Rest in Arizona

LOS ANGELES (AP)—British Princess Margaret wound up a hectic tourist's holiday in glossy Hollywood and space-craft centres, then abruptly changed pace, looking forward today to a strictly private rest in the desert serenity of Tucson, Ariz.

The princess and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, ended their three-day visit here Tuesday with a tour of the new Los Angeles Music Centre and then boarded their private jet with Mayor Samuel W. Yorty.

Princess Margaret was still taking medication for laryngitis she contracted during the Canadian pace when she was host-ess at a luncheon in her honor at the home of British Consul-General Peter G. F. Dalton. Earlier, Princess Margaret had visited a home for elderly British subjects in nearby Sierra Madre while her husband set the cornerstone for a British motorcycle sales firm. in Duarte, a few miles away.

The Snowdons bade Hollywood goodbye Tuesday night at a buffet supper.

The four-day stay in Tucson is billed as absolutely private. The Snowdons will be guests of Lewis Douglas, former U.S. ambassador to Britain, and his wife on their 200-acre ranch.

The Snowdons showed royalty's interest in the space age Tuesday when they stretched their visit to the California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Labora-

Kiwanis Hold Annual Remembrance Day Service

Ypres, Vimy, Hill 60, Dunkirk, Dieppe.

For a time they were being fought all over again. Enemy guns were heard in the background, pounding, pounding, pounding. The mud was there. The pain. The misery. The death.

Rev. A. C. McCallum, chaplain of the Anglican Church, Kingston, spoke at the annual Kiwanis Club Remembrance Day proceedings yesterday.

He said, "I shall never forget those names as long as I live.

"Who can forget Winston Churchill rallying his people to fight with whatever they had? Who can forget the human sacrifice, the loss of lives that, along with the aid of God, brought the free world from the hands of tyranny?

"Let us never forget that the freedom we have today was bought at such a terrible price . . . the lives of thousands of our people.

"Human nature being what it is, many people will ignore Remembrance Day. They will forget it is a day of remembrance. A solemn day.

"Yet this day is possible only because of the blood of those people of our free world who died.

"Surely a country that forgets the sacrifice of lives in the fight for freedom is not worthy of such a sacrifice.

"Many men gave their lives, and though it seemed at one time that justice would not prevail over tyranny, God granted us victory so that His people may live in a land of freedom . . . a promised land.

"These are difficult days we live in today, yes how much more difficult would they be if men had not made that sacrifice on the battlefields of the world.

"People who ask, 'What did we gain from the war?,' surely have no realization of what it has meant for us and if we had not achieved victory.

"We must be a people who honor the dead, who love their country, who cherish their freedom and who are willing to sacrifice in peace time, just as our honored dead did in war time."

Rev. McCullum said that a portion of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address would be suitable to our present day situation. The address was delivered by President Lincoln at the dedication of the National Cemetery at Gettysburg, November 19, 1863.

Lincoln said, in part: "We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting-place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain . . ."

Campaign

fourth largest group in the Commons, also want the payment at $100 a month.

All this adds up to heavy financial pressure on the government.

Mr. Douglas made protection of the consumer from misleading advertising, dishonest practices and shoddy goods a prime plank in his party's platform and put this on his list of priority issues for the next session.

He and Mr. Diefenbaker both advocated steps against exorbitant interest rates and the Conservative leader proposed a consumer loan plan similar to that for government loans for farm improvement.

MAY BRING PLANS

This area was virtually untouched by the Liberals during the campaign but opposition pressure might generate some proposals.

The Liberal promise of a medical care insurance plan got endorsement in principle from the Conservatives and New Democrats. But there could be pressure for changes in the proposal the government has already placed before the provinces.

That was for federal payment of $15 for each provincial resident, estimated to be half the cost of providing coverage. The provinces would pay the other half.

Mr. Diefenbaker says that plan was drafted without sufficient study of costs and needs and was tossed to the provinces on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. Mr. Douglas is flatly against any participation by private insurance carriers or anything less than a plan that covers every Canadian.

The Liberals have indicated they think a plan covering about 90 per cent of the population, perhaps with some government participation, would be acceptable.

AGREE ON AID

There is general agreement among the parties on more aid for provinces. The NDP goes further than the others, calling for immediate free university education.

However, steps such as promised by the Liberals for higher grants, a big scholarship program and federal payments to expand medical and dental research and training facilities seem likely to command support.

The parties also are close together on the main 4-liberal agriculture pledges: Steps to improve the lot of eastern farmers; a program to ensure feed grain supplies from the Prairies for eastern provinces in British Columbia and the East; unemployment insurance for full-time farm workers.

But there will be opposition pressure in the economic and taxation fields.

Mr. Diefenbaker plumped for cuts in corporation and personal income taxes and removal of the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building materials and production machinery. Mr. Douglas, who advocates complete economic planning, wants a 50-per-cent increase in personal income tax exemptions and a reduction in the interest rate on government housing loans.

One Liberal argument for a majority government was that some unpopular steps would have to be taken after the election to put checkrein on a gallloping economy. Just what was planned was not spelled out.

Some horse trading might crop up here to get steps acceptable to the Commons.

—Newspapers and radio and TV stations had their news wire services disrupted.

NO DEATHS REPORTED

Hospitals were on auxiliary power. There were no reports of deaths.

Robert Hillery, Ontario Hydro director of operations, said a "serious and detailed investigation" would be conducted.

"We never thought this was possible," he said. "The entire system is geared so that when a power line is broken—by falling trees or drunken drivers—the excessive current backup actuates relays, which isolate the trouble spot and reroutes the electricity.

"We will play a large role in the investigation, which will be a full-scale study by computers.

"It could never reach disaster proportions—even in winter. Ontario Hydro has enough different stations and split systems to inter-connect and give power to every community."

But Tuesday night's failure—worst since a six-hour interruption at the Niagara Falls generating station before the First World War—was more serious than a tipsy motorist or a falling tree could cause.

In downtown Toronto power was off from 5:15 to 6:18 p.m., from 6:35 to 7:10 and again from 7:25 to 7:45.

MAYOR'S WIFE CAUGHT

The first blackout caught home-bound folk leaving offices and shops. Some were stuck in elevators—including the wife of Toronto Mayor Philip Givens who was imprisoned briefly when the car in city hall stopped.

Fire apparatus and police squad cars sped through the downtown area helping stranded passengers out of elevators. Police Chief James Marsh issued an appeal to residents to stay home because of snarled traffic.

Lights flicked on and off at Toronto International airport but auxiliary power systems speedily took over. However, flights to Kennedy and La Guardia airports in New York were cancelled because of the continuing blackout there.

Toronto Transit commission officials estimated 200,000 persons were on their way home when the first blackout struck, tying up street cars and subway trains.

A total of 670 street cars were lined up in downtown streets like strings of sausages. Another 130 trolley coaches were halted in heavy traffic. TTC officials called in gas and diesel buses from the suburbs to ease the strain.

Underground passengers climbed out of end cars on ladders and were led along the rails to exits. There was no danger because the blackout had killed power on the third rail. With the third blacked, officials stopped service until 8 p.m.

Dozens of burglar alarms, actuated by battery power, flashed on when regular power failed. The blackout had the same effect as a burglar tampering with a safe.

The sudden surge when power was restored touched off a fire alarm at Toronto's new city hall. Six fire companies searched the building, a downtown show-place, for 30 minutes without finding a fire.

Power service was maintained to the Windsor-Sarnia area.

Montreal International Airport handled as extra 12 international flights diverted from blacked out airports in New York.

It's apple time in Canada! November is Apple Month; next week, November 11th to the 20th is "Apple Week" and growers across the country are going all out to publicize their orchard product.

A national apple advertising campaign is in full swing with eye-catching placards urging people to "Eat An Apple Today" appearing in food stores and supermarkets.

Colorful outdoor billboards further publicize apples, pointing out their tastiness eaten out of hand, or in the form of pies, applesauce or whatever.

Advertisements are appearing in newspaper and magazines with spot announcements also on radio and television.

Colorful displays of apples are being encouraged in supermarkets with special prizes being offered for the best displays in retail outlets.

New York Ten Hours

investigation and save it all the facilities of the federal government, including the FBI.

The blackout came with a population of lights at a hot 5:30 p.m. EST, the peak of the rush hour in teeming cities.

Subway cars mysteriously entombed between floors. Operating rooms darkened. News tickers fell silent. Airliners headed for other ports. Convicts in a Massachusetts prison rioted.

Immediately, off-duty police were called back to work. National guardsmen were put on alert in case of looting. Emergency power was plugged in at hospitals.

A commercial airline pilot winging in for a landing at Boston's Logan International Airport at 5:21 p.m. witnessed the startling sight. There below in a brightly lighted city and suddenly it plunges into darkness. You don't know what to think."

At Manhattan's St. Vincent's Hospital an emergency generator failed during a brain operation. A police generator was pressed into action and the operation was completed. St. Patrick's Cathedral on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue was nearly filled with worried worshippers.

Some 300 prisoners at the Massachusetts State Prison took advantage of the excitement to throw a furniture-breaking riot until guards and state troopers herded them into one cell block.

Massachusetts and New York called out their state national guards. In New York, some of the guardsmen helped evacuate the thousands stranded in the subways.

Traffic, a tangle anyway in rush hour, became a horn-blaring nightmare in most of the bigger cities when traffic lights abruptly blinked off.

New York police installed two anti - aircraft searchlights at Lexington Avenue and 42nd Street and at 42nd and Broadway and bounced their powerful beams off buildings to illuminate the Grand Central and Times Square areas

Police also banned the sale of intoxicating beverages.

There was a big run on flashlights, lanterns and candles, and the soft lights of candles and matches glowed in skyscraper windows.

From Broadway's Great White Way, it looked as if thousands of fireflies were lighting up the darkness as New Yorkers trudged along carrying flashlights.

With the power flowing back, the problem became what happened and how to stop it from happening again.

The electric - power system was considered the last word in sophisticated engineering.

But ironically, the power grid, designed to assure a supply of electricity in an emergency, may have spread the blackout just as it normally would spread power.

The system is part of a power pool in which a number of independent and public utilities link lines for economy, efficiency, national security and dependability.

Gideons Hear Of Work Done By Association

On Saturday night in the Pinnacle Room of the Hotel Quinte many Gideons from Eastern Ontario, and their friends gathered to greet the president of the Gideons International in Canada, Mr. Leonard D. Crimp.

Mr. Arthur J. Burnham of Toronto, executive director for the Gideon Association, was chairman for a packed-out gathering.

After the invocation by Rev. Gordon B. Woodcock and the singing of God Save the Queen, a hearty roast beef banquet of the customary high Hotel Quinte quality was served. Later some of the old hymns of the church were sung by all, then several numbers were rendered by the Ambassadors' Quartet, comprising Harry Hitchon, bass; Brian Hitchon, baritone, Kenneth Belch, second tenor and Frederick Elliott, tenor. Miss Barbara Ann Vanderwater, Oak Hills performed admirably at the piano.

His worship Mayor Jack Ellis brought the greetings of the City of Belleville and spoke briefly on the value, importance and desirability of tolerance and understanding not only in broader fields, but between up to date inter-relationships as citizens of Quinte's finest city. Other head table guests included Mr. Beverley Foster, president of the Belleville Gideons and his wife, as well as Rev. Maurice Votcary, chaplain of the Belleville Gideons, and his wife.

AIMS OF ASSOCIATION

The speaker was introduced by chairman Arthur Burnham, and began his address with a historical sketch of the origin of his association in placing God's word where it would reach the public, in such places as hotels, motels, schools, prisons and hospitals. This placement is not so much to the institutions involved, by local business and professional men who are remembered at the end of World War II this work was carried on in the United States and Canada only, but since that time, nationals in over 70 different countries have been organized to carry on this work in their own lands.

Mr. Crimp told of many interesting experiences in his around-the-world trip, recently completed, in the establishing of some of these groups in the Far East including India, and pointing to the Bible distribution being carried on there. This work has been stepped up in intensity recently because doors that are now open to this work are closing, and the work of foreign missionaries is becoming more and more difficult.

To this end, the Gideons are providing Scriptures this year to a cost of almost three-quarters of a million dollars for foreign extension, as a deterrent to Godless communism, the great threat of the Far East.

Wilson Denies Planning Early Election

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—In a blunt courtship of the tiny Liberal party, Prime Minister Wilson admitted Tuesday there will be no steel nationalization bill during the new session of Parliament, opened by the Queen in traditional pomp and ceremony.

Opposition Leader Edward Heath, in a tough Tory speech, immediately accused the Labor leader of placing political power ahead of his own entrenched beliefs in "a squalid act of political expediency."

Cabinet

the risk of defeat of his minority government on it in the Commons.

Since he failed to win a majority in the election, the risk and the issues remain to be faced when Parliament gets under way. It's up to him to decide when that will be. Before he does, he and his ministers will be looking for ways to prevent the honeymoon government issue from developing into a Commons defeat.

A defeat in the Commons on a non-confidence motion based on this issue would leave the government with no alternative but to resign.

And resignation means one of two things—another election or handling power back to Mr. Diefenbaker. The public probably wouldn't stand for the former and few Liberals could contemplate the latter.

MAKE ARRANGEMENT?

So the next consideration may be whether the government can make some arrangement with one of the three smaller opposition groups—New Democrats with 21 seats, Creditistes with nine or Social Credit with five.

Everything from coalition to working arrangements will be looked at. That means confidence or informal talks to find out what the potential co-operation would require of or change for voting support of the government in a crucial Commons test.

The first such test traditionally comes on the throne speech debate just after Parliament opens. So the arrangements, if any, must be made before the date for opening Parliament is selected.

If a cabinet reconstruction is said of the price demanded by the opposition groups, Mr. Pearson has an election - made reason for agreeing. He needs an agriculture minister to replace Harry Hays, defeated in Calgary South, and a defence minister to replace J. Watson MacNaught, defeated in Prince. This gives him a chance to distribute cabinet portfolios in a manner more likely to be acceptable to such critics as New Democratic Leader Douglas and Social Credit Leader Thompson, who have both demanded he "clean house" without giving specific indication whether they meant to include his cabinet.

Whatever Mr. Pearson and his ministers decide to do about their political situation, there is one certainty—they'll be giving it top priority for the next few weeks.

Unemployment

The number of unemployed in mid-October was 2.4 per cent of the labor force. The October unemployment rate was 3.7 per cent in 1964, and 3.9 per cent in 1963. Unemployment rates were lower this October than a year ago in all regions.

The report said that adjusted for seasonal fluctuations the October unemployment rate in this year was 3.2 per cent. A year ago it was 4.0 per cent.

The previous low point in the unadjusted rate figure was 2.5 per cent, November, 1965. The October rate that year was 1.8 per cent. Unemployment rose subsequent to 10.8 per cent of the labor force in March, 1958 and then after failing to 3.6 per cent in September, 1959, to 11.3 per cent in February, 1961.

Today's report said about 129,000 of the 171,000 unemployed at mid-October this year had been out of work for three months or less. Some 42,000, or one quarter of the total, had been seeking work for four months or more, and of them, 20,000 had been looking for jobs for seven months or longer.

The latter are the so-called "hard core" of the unemployed. The number of those looking for jobs for seven months or longer was 34,000 in October last year.

The report is compiled from a survey of 35,000 homes taken during the week ended Oct. 16.

Hydro on, off, on Again In Belleville Blackout

Compared to other areas where power was off for hours, Belleville was lucky in last night's blackout which saw hydro failure over a wide area ranging Ontario to the eastern United States to Florida.

Power was off in most of the city for a total of about 12 minutes, spread over three different interruptions. In the Herchimer Ave. area power was said to have been off for over half an hour as trouble was experienced in getting a local sub station back into operation.

Utilities manager Ernest Burnham said the Herchimer area failure was prolonged due to the fact that the sub-station had to be brought back into operation gradually.

The blackouts, caused by powers grid system trouble in Northern New York state, struck Belleville during the evening rush hour. City police turned out to manually direct rush hour traffic when traffic lights failed.

It was a complete blackout in the city with emergency power equipment being switched in at Belleville General Hospital.

The same was true at the new YMCA where about 50 youngsters were in the swimming pool when the lights failed. The pool water heaters light went into use for the first time since the building opened this year.

A basketball game at a local high school stopped short and students in stores also came to a halt when the blackout struck.

When the power interruption occurred in Northern New York, Ontario hydro officials cut their system out of the international grid supply complex and brought thermal and standby waterpower plants into full play.

The three brief, but separate, interruptions were the result of delay in getting standby power sources synchronized to feed into the provincial grid system.

De Gaulle Stays Put

President de Gaulle, with all the power and eloquence that have made him France's man of the century, has decided to remain in office for another seven years. Although he is 75 he appears more than equal to the task of leading France further along the road to moral and economic regeneration.

Twenty-five years have elapsed since a youthful-looking de Gaulle first stood on the world scene as leader of the Free French forces which escaped to Britain after Dunkirk and the fall of France.

De Gaulle wasted no time in seeking from other Allied leaders due recognition of France. His self-imposed task was the restoration of his country's honor in the eyes of the world. Churchill and Roosevelt came to know the intransigence as well as the courage of the man. "The cross I have to bear is the Cross of Lorraine," Churchill once commented wryly.

De Gaulle never faltered in his mission. When the Allies invaded Europe, French troops entered Paris in triumph and de Gaulle was hailed as a hero. There followed years in near obscurity until the nation, wracked by post-war turmoil and political instability, looked to its wartime leader to restore order out of chaos.

De Gaulle succeeded in this task. Latterly he has been taking France along an increasingly independent line, pursuing its own nuclear strategy, siding with Russia in demanding the Americans withdraw from Viet Nam and refusing to permit American NATO planes to operate from French territory.

France would not be the same without Le Grand Charles, as he has affectionately (mixed with exasperation) come to be known. He has provided the firm hand France so sorely needed and without which it would surely fail, once again, into political disarray.

Mr. Smith Steps Out

Arnold Smith, the Commonwealth's first secretary-general, has made a significant choice for what might be termed his first field tour.

The Toronto-born diplomat, accompanied by a deputy, A. L. Adu of Ghana, sets out Sunday on a five-country tour of Africa to gain first-hand information on African problems and to help persuade dissatisfied members not to pull out of the Commonwealth.

Smith will visit Tanzania, Malawi, Zambia, Kenya and Nigeria, conferring with government officials. Significantly, he will not stop in Rhodesia, partly, it is said, because the issue there is considered one mainly between Salisbury and London and partly because it is unlikely that he would be welcomed by Ian Smith and his namesake, Prime Minister Ian Smith, is still teetering on the brink of a unilateral declaration of independence.

It may be wondered in retrospect, though, if it might not have been better to send the secretary-general to confer with Mr. Smith, rather than Prime Minister Wilson. The Canadian Smith and the Rhodesian Smith might have been able to meet in an atmosphere less charged with emotionalism than was the case in the Wilson-Smith talks.

Molotov Back

Former Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov is reported to be back in favor after eight years in the political doghouse. East German diplomats say he is working behind the scenes as Soviet Premier Kosygin's personal adviser on foreign affairs.

Molotov, now 75, was Stalin's right-hand man. At east-west summit meetings, Molotov was the man who acquired a reputation for saying Nyet—or No.

The venerable expert in foreign affairs holds no official post, according to the East German informants, but they said he is being consulted by Kosygin not only on foreign affairs but on some economic matters as well.

Maybe Kosygin is seeking enlightenment on Stalinist methods of achieving a good grain harvest. Ruthlessness might pay off in dealings with farmers as it did—allegedly in the time of Stalin's death at least—in ensuring that the old dictator's general policies were followed without question.

Dorothy Kilgallen

The death of Dorothy Kilgallen at the age of 52 removes from the world of journalism one of its most interesting personalities.

Miss Kilgallen began her career as a cub reporter with the old New York Evening Journal in 1931. One of her achievements illustrates the passing of an era in airline travel. In 1936 her paper sent her on a round-the-world flight in competition with reporters from other newspapers.

Using commercial air routes she made the trip in 36 days, 12 hours and 52 minutes. Nowadays a similar globe-encircling trip can be made in three or four days.

Acid in River Pollution

Brockville Recorder and Times

When a tank truck had an accident recently in this area, inadvertently dumping a relatively infinitesimal amount of carbolic acid into the vast St. Lawrence River, it produced startling and significant results.

Though the amount of acid would seem insignificant in relation to the huge amount of water involved, traces of the acid were nevertheless found in the water systems of Brockville, Morristown, Ogdensburg and Massena, New York. Here we have a clear illustration of what even the smallest amount of pollution can do to a very large body of water. This type of pollution was given considerable prominence and publicity simply because in larger proportions to the volume of water involved it could have been dangerously poisonous to human beings. All of which should give us to think seriously about all the other types of pollution which are being poured into this river in vastly greater amounts than any single truck load of carbolic acid, but which do not receive hardly any publicity because effects are not immediately felt—it is merely cumulative in result.

But cumulative it is, any type of pollution, and disastrously so in the end. Lake Erie is a classic case. Nobody will recently took pollution in Lake Erie seriously. Nobody thought it possible to eliminate the huge body of fresh water—until recently. Now when it probably is too late, water scientists are in firm agreement that Lake Erie is a dying lake, and there is rather general agreement that pollution is causing its death. The cumulative effect over the years of human wastes, chemical wastes and detergents is strangling Lake Erie to death—already many of its beach areas are ruined, and its once bountiful supply of high-grade commercial fish (yellow and blue pickerel) is gone—forever.

Surely there is a lesson for us all here? Surely we are not going to go and kill all the rest of the fresh water bodies in the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River basin? Or are we? It is up to us. This incident of the tank truck is all too illustrative of man's capacity to destroy Nature. Let us remember it. Particularly now when we have reached a point and a time in history in North America when it is recognized by water engineers that supplies of fresh water are already dangerously low—parts of the United States being now in a state of crisis in this respect.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 10th, 1945

Most of us are familiar or at least have some slight idea of the care that is taken of milk from the time it comes from the cow until it gets into the consumers' hands. And even before the cow is milked she must pass tests for tuberculosis. All these precautions are necessary because milk is a fluid which is easily contaminated through improper handling for the reason that it provides an excellent food source for a great many types of bacteria.

With these thoughts in mind it occurs to us that as soon as paper products are more freely available, consideration might be given by local milk dealers to the adoption of a more sanitary milk bottle cap. The cap used at present fits tightly enough, but it leaves a depression at the top of the bottle which makes an ideal catch basin for dust.

Under the system of house-to-house distribution it is impossible to avoid picking up a certain amount of dust. All housewives, presumably, wipe the tops of the bottles carefully before use, but, since nothing more than a damp cloth can be used, it is obviously difficult to do a thorough job.

A couple of pails of water soon extinguished the blaze and eventually the inmates decided it would continue to spend the night where it was comfortably warm, without the open fire.

Hit-and-run On High Seas

Charlottetown Patriot

At 5 a.m. the other day, the three-man crew of a Nova Scotian longliner had just set their trawls and were sheltering from the pre-dawn chill in the forecastle of their boat. The hooter. It was clear weather, though still dark. Suddenly a steamer loomed out of nowhere and rammed the boat amidships.

Thrown into the sea, the men clung to the shattered hull of their boat. A searchlight from the ship that had struck them picked them up in its beam as they struggled in the water, but the big vessel did not stop or slacken speed. It eventually pulled away into the darkness.

The young skipper of the longliner was seriously injured in the collision. Weak from loss of blood, he soon lost his hold on the wreckage of his boat and slipped away under the waves. The other two crew members were rescued 22 hours later by another fishing vessel.

It is incredible that a seafaring men could be as callous as those aboard the unknown ship. It is the tradition of the sea, and of transcends nationalities, faiths, colors and the considerations of trade and commerce, that every man help his fellows in peril in the water.

Surely fear of being blamed for the tragedy could not have pushed the unidentified skipper of whosever was at the helm on that bridge to abandoning the victims to their fate. In spite that vanished into the night might have been a vessel of foreign registry that had no business in those waters, or it might have carried an illicit cargo that could pay for the flight of the publicity that a sea rescue often involves.

Let us hope that the death of Captain Almon Smith will weigh upon them.

Sod Survey In Kansas

This may sound funny, but there is a group in Kansas, the Soil Conservation Service, which is conducting a survey—of sod houses. The group, which has its headquarters in Colby, Kansas, would like to hear from people who live in sod houses, lived in sod houses in the past, attended school or church in a sod building, had ancestors who lived in sod houses, and so forth.

The society is trying to compile a permanent historical record of sod houses — to tell the whole sod story, so to speak. So help them out. Anyone will relevant information can contact the society by writing to Sod House Survey, Colby, Kansas.

SMOKERS SEEN AS BAD RISK

Peterborough Examiner

A brief news item from Johannesburg brings some disturbing information. It has nothing to do with apartheid, but it deals with a more subtle form of discrimination that must be fought to the last. Two South African insurance companies are refusing life insurance to smokers, and others are increasing their premiums. One broker is reported as saying the two worst risks are medical men and newspapermen.

It is conceivable perhaps that a small insurance company would eliminate coverage of smokers in the hope of appealing to a narrow market. But it is difficult to imagine how large companies refusing to cater to smokers, who must amount to a large proportion of their business, Moreover, it would open the door to a challenge to specialize profitables in life insurance only for smokers. But anyway the inference — that smokers, to say nothing of newspapermen, are poor risks — is an unjustified one that the medical evidence does not yet support.

We are flattered, of course, that the newspaper profession is considered to be a dangerous one and that the world is beginning to recognize the perils newspapermen run in order to bring the facts to the people. But this dedication should be rewarded with special considerations, by insurance companies and others, rather than by penalties. Otherwise we might have to retaliate by boycotting insurance company workers more for their newspapers.

Have Bands Gone Soft?

Portland Oregonian

Hemlines and ear models are not the only things that change with the years. Add to the list, marching bands and bugle corps.

When a military band whipped down the street in olden times, it trilled "The Stars And Stripes Forever" or "Under the Double Eagle" or something equally as stirring and confident. But the rigmarole offered by halftime bands at football games is say nothing of the five-hour parade staged by the American Legion during its convention last summer, reminds us that progress leaves its mark on all things.

The Legion corps must expect to see a spit-and-polish color guard stepping it off resolutely to the strains of "Night and Day," or "Love Is the Sweetest Thing."

Time was when a good military band made you want to march off to war or at least around the breakfast table.

Now it just makes you want to kiss everybody in cadence. Sorry, Mr. Sousa.

To Your Good Health

Tells Diabetic to Diet, Leave Cookies Alone

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: With all due respect to your honorable profession, I am utterly confused. I am supposed to have a mild case of diabetes. Right now I am taking one Orinase tablet a day and my family doctor tells me I might well go it alone on that for the rest of my life.

My doctor at the factory says it is inevitable that in later years I will have to take insulin. I am 43 now.

My family doctor also says that a cookie or two a day can't hurt me. My factory doctor disagrees, emphatically. So, what is your opinion? — A. V.

With all due regard to my honorable profession, there is no way in the world to make everybody agree, but what I am going to tell you now will be approved by ninety-some percent of all doctors. Or so I hope. And any such percentage in politics would be the laudable of the century.

Here's my advice to you and to anyone else with diabetes:

If you have a mild case, nobody can predict with any accuracy whether you may, later in life, need insulin instead of pills. It will depend on how well you stick to your diet, how long you live, how rapidly your case tends to develop. Lots of people being careful, have diabetes And manage to get along on pills.

However, and this is a big "however," many people think they can cheat their diets and have it, too. They think they can get along forever on pills, but they don't stick to their diet. These are the people who get into trouble and do have to switch to insulin.

Now here's my guess. Your family doctor is trying to keep you happy, so he says it is possible to get along with pills. That's what you want to hear. And that's probably correct. If you watch your diet!

But you also want to eat your cookies, too And I'd bet 24 bottles of insulin against one cookie right now that you have been a hearty eater all your life, you like your entrées and sweet stuff, and have been wheedling your family doctor with arguments like, "A cookie once in a while won't hurt me will it?" And he says no, just to keep you happy.

The factory doctor refuses to mince words with you, and says "If you won't cut out the sweet stuff, you're going to wind up needing insulin."

I've watched plenty of people in his kind of doctor by saying, "Just one little cookie won't hurt me, will it?" Then they go home and eat half a pie. And pretty soon they need insulin.

Stick to your diet and forget about the cookies.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can dark eyes be changed to show a lighter color? — S. H.

No. There can be a slight amount of fading as we grow older, but there's really nothing we can do to change the color.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have precious anemia with a normal B12 shots. I am giving myself the shots at home now but am sure I always get the needle into the muscle.

Also will you explain the use of radiolustope for treatment of pernicious anemia? — F. C. H.

I doubt that you need any special advice on getting the shots into the muscle. Your doctor naturally specified a needle of suitable length.

Just insert it straight through the skin and you can't help hitting a suitable tissue. The isotope is for diagnosis, not treatment.

"Took" His Insurers, He Loses in End

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Someone I know slightly — and don't want to know any better — was bragging to a group of men the other day about how he "took" his auto insurance company.

His car had been damaged by another one. He took it to the garage and had repairs made — not only on the part that had been damaged, but also on some dents and scratches received long before the accident.

Thus, the bill sent to his insurance company was more than twice what it should have been. Multiply this motorist by millions of others, and one can understand why the auto insurance companies have to keep raising their rates.

The economic loss from traffic accidents last year totaled nearly $16 billion. Even though motorists paid more than $7 billion for insurance, the companies' payments were $1 billion more than the premiums collected.

Who is "taking" whom? The motorist and his conspiratorial garage mechanic, who pads a repair bill for insurance purposes, are cheating the company. They are cheating all the other motorists who don't do the same — for the added payments are promptly passed along to all the customers as higher premiums.

An insurance company isn't put together to lose money. Its rates are statistical — based on the number and cost of accidents go up, rates go up. It's the policy-holders who pay in the long run, not the company.

One of the chief social and moral problems in our complex and depersonalized society is the growing division between private and public property. Men who could never dream of cheating an individual feel no compunction about cheating a "soulless corporation."

And, as the corporations become larger and richer and more automated, as mergers and consolidations and computers remove them further and further from human scale, so it becomes easier for the individual to justify or rationalize his fraud — sometimes even with a perverse sense of pride. If the corporation doesn't care about him, he feels, he doesn't care about it.

Thus, the very technology of which we are proudest, and which has contributed so much to our affluence, is at the same time the principal factor in alienating our moral sense. The bezzlements by employees, for instance, take more funds each year than do armed robberies and burglaries. To steal from a man is a crime; to steal from an institution is a virtue.

The "what" is the question we must answer. Our present attitude is the product of social forces almost beyond our control; if sypping the insurance company is a way of life, because "everybody does it," then we are caught in a vicious spiral of unending moral escalation.

One of the first organizations affected was Hydro Quebec which had arrangements under way to borrow $50,000,000 on a bond issue, expecting to pick up the funds next Monday. The bond floatation was deferred.

Going to a forenoon cabinet meeting, Mr. Gordon was asked whether the plan he announced Tuesday night would have the ancillary effect of slowing down or deferring construction projects.

"I wouldn't expect so, no," Mr. Gordon said.

The government announced earlier here that it was delaying some of its own big construction projects to leave industrianary pressures on the industry, and hoped other governments and private concerns would do the same. But construction pressure has continued heavy.

Prime Minister Pearson was asked whether economic affairs were to be discussed at the first post - election cabinet meeting. He said there was no specific item on the agenda.

Local County Jail Among Four Being Replaced by Quinte Detention Centre

The Hastings County Jail in the County Court Building on Pinnacle Street is one of four regional jails to be closed it was announced today.

The jails, all of which predate Confederation will be replaced by the Quinte Regional Detention Centre, first of its type in the world.

Announcement of the Centre was made today jointly by the Wardens of Frontenac, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, and Prince Edward Counties, and by the Minister of Reform Institutions.

The $1,098,400 centre will be built in or near Napanee, and will replace jails in Picton, Napanee, Belleville and Kingston.

The centre will provide the facilities for treatment, rehabilitation and work program on the local jail level for the first time.

The Province of Ontario will pay 50 per cent of the cost of the building and 50 per cent of the operating costs. The remainder of the capital and operating costs, and the cost of the land will be shared on a daily-use basis between the four counties, the cities of Kingston and Belleville, and the town of Trenton.

Signing of the agreement to build the centre will take place in Toronto on November 23. Signators will be the four county wardens, O. F. Goodfellow, Frontenac; Frederick Beehler, Hastings; Clair Benn, Lennox and Addington; and B. C. Hepburn, Prince Edward; and Hon. Allan Grossman, Minister of reform Institutions.

Negotiations to build the centre began about midway through 1964. "The vision and co-operation of the counties has been remarkable from the outset," Mr. Grossman said. "We hope that the precedent they have set will soon be followed by other areas of Ontario."

County jails are used to lodge prisoners serving sentences up to three months as well as those awaiting trial. This will also apply to the new centre. Prisoners with longer sentences will continue to serve them in reformatories when the sentence is less than two years; or in penitentiaries when the sentence is two years or more.

The Quinte Centre will occupy a site of at least 15 acres and will consist of two new buildings, one each for maximum and minimum security purposes. Facilities in the maximum security building will include cells, offices, hospital area, segregation area, visiting area and exercise yards. The minimum security building will house two dormitories and a workshop.

Consultation rooms for psychologists, psychiatrist and probation officers will be provided.

Preliminary plans for the centre make provision for about 112 prisoners, 68 in the maximum security building and 44 in the minimum security building. Prisoners serving sentences for liquor or traffic offences would generally be considered as minimum security prisoners while most of those serving sentences for criminal offences would be placed in the maximum security building.

"This type of segregation has not been practiced in many of the old jails around the province," Mr. Grossman said.

"The old and the young, the sophisticated and the unsophisticated, the sick and the well, the deviate and the normal, the addict and the dangerous, have not always been adequately separated and classified," the Minister said.

It is estimated that the Regional Centre would be about $360,000 cheaper than if four counties replaced their present jails separately. Cost of operating a single unit is estimated at about 25 per cent below cost of operating four separate jails.

P.E.C. JAIL

The Prince Edward County Jail at Picton was built in 1834. The Hastings jail in Belleville was built in 1858, the Frontenac jail, Kingston, in 1855, and the Lennox and Addington jail in Napanee, in 1865.

"From every aspect, the regional detention and classification unit has many advantages," Mr. Grossman said. "As people interested in corrections, we know how important it could be in the total program of rehabilitation as taxpayers we appreciate it as good, sound economics."

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

"Bob, is there something about this raise that you're not telling me?"

The new centre will also provide more uniform selection and training of staff. The Department of Reform Institutions will assist in training programs. In hiring staffs, preference will be given to personnel now employed by the four existing jails.

Administration will be carried out by a four - county committee with the department providing advice and assistance.

Type of work to be done by prisoners will be decided by the administration committee. Among the possibilities are reforestation, making road signs and building picnic tables. None of the work projects for prisoners would interfere with local production or manufacture.

Company Fined For Carrying on Without Licence

A Belleville scrap company today was fined for carrying on business earlier this year without a licence.

Markal Metal and Minerals Ltd. were convicted by Magistrate R. C. Jackson and ordered to pay a nominal fine of $25 and $23 costs.

The company pleaded not guilty to a charge under a city police commission bylaw through its counsel Douglas Boyle, a city alderman.

Such licences are granted at the discretion of the commission.

Belleville Chief Constable J. B. MacLachlan said the police commission had decided not to grant a licence to the company in 1964. However, "by some manipulation" a licence was granted and the commission later ordered him to recover it.

Subsequently, the commission decided not to grant the 1965 licence. Application by the company for a renewal was not made until July of this year.

Mr. Boyle submitted that the commission's action was "a denial of natural justice to the applicant."

"In effect they took away from the applicant the right to obtain a licence in order to lawfully carry on business."

No nagging backache!

He used to be bothered by backaches and tired feeling. THE LITTLE WOMAN

"It's been like this for ten days—if it should happen to fall, he's determined to record it for posterity!"

Ann Landers

Time to Teach Time Is Time Well-spent

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What do you think of a 10-year-old boy who can't tell time? It is hard to believe that a kid could be so dumb, but I know it's true because he is my brother.

When I ask him what time it is he says, "The big hand is on five and the little hand is on eight." When Mom tells him to be home at 5:15 p.m. he is always late because he can't read a clock.

Don't tell me to teach him because I baby sit four nights a week and I haven't got the time. Please print this letter. He can read. Thanks a whole lot. — IRON MOUNTAIN PROBLEM.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR PROBLEM: Sorry, but your excuse is a lame one. When anyone says "I haven't got time" I remind him that everyone has 24 hours in a day. We just spend it in different ways.

I hope you can spare one hour, soon, to teach your little brother how to tell time. I can think of no better contribution to the boy's welfare.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son was married 16 months ago. His wife (I'll call her Linda) spends almost every weekend with her mother. She goes to her mother's house for breakfast — or should I say lunch because she sleeps until noon. (My son fixes his own coffee and eggs or eats in the drug store.) The beds don't get made from one week to the next.

Linda takes her laundry to her mother's house although she has an automatic washing machine of her own. Her mother does the ironing and brings it to her.

Linda doesn't cook because they eat with her parents almost every night. On weekends when some married couples like to spend time with friends their own age, Linda and her husband are with her folks. My son never complains but I can see he doesn't like it. What are the chances for this marriage succeeding? — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: Better — if you keep out of it.

It is at once outrageous and pathetic that a married woman would be so dependent and unmotivated. When your son gets really fed up he'll let her know. But it's strictly their problem, so don't get into the act.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why are you so violently opposed to telling a wife that her husband is cheating? I say you are wrong. I wish now I had told my sister.

Her husband was a splendid church-worker, and respected in the community. My sister was good enough in the beginning but after he achieved success and money he began to look elsewhere for "intellectual stimulation."

For five years he carried on an affair right under her nose. Everyone knew but my sister. He left clues so she would catch him and ask for a divorce. Then, she finally took the hint but unfortunately she accused the wrong woman — someone in his office.

After a terrible scene she had a nervous breakdown and had to be hospitalized. Now I blame myself for her condition. If I had given her the right information from the beginning, I could have saved her. — SORRY I KEPT QUIET.

DEAR SORRY: Your sister is unstable. It is difficult to predict how or what an unstable person will do but it's possible that if your sister knew of the situation earlier she would have cracked up sooner. Keeping quiet was the right thing to do, so stop feeling guilty.

* * *

If you have trouble getting along with your parents . . . If you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bogged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SPELLING STILL WORST

U.C.W. Meetings

SHANNONVILLE U.C.W.

SHANNONVILLE — The women of the U.C.W. of Shannonville United Church held a pot luck dinner and quilting in the Church Hall on Wednesday with 15 in attendance. The sewing continued working on the quilt during the meeting, which was opened by the president, Mrs. M. Little.

Silence was observed for a beloved member and past president, Mrs. Asa Cook. Mrs. Galbraith conducted a memorial service in her honor.

Mrs. Will Ross, group leader, took charge of the devotional on the theme for the month. Mrs. George Osborne gave the Bible reading and Mrs. Ross gave the meditation and prayer. The president thanked Mrs. Ross for the worship service and took charge of the business. Mrs. Breadman, secretary, gave the roll call and minutes and read the correspondence.

A nominating committee of Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Bates and Mrs. Galbraith was appointed. Mrs. George Osborne gave the treasurer's report, and Mrs. Ba'es reported on the rally held at Holloway Church.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Do you know anything more exhilarating than baby trying to figure out what the world is all about? But the development of a baby is more than a cunning way to delight your eye and unlock your smiles. It's an important part of his (or her) mental development. For what is amusement but curiosity? And curiosity is one of the great teachers. It leads to learning through looking, listening, touching, tasting, etc., unfolding untold mysteries for your baby.

Speaking of a pleasant experience, when your baby has a few teeth, he (or she) will enjoy the texture of Gerber Junior Foods. They have a nice, evenly-minced texture, just right for trying out those tiny new teeth. Particles are small enough to be swallowed without chewing, of course. Meats, dinners, meat dinners, vegetables, fruits and desserts all come in this junior texture—in handy glass jars.

Gerber Junior Foods (like all the good Gerber Foods for baby) are "custom-cooked." Some foods can be flash-cooked; others require a slower process. Each food is cooked according to its individual requirements, to help preserve food values for your baby.

Curiosity corner. Your baby's curiosity should be encouraged. And it's so easy! You might try these tricks on for size:

- Glint 'n' glister mobiles over the crib, or playpen help eye movement and understanding.
- Sweet mother-talk and soft music are fine for ear training.
- Various toys, in different textures and sizes, are good for teaching through touch.

Meaty main dishes, small-fry style. Gerber Strained and Junior Meat Dinners are wonderful meat-vegetable combinations for your little one's lunch or supper. They have three times the meat of our regular dinners (and that means more protein for your baby). Beef, Chicken, Ham, Lamb, Turkey or Veal with Vegetables—hearty meats blended deftly with flavour-bright vegetables for tempting, nutritious "casseroles." Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Sister Still 'In' With Teen-agers

WINNIPEG (CP)—After 30 years of teaching, Sister Iledwig Neumann is still "in" with the teen-agers.

Today's teens provided the greatest challenge of a teaching career she began as a 15-year-old, says Sister Neumann, a member of the Roman Catholic Grey Nuns order.

"I came to realize the o "I came to realize the old ways weren't right for today's world. Children could no longer be regimented with strict discipline if they were to fit into the world after their education was completed.

"They have a right to voice their opinions and describe their thoughts."

Sister Neumann said she felt that educationists abused their rights for a long time by failing to gain insight into a child's personality and his dreams for the future. She developed her own approach to teenagers.

"I promoted drama and glee clubs in my high school classes. If you get a child involved in class projects, he won't want to stay away or not pay attention. They don't want to miss anything."

The secret of successful discipline is "dialogue — talking things over, exchanging explanations, each respecting the others' ideas."

Sister Neumann, who took an M.A. and B.Ed by correspondence from the University of Ottawa, still teaches English although she is semi-retired.

AROUND THE BEND

Dear Susanna: Whether the socks were too small or the stretchers too large — I was never sure, but in either case I had difficulty keeping wool socks from staying put on metal stretchers. The heel of the sock usually slid down onto the foot of the stretcher and consequently didn't get stretched properly and the toe part at the sock ended up with a great bump in it.

If you are experiencing similar trouble, the solution is almost too simple to mention! Place the sock exactly where you want it on the stretcher, then snap a spring-type clothes pin into place right at the bend of the heel so that it fastens onto both the sock trim and the sock. Everything stays perfectly in place and the end result is a soft well-stretched, well-shaped sock. — J. J.

That's certainly food for thought! — SUSANNA

ASSEMBLY LINE POST CARD

Dear Susanna: We have a round trip coming up to St. Louis. Missouri — we are driving and can only be gone a week, time is of the essence. Under such circumstances, when visits are so rushed I've worked out a great time-saver in respect to sending those quantities of post cards.

Before I leave I sit down with my address book and fill out plain white gummed labels for all those friends and relatives who will be expecting greetings from us. I keep these neatly clipped together in an envelope in my purse — all ready to stick on their cards.

No one is forgotten, there is no danger of repeating a card to the same person, I save precious time on my trip and I never have to scramble through my address book, looking for names. — Mrs. R. McDougal

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Susanna, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self - addressed envelope

REQUESTS FOR FRUIT BREAD

A puzzle to me every November is the number of requests for fruit breads. I've decided that callers increase at Christmas hospitality being in the offing, but rich fruit cakes not yet ready, hostesses need a quick substitute. My recipes for you for today are just that — fruit breads. They freeze and may be sliced instantaneously directly from the freezer. Both are economical — Pearl Haven's Date Loaf especially so.

BANANA BREAD
(will freeze):

1/2 cup shortening, 2/3 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder (or 4 teaspoons single-acting), ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup mashed ripe bananas (2 medium), ¼ cup grapenuts (or bran) flakes.

Cream together shortening and sugar, then beat in eggs until light. (Note: Because I have a heavy duty beater — Kenmore Chef — I yielded to an old temptation and added the quartered bananas to this creamed mixture and it mashed them fine. That eliminated one step). Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt and stir in (alternately with the mashed banana if you mash them separately). Fold in cereal flakes. Have ready a loaf pan 8½ x 4½ x 2¾", lined with one lengthwise stripe of buttered wax paper (to easily remove). Turn in batter and let stand 1 hour before baking at 350 deg. Fahr. 70 minutes at centre of oven. Turn out on rack to cool. This has a lovely gold crust all over and slices well at once. Wrap carefully if it is to be frozen.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Chilled Vegetable Julee; Boiled Ox Toogue; Mustard Sauce; Brussels Sprouts; Potatoes au Gratin (see Tues.); Apple Crisp; Pouring Cream; Tea.

PEARL HAVEN'S DATE LOAF:

1 cup cut-up dates, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 cup boiling water, 1 egg, 1 cup light brown sugar, 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour — divided, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup chopped walnuts

Add soda and butter to dates and pour boiling water over and let stand until cool. In mixing bowl beat egg thoroughly with sugar then beat in 1 cup of the flour and the salt and vanilla. Sprinkle remaining half cup flour over nuts to coat them and stir them in and then stir in cooled date mixture. This batter is thin. Turn into 2 buttered standard loaf pans (or 2 carefully buttered metal baking powder tins) and bake at 35 deg. Fahr. about 45 to 50 minutes — shorter time if in baking powder tins. Cool on rack. Wrap carefully if to be frozen. Slices thin perfectly both fresh and frozen.

CHARITY WAS RETURNED

Homemakers Return To Old-fashioned Foodstuffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Gordon B. Desmond is a gentle, grandmotherly woman who wants to see a return to good old-fashioned foodstuffs.

She spearheads a continuing campaign on the U.S. government and Congress for such things as more peanuts in peanut butter, for baby food minus sodium carbonmethyl, for the banishing of sodium nitrite from junior frankfurters and for the defeat of pending legislation which would permit the use of cotton fibre cellulose in jelly beans.

Mrs. Desmond, a grandmother, is president and guiding light of the Federation of Homemakers.

This organization, formed six years ago, has its headquarters in nearby Arlington, Va., in a small suite of offices cluttered with mail, government reports on food, and such formidable volumes as gleason's Lexicology of Commercial Products."

Mrs. Desmond declines, for strategic reasons, to say how many members the federation has. But she announces proudly that it has enlisted 800 new ones in the last five months (dues $3, sponsoring membership $10).

Currently, her efforts are centring on the U.S. food and drug administration's hearings on whether it should go through with its proposed rule that peanut butter must contain at least 90 per cent peanuts.

To be called peanut butter, she tells the administration, the product should contain 95 per cent peanuts, a standard which would alter the composition of much of the peanut butter now on the U.S. market.

Area Couples Clubs Hold Rally

The annual fall rally of Area Couples' Clubs was held in College Hill United Church on Sunday.

A welcome was extended to the clubs by the president, Mr. Charles Huffman, and by Rev. Veasey.

The Wellington club led an inspiring devotional on the theme of "Worry, Anxiety and Fear," each of which can be good or bad.

Guest speaker for the afternoon, Mr. Linton D. Reed, BA, was introduced by Mr. Grant Harrison, of the Eastminster Couples Club. Mr. Read spoke on the rally theme, "Modern Day Pressures on Young People." He opened with a touch of humor and went immediately into the theme. He said the teenager, a modern day term, seems to be a problem, walking around looking for a solution. The average day in the life of a teenager is a full one, leaving little spare time. Mr. Read listed the pressures under four main headings: "The Parents," "Their fellow students," "Society in general (the school), and "the teenager himself."

The parents desire perfection and at least something better for their children than they are themselves. The teenager of course realizes this.

PART OF THE CROWD

There is the desire to be part of the crowd and yet to be independent, to be somebody, to please those who love them, to have a social and moral identity.

Society in general demands more and more education and knowledge and understanding. Education, said Mr. Reid, is doubling every ten years.

The teenager wants to love and be loved, and along with all the pressures he must face physical changes as well.

The teenager must also have a sound set of rules of conduct for reference.

"How to handle a teenager!" Love him and accept him. In a world full of pressures greater than the parents have ever faced, the teenager steps out into the world with a smile and a so-what?

The assembly was divided into groups for a discussion period after which there was a question and answer period.

A lively sing-song was led by Grace Church Club of Trenton. During the executive meeting the group looked over the book display.

At the executive meeting, with Mr. Smithrim as chairman, it was decided that the nominations be made by ballot; also that the highest number of ballots, on count, be president and the second highest, vice-president. The results were: Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ackerman, Trenton, presidents, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Brethour, Belleville, vice-presidents.

Supper was provided by College Hill Wedding Ring Club.

At the evening worship, Dr. H. E. D. Ashford of Trenton, was the guest speaker. Dr. Ashford also spoke on the theme, "Modern Day Pressures" bed. as affecting adults.

Holloway Street Energetic Club, at the Fireside Hour, provided entertainment in the form of two short skits and two solos.

Mr. Huffman thanked all who had helped to make the rally a success.

He announced that the new executive would be glad to have the name of any church which would like to be host for the 1966 fall rally.

A brief social time brought the 1965 rally to a close.

erated plants in Ontario and hydro plants nestling on both sides of the Niagara River and in New York state. Power is traded back and forth between the groups as demand rises and falls.

The system is called CANUSE or Canada - United States - Eastern interconnection.

POWER COMING IN

Tuesday night, power was moving into Ontario through Niagara Falls from upstate New York when something happened in a high-voltage line south of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Then, Ontario Hydro officials said, "a surge of electricity" sent power flowing into the system at Cornwall,—in the opposite direction to the normal flow at that hour. This could have caused irreparable damage to distribution equipment, if unchecked.

Technicians watching dials at the Richview control centre in suburban Toronto immediately spotted the trouble and pulled switches that isolated southern and eastern Ontario from the interlocking grid.

That's when the power was cut off from various centres in Ontario. The blackout lasted from five minutes to two hours in Toronto, Brockville, Smiths Falls, Perth, Prescott and the Cornwall area. It occurred during the heaviest period of electrical use in eastern and southern Ontario.

The faulty New York line caused the surge to enter the Hydro system at Cornwall through an interconnection, flash across the southern Ontario system and back into New York through an interconnection at Niagara Falls, officials said.

THERMAL STATIONS START

When Ontario was disconnected from the grid, thermal generating systems at Lakeview and the Hearn station near Toronto and the J.C. Keith generating system in Windsor, were put into operation to produce needed power.

However, full power cannot be distributed at once. It must be brought in gradually so that expensive transformers in the system will not be short-circuited by the surge of energy.

After power was restored for the first time Tuesday evening at 6:18, there were two further interruptions in southern Ontario—at 6:54 and 7:24.

Full power was almost completely restored at 8:30 p.m., Hydro officials said, with Detroit Edison and Hydro-Quebec sending power into the system.

New York Causes

for dependability.

The initial failure was traced, one source said, to a power junction 10 miles west of Buffalo, N.Y., where the integrated system normally receives 40,000,000 kilowatts of power for redistribution.

BLACKOUT SPREADS

From there the blackout spread—just like power normally would be distributed — throughout the system. It could not have occurred 20 years ago when power lines were not so united. But the lines today are joined as tightly as telephone lines.

In New York, a spokesman for Consolidated Edison Corp. said New York City might have been spared if the utility could voluntarily have released itself immediately from the interconnection.

The blackout result was, by many standards, the greatest technological breakdown of modern times. It could not have happened to a less intricate, less precise and scientifically conceived system.

This system is the epitome of sophisticated technology. It operates almost automatically. Because its parts were so united, they dropped all together, like a tree felled by an axe.

FORMS GRID

The system was part of a power grid in which 97 per cent of the U.S. electric industry's generating capacity is joined in five large networks.

One of these systems — the one hit by the blackout — covers New York, New England and other sections of the northeast, including a section of Canada.

Since electric power cannot be stored, pools, interties or grids permit companies to borrow from each other to meet sudden power demands. In a pool, theoretically, there is always available power which automatically tends to flow to the point of demand.

It was this system that failed Tuesday night.

"I noted in a recent column of yours," the man said, "that you thought we lived in a minor hockey Shangri-La as far as roughness is concerned. I have been a loyal supporter of minor hockey for years—and I'll go along with your statement regarding roughness."

"I also noted in your Monday column the statement of Red Kelly to the effect that we were starting organization of hockey-playing youngsters at too young an age. That regimentation at the mike and tyke level is 'too soon'. I'll buy that."

"And I agree with Mr. Kelly when he says that the youngsters at these age levels are not ready for organized hockey in that they haven't touched their natural skating and stickhandling potentials.

"Mr. Kelly," the man went on, "wonders if giving the kids at the pee-wee-dodding age a stick and a puck, toss in a pair of skates and let them go on their own until they learn the fundamentals the natural way."

"I think Mr. Kelly is right—and I'm a father of two youngsters at present playing minor hockey. In my young days my dad and dads of other kids took us down to the bay, lake or some other suitable frozen surface, gave us hockey sticks and pucks and told us to get out there and play shinny."

"We'd skate by the hour, rap each others shins, shoulders and legs but we learned to skate and how to handle the stick without being stopped every minute and being told we were not doing things right."

Did this free-for-all system develop better hockey players than the organized clubs of today produce? the man was asked.

He laughed. "Listen, mister, we weren't pestered with too many rules and whatnot, nor were our dads bothered with out-of-town strangers asking questions about us. Some dim good hockey players came out of the shinny brigades—and they made the big brother teams with an occasional one going to the pros."

"I'm going to answer your question with another," he said. "Tell me, how many hockey players has this city's minor hockey association sent to the big time or even junior "A" hockey over the past ten years?"

"Two years ago I heard junior "B" hockey men in this town say we've got a good crop of miners coming up. Within two years we'll have a junior "B" club that will rank with the best. The two years have gone by—and where are those supposed world-beaters?"

"I'm not rapping minor hockey. I believe the fellows running it and working with it are doing a helluva job for the youngsters.

"They are teaching them sportsmanship and the finer points of hockey. The kids, too, are having a great time in the doing. And they'll better enjoy it, because the way I see it by the time they reach juvenile age over 90 per cent of them will be hockey failures."

"I know coaches, trainers and the executive members of the miner hockey association here cannot make silk purses out of sow's ears—in other words all they can do is bring out the youngsters' potential. And it seems to me youngsters with potential are getting scarcer every year."

"In passing," the man said, "I might note that this city has not produced a hockey player of top calibre or near that, since the Hull boys were discovered in Point Anne."

"Even back in the good old days of Bill Cook and his junior "B" squads, we had few home boys make the junior "A" ranks. Even Cook's junior 'B's' were bolstered with out-of-town players sent here by 'assisting National Hockey League teams' with Cookie paying the shot."

"We had a few men like Johnny Sorrell, Jerry Geyer and one or two others whose names I forget, make the junior 'A' ranks. Gerry eventually made the pro circuit and at present is playing on the west coast with the Portland Buckaroos."

"The youngsters of today," he said as he picked up his hat and coat, "had better enjoy hockey-playing while they are of tyke, peewee, bantam and midget age. After that there is nothing left for them."

"If you want proof of that," he said, "look at the situation this year. Where are the tykes, midgets peewees and bantams of years ago? This year the Minor Hockey Association registered only enough juvenile players to form two teams. That's roughly 36 boys out of some 700 or 800 who were playing in the lower brackets a few years ago."

"Where are they, hockey-wise? I don't know. I do know they are not playing with junior 'B' clubs with the exception of the dozen or so now with the Belleville Bobbins Construction club."

Canucks Swamp Seattle

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Canucks, led by the fiying aole assession of fourie place twosome of Billy McNeill and Howie Hughes, ran up the highest scoring total of the Western Hockey League season in a 10-1 victory over Seattle Totems Tuesday.

McNeill, last year's Most Valuable Player in the WHL, set up five goals and banged in three to move Vancouver into second place, two points behind the Totems. Dave Duke, Larry Cahan, Ray Brunel, Bruce Carmichael and Wayne Mulkin added the other Canuck goals.

Earl Heiskala was the Seattle marksman.

Habs Train Guns On Leafs Tonight

Hawks Host Wings ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs have had few blessings to count this National Hockey League season, but the well-supplied Montreal Canadiens are bestowing them with unswerving willingness.

The blessing is the sidelining of speedy Henri Richard for tonight's game between the two clubs.

Canadiens defeated Leafs 5-1 in their only previous meeting this season and Richard's output of two goals was all the margin needed. He also assisted on another goal.

Leafs' indirect benefactor is defenceman Ted Green of Boston Bruins who hit the Montreal centre hard enough last weekend to give him a shoulder sprain.

Green's—and Boston's—target tonight will be the Rangers in New York as all teams see action. Detroit Red Wings are at Chicago Black Hawks in the third game.

HENRI RICHARD

Montreal coach Toe Blake said Richard, whose season's output is three goals and four assists, may join Canadiens by the weekend.

The Canadiens, tied with Chicago for first place with 11 points, expect to have the services tonight of defenceman Jean-Claude Tremblay, another casualty of last Sunday's game against Boston.

He suffered a facial injury but Blake said he does not appear to have "anything worse than a bruise" and should be able to play.

DEFENCE FORGOTTEN

Meanwhile, Toronto coach Punch Imlach said Tuesday that "a couple of wins would take the heat off. We've been trying so hard to get an offence going that we forgot everything we ever knew about defence."

Toronto's defence, one of the best in recent years, now appears to be one of the worst. The opposition has got by it to pour 31 goals behind the Leafs' final netminding of John Bower and Terry Sawchuk, but Toronto's offence has only scored 11 times.

And the standings show it—Leafs are tied for fourth place with Detroit.

TED GREEN

Bobby Hull of Chicago, the league leading scorer, has scored as many times as the Leafs have and Toronto has played two more games than Hull.

The Rangers, who are enjoying the unaccustomed luxury of third place, will have left winger Doug Robinson back in action.

Robinson, who combines with Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle for the Rangers top line, missed one game after being hit in the face by a puck.

However, defenceman Jim Neilson, hit on the ankle by a shot Sunday night, is a doubtful starter.

Bernie Parent, the Bruins' 20-year-old rookie goalie, will be in the nets again tonight. Parent was called up from the Bruins' Cent l League farm team at Oklahoma City when both regular goalies, Ed Johnston and Gerry Cheevers, were injured.

Nicklin Award To Reed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fullback George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders has won the Jeff Nicklin Memorial Award as the player judged most valuable to his team in the 1965 Western Football Conference season.

The 24-year-old graduate of Washington State and three-year veteran of Canadian professional football has been chosen the West's candidate for Canada's most outstanding player. He rushed for 1,708 yards in 1965; scored the most touchdowns rushing, 12; carried the ball a WFC-leading 274 times, and set a WFC one-game rushing record — 352 yards against British Columbia Lions Oct. 24. He finished third in WFC scoring with 72 points on 12 touchdowns and one single.

The Nicklin Trophy —won last year by B.C.'s Tom Brown —and first pot up for competition in 1946, honors former Winnipeg end and flying wing LL-Col. Jeff Nicklin, killed while leading the First Canadian Parachute Battalion into battle overseas in 1945.

1960 Team Did It

Claire's Underdogs Eye Final

Question Trimble's Future

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders will have to fight to get into the Grey Cup final this year, but coach Frank Clair is confident his Eastern Football Conference club can do it.

Only one eastern team has reached the cup without finishing on top of the league in the last 10 years. That team was the 1960 Riders that went on to defeat Edmonton Eskimos after a second-place finish.

Riders finished second again this season—for the eighth time in 10 years under Clair—and will start their sixth eastern final in that span Sunday against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Riders almost made it last year after a second-place finish, but lost the two-game, total point series by one point after winning the opener by 11.

After an extensive rebuilding job, Ottawa was picked as the team to beat in the east this year. A last - half slump left them with the same 7-7 record they had in 1964.

Clair expects two of his new players, fullback Jim Dillard and halfback Bo Scott, to give Riders the backfield boost needed to beat Ticats.

Dillard's biggest problem, according to Clair, has been the transition from halfback his old position with Calgary Stampeders, to fullback.

The Riders had a lot of other new faces this year, particularly rookie linemen.

Most noticeable of these has been John Pentecost, a 21-year-old guard from UCLA who led Clair's blocking most of the season.

Two import tackles, 21-year-old Bob Brown from Miami University and 24-year-old Marshall Shirk, another UCLA graduate have shown well.

Clair also came up with three homebrew linemen, tackles Ted Collins and Andy Shaw and reserve centre Doug Specht, who has had to fill in at end and corner linebacker due to injuries.

Clair says his biggest concern is defending against Hamilton's long-pass threat.

"They run and run and run until they get you too conscious of the run.

"The backs start to move up to help out and then they drop that long one."

CROTHERS COMPETES

REGINA (CP)—Bill Crothers Canada's finest half-miler, and the Toronto East York Track Club relay team will compete in Saskatchewan's first indoor track meet Dec. 3 and 4 at Saskatoon.

The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Lloyd Gilmour, 21-year-old Ridgeway, Ont., reinsman, won the fourth and sixth races at Mohawk Raceway Tuesday night.

Gilmour drove Bullet Chief, owned by his father Bill Gilmour, to victory in the fourth race. He returned to the winner's circle in the sixth race, to set up the head end of a Gilmour quinella with Delphine winning by a wide margin over Ambrose Abbe.

Pitcher Acquitted Of Charge

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Pedro Ramos, New York Yankees' relief pitcher, testified Tuesday that he had only been trying to help and was acquitted of a charge of interfering with a police officer.

Ramos, 30 - year - old Cuban who lives in Miami during baseball's off-season, was arrested Sunday outside a Miami restaurant.

Police had arrested Orlando Ortegh, 36, on a charge of being drunk and one officer asked Ramos to translate, testified Ramos, who speaks Spanish and English.

Badminton Under Way Saturday

The winter "birdies" will commence serious flight in the Belleville Armouries this coming Saturday.

Nine playing courts on a renovated floor will be put into action as the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club opens its 1965-66 playing season.

The club will play three times weekly, each Tuesday and Saturday evening at 7.30 and each Wednesday night at nine o'clock.

President Ted Smith and his executive plans an active season, designed to provide club members with plenty of badminton. Apart from the regular playing nights, the club will play host to one of the Central Ontario Badminton Association's tournaments, several inter-club matches and the annual club tournament.

Also planned are a variety of social events and numerous "get-acquainted round-robins."

An invitation has been extended to new members and anyone wishing to join is asked to do so as early as possible in the season, keeping this Saturday's opening of play in mind.

Junior memberships are available at a nominal fee and a special invitation has been extended to any high school students in the area interested in the sport.

The club executive has a tentative junior program in mind in the event that sufficient players of high school age show interest.

Aces Up Lead With 9-3 Win

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec Aces defeated Springfield Indians 9-3 Tuesday night and increased their lead in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League.

Leon Rochefort was the star of the game, picking up three goals, and two assists. Jean-Guy Gendron and Cleland Mortson scored two each and Don Blackburn and Wayne Hicks one each.

Brian Smith, Randy Miller and Jim Anderson scored the Indians' three goals.

Mustangs, Blues Meet In 'Bowl'

TORONTO (CP)—University of Western Ontario Mustangs and University of Toronto Blues clash in London Saturday for the right to meet University of Alberta Golden Bears in the first Save the Children Fund college bowl Nov. 20 at Varsity Stadium.

The college bowl was set up this summer as a football playoff between the two top college teams in Canada. Proceeds of the game go to the Save the Children Fund.

The Golden Bears finished in a three-way tie in their conference with University of Saskatchewan Huskies and University of Manitoba Bisons, each with a 4-2 record. The western team was picked on the basis of points for and against.

Jackson Big Threat To Cat Defence

Sazio Lays Plans

HAMILTON (CP)—With coach Frank Clair of Ottawa Rough Riders having given quarterback Russ Jackson the green light to return to his rolling and roving, the defence that carried Hamilton Tiger - Cats to first place in the Eastern Football Conference this season will be under additional stress to carry them to their traditional Grey Cup appearance.

During the regular season Clair had Jackson staying in the pocket on passplays and the result, after a blistering start, left them staggering at the end of the season with only two victories in eight games.

But last Saturday he unfettered Jackson and the Riders romped to a 36-7 victory over Montreal Alouettes in the sudden-death semi-final.

During the season Hamilton scored 19 points fewer than the Rough Riders although winning the regular - season title. But many of these points were picked up by an alert defensive crew spearheaded by Marty Martinello, the middle guard cast adrift last August after 14 years with Toronto Argonauts.

Noted for his driving style of play, the 33-year-old who was rejected by every other team in the Canadian Football League after set free by Toronto, has kept opposing quarterbacks running for their life ever since joining Hamilton.

TOMMY GRANT

Coach Ralph Sazio figures moving Martinello into the middle guard spot was the key shift in beefing up a line that was beginning to sag under the weight of injuries.

OFFENCE CLICKS NOW

He says having Martinello made it possible to move Gene Ceppetelli to offensive centre and "our offence began to click when our blocking improved."

Another key defensive coup pulled off this year by Sazio was talking Bobby Kuntz out of retirement when linebacker Herb Paterra was injured Oct. 2.

Now he will have Paterra back for the first of the nationally-televised two-game, total-point final, starting Sunday at 2 p.m. EST in Ottawa.

Sazio hasn't said yet how he will deploy Kuntz with the return of Paterra, but a wily, versatile veteran Canadian is always an asset, especially at playoff time.

But one major major commitment Sazio has made is the assignment of Joe Zuger as starting quarterback for the game. He and Frank Cosentino alternated through most of the season.

Jackson has a dazzling array of players to choose from in engineering his offensive drives—halfbacks Bo Scott and Ron Stewart and fullback Jim Dillard and ends Ted Watkins and Whit Tucker.

Zuger's main threats will be the pass-catching wizardry of Hal Patterson and Tommy Grant and the drive of halfback Johnny Counts, who will be back after suffering a badly bruised ankle.

But, if the pattern of the regular season continues into the playoffs, a Hamilton victory probably will be a tribute to their valuable defenders.

Milwaukee-Wisconsin

Anti-Trust Suit Could Ruin Baseball

By KEN HARTNETT

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Major league baseball faced the choice today of remaining in Milwaukee or risking its anti-trust suit in Wisconsin courts, a prospect that a baseball lawyer said could lead to the ruination of the game as we know it.

The dilemma, which left Wisconsin and Milwaukee County in position to bargain to keep the Braves from shifting to Atlanta next season, developed Tuesday in U.S. district court.

Judge Robert E. Tehan ruled that Wisconsin courts should decide the anti-trust suit filed by Wisconsin's attorney - general.

The ruling, which cannot be appealed, means the anti-trust suit will reach the federal courts only after being heard in Wisconsin.

The state is now free to seek an injunction in its own courts against the Bravers' shift to Atlanta, planned for 1966.

Should an injunction be granted, it could keep the Braves in Milwaukee until the case clears the Wisconsin courts. That could be well after the start of the 1966 season.

The implications raised by the ruling go deeper than just the Braves' case.

Earl Jinkinson, Braves' attorney, acknowledged as much when he told Judge Tehan prior to his ruling that if Wisconsin could control the activities of baseball "it would lead to the ruination of the game as we know it.

"If Wisconsin can do this, then all the other states too can claim they are being prevented from having teams. We might wind up with 60 teams."

Baseball fought to have the case heard in the federal courts. Jinkinson argued that the case should be heard together with a federal anti-trust suit filed against the league by Milwaukee County.

The suit maintains that the National League is so organized as to create a monopoly in the employment of players of major league quality, as well as in the scheduling and the broadcast of games.

The suit also strikes at the authority of the commissioner of baseball and the sacrosanct reserve clause, which enables a baseball club to have complete control of its players as a property right.

Baseball's peculiar structure has never come under full-scale judicial review.

Wisconsin and Milwaukee County officials were guarded in their public comments on the ruling, but privately they were elated.

One said: "It was a very significant ruling. Now we hope it will go further and possibly give Milwaukee a chance to expand or buy the Braves.

One official close to the group trying to purchase a franchise for Milwaukee said: "I think baseball is now faced with a decision. I think they'll be willing to talk to us now."

No Bravers' official was available for comment.

One official said there was no guarantee that Wisconsin would drop its suit should baseball relent and either keep the Braves in Milwaukee or grant an expansion franchise.

Prospects Bright For '66 Rifles

By JERRY GLADMAN

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Rifles will be back.

The Rifles, lone Canadian entry in the Continental Football League, are $100,000 in the red but the loss hasn't dimmed club officials' outlook for next season. They say prospects for '66 couldn't be brighter.

The Rifles will play in a new stadium, they'll have finished this campaign no worse than second in the standings and chances of increasing gate attendance are highly encouraging.

"The team has established itself with Toronto fans," says general manager Bob Frewin. "We hope to break even next year and even make a little money."

The Rifles are currently tied for first place in the Eastern Division with Philadelphia Bulldogs. They play Bulldogs in Philadelphia Sunday for the right to meet the western leaders, Charleston Rockets, in a league playoff.

Moira Wins Senior Soccer Title

Moira Secondary School won the Quinte COSSA district soccer championship, yesterday defeating Trenton High School by a 3-0 score.

The teams battled to a scoreless tie in the first half. Two minutes had gone by in the second when Fraser Ritchie scored with a fast drive from 20 feet out.

The same player made it 2-0 later on a breakaway. Jack Longstaff completed the scoring from a late - half goalmouth scramble.

Ron Banting, the Moira goalie came up with another fine exhibition to register the shutout.

The Moira seniors team went through the season unbeaten and untied winning six games with a fantastic 29 goals for and one against.

Banting, who should qualify for a most valuable - player award was outstanding during the season. He played all six games with a sensational record of one goal scored against him.

Fraser Ritchie shares top honors scoring 13 of the clubs seasonal total of 29.

Canadian Horse 14-1 British Bookie 'Odds 'Em'

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—A prominent English bookmaker took a long hard look today at the field for Thursday's $150,000 Washington International at Laurel and figured American handicappers knew what they were doing when they established little Roman Brother the favorite to take the 1½-mile grass course horse race.

Jack Golding, president of the Bookmakers Protective Association of Southern England, called on his 46 years of experience gained in making book at leading English tracks to form the following line on the eight horses from five nations:

Roman Brother (U.S.) 2-to-1; Hill Rise (U.S.) 4-to-1; Distome (France) 7 - to - 1; Carvin (France) 10 - to - 1, Berenjenal (Argentina) 10 - to - 1; George Royal (Canada) 14 - to - 1 and Hail to All (U.S.) 14-to-1.

Roman Brother earned his lofty position by reason of easy victories in his last three starts. On the debit side of the ledger for the four-year-old gelding is a bad showing in his lone start on the grass—a mile race at Saratoga.

PICK DIATOME

The consensus among the foreign visitors is that Distome, owned by Baron Guy de Rothschild, is best of the invaders.

George Royal, owned by Ernest Hamond of Vancouver and Robert W. Hall of Aldergrove, B.C., will have Bill Shoemaker, the world's leading active jockey, in the saddle for the event.

The bay colt, who already has won $200,000, and Hill Rise will be meeting in a rubber match of three meetings.

In the San Juan Capistrano Handicap last March, George Royal romped home first with Hill Rise third. But the order was reversed in the Santa Anita Handicap with Hill Rise winning and George Royal third.

Canadian Horse Favorite

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP)—Canadian - owned Armbro Flight has been established an even money favorite to win the $31,-336.40 Dexter Cup at Roosevelt Raceway tonight and clinch the 1965 championship for three-year-old trotters.

Noble Victory and Egyptian Candor, a Stanley Dancer Stable entry, are rated at 7 to 5. Others in the field are Short Stop, 5 to 1 Hercules Hanover, 8 to 1, and Lord Worthy, 20 to 1.

The three top choices each have one of the most important races this year. Armbro Flight, owned by the Armstrong brothers stable of Brampton, recently won the Kentucky Futurity.

Armbro Flight, who has won 26 stake races, has finished in front in seven of her last eight starts, setting a world record for the mile with a 1:59 1-5 clocking at Delaware, Ohio.

Stirling H.S. Wins Senior Grid Title

By DAVID FAULKNER

STIRLING — This centre's high school football teams recently divided the Central Hastings championships with Tweed, winning the senior title and losing the junior.

Stirling Seniors defeated Tweed 14-6 to bring the school its first titular victory in 13 years.

It was a different story in Junior play where a shorthanded Stirling squad was trounced 72-7 by the powerful Tweed team.

Barry Pyear carried for 128 yards and Ken Smith for 106 to lead Stirling's senior victory march. Pyear add Ross McIntosh scored the club's touchdowns with Doug Potts and Ken Smith adding converts.

The winners' ground attack was good for 340 yards and combined with 83 yards passing led to 28 first downs.

Seven Aces Dominate AL Scoring

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Led by Gordon Labossiere and Leon Rochefort, Quebec Aces held seven of the top eight places in the American Hockey League's individual scoring race Tuesday.

The statistics through Sunday's games show Labossiere and Rochefort each with 15 points, Labossiere on nine goals and six assists and Rochefort on six goals and nine assists.

Bill Sutherland and Ed Hoekstra of the Aces are tied for third with 14 points followed by team - mates Cleland Morrison and Wayne Hicks and Rochester's Larry Hillman with 13.

Mustangs' Halfback Top Scorer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Halfback Art Froese of University of Western Ontario Mustangs, an almost certain bet for all-star honors, emerged as the offensive star in Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association Football Conference scoring this season.

The three-year veteran from Kitchener finished seven points ahead of explosive Gerry Sternber of University of Toronto Blues with 81 points. He had six touchdowns, 17 extra points two singles and two field goals.

Froese also led in rushing with 445 yards in 83 carries for a 5.4 average.

Sternberg was tops in touchdowns with nine and fourth among the rushers with 379 yards in 47 attempts for an 8.1 average.

Quarterback Bryce Taylor of Toronto, defending scoring champ, finished third with 44 points on four touchdowns, two field goals and 14 converts.

Whip Marlies 9-3 Flyers Win Nine In Row

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian champion Niagara Falls Flyers won their ninth successive game Tuesday night, beating Toronto Marlboros 7-3, and opened a three-point lead atop the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league.

But the victory cost them the services of goalie Bobby Ring, who was injured on the first Toronto goal and gave way to Dunc Wilson early in the first period.

And London Nationals picked up only their third win in 10 outings by beating Kitchener Rangers 4-2 with a pair of fast third-period goals.

The Marlboros remained in third place, three points behind Oshawa Generals while the loss held Kitchener tied in fifth with Montreal Junior Canadiens. London is in last place.

SPARKS FLYERS

Mike Sherman sparked the Flyers with a pair of goals while Steve Atkinson, Rosaire Paiement, Derek Sanderson, John Arbour and Ted Snell added singles.

Gerry Meehan scored the first Toronto goal and was followed by Doug Dunville and Mike Corrigan, in the third period.

Randy Murray, a defenceman playing his first game on left wing, scored a pair of power-play goals for London while Neil Clairmont and Neil Clark gave them their winning margin with goals a minute and 50 seconds apart in the third period.

John Beechey scored both goals for Kitchener, also both on power plays.

ANTI-NAZI SENTENCED

TORONTO (CP)—Mike Soer, 45, of Toronto, an anti-Nazi who lost six members of his family in a concentration camp during the Second World War, was fined $150 or 30 days in jail Monday for his part in a riot at Allan Gardens last May. Soer pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance near the park the day 5,000 persons showed up for a scheduled Nazi rally.

Quebec's Liberal Premier Unhappy Despite Big Victory in Province

By CY FOX

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's Liberal Premier Jean Lesage, unhappy despite the victory of the federal Liberals in Quebec, looked west Tuesday over the route of his recent tour for the seeds of the current minority government situation.

Meantime the chief organizer for the Conservatives in Quebec was saying the election proved that both Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker and Prime Minister Pearson should step down. And Provincial secretary Bona Arsenault also saw in the election a blow to the two leaders.

The viewpoints came bubbling up in the wake of Monday's national voting that gave the Liberals 129 seats. This left them short of their aim of garnering enough votes to achieve majority status in the Commons.

In Quebec the Liberal strength rose to 55 seats from the 47 won by the party in 1963, but nevertheless Premier Lesage couldn't manage to smile much for reporters in the provincial capital.

WORRIES HIM

"It worries me that the present government now has the majority of its seats in Quebec and Ontario," said the Quebec leader. Ontario chipped in with 50 seats toward the new Liberal national total.

Mr. Lesage said:

"At the end of my trip I emphasized that the area which seemed to have least understanding of the message I took to Western Canada was located between Brandon, Man., and the Rockies."

This was the region where the Conservatives scored heavily in Monday's balloting.

"I don't know the relation between the result of the vote and what I noted in the Prairies," said the Quebec leader. "I cannot for the moment come up with a diagnosis."

The Conservatives' top Quebec organizer, Rodrigue Bourdages, said Mr. Diefenbaker and Prime Minister Pearson both have reached the end of the line.

NEED NEW LEADERS

For both Liberal and Conservative parties "what's needed is not another election, but a convention to choose a new leader," Mr. Bourdages said in a Montreal interview.

His party's Quebec representation rose to nine seats from the eight won in 1963.

The Creditistes fell to nine from 13 but a tight race in Shefford, where Conservative Paul Trepanier nosed out the Creditiste Gilbert Rondeau, led Mr. Rondeau to request a recount Tuesday.

In Trois - Rivieres, former Conservative transport minister Leon Balcer, who left federal politics in protest against Mr. Dietenbaker's party leadership, said the election showed that "Ontario and Quebec thinking is not far apart."

Such unity, he said is good for the country. But Mr. Balcer declined to comment further on the election because of his present position as a Quebec government official—directing the province's plans for the celebration of Confederation's 100th anniversary in 1967.

Mr. Lesage said he still hopes the Liberals might get a majority in the 265-seat Commons by virtue of the military vote, the results of which will be known Saturday.

The support of an independent could help put Mr. Pearson over the top, said the premier.

As for Mr. Pearson, Premier Lesage said he should continue as head of the federal Liberals. "He is the only man in the present circumstances 'who, by his diplomacy, can rectify a situation which I have called worrying." This situation involved unity between French and English Canada.

On the subject of the Conservative leader, who now commands 98 seats in the Commons, Mr. Lesage said: "The sooner the country sees Mr. Diefenbaker abandon the leadership of the Conservative party, the better for the country."

PICTON — Prince Edward County will be host to the Zone 2 Farm Safety Conference which will be held in the Anglican Parish Hall, Picton, on Wednesday, November 10th. Counties in the zone include Ontario, Durham, Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland and, Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward. The theme will be "Farm Machinery Accident Prevention" with a representative from Massey Ferguson Company as special speaker. Another feature of the program will be a panel discussion with a number of local people taking part. Those from Prince Edward County who will be speaking on the panel will be Mrs. Sherman Foster, Hillier; Harold Corfield, Ameliasburg and Doug Taylor, Picton. Each county in the zone is expected to send 4 or 5 official delegates. However all who are interested will be welcome at the afternoon program.

There's not much sense in getting your soil tested if the sample you send in doesn't represent the field you want tested. Soil scientist T. J. Hoyt, suggests you keep these six precautions in mind the next time you sample:

1. Take enough samples. On the questionnaire forms, you'll notice a column "The Number of Places Sampled." It's there because the lab technicians want to make sure they are dealing with a proper sample. Take at least one sample per acre. A 10-acre field would have 10 widely scattered locations sampled. These 10 samples are mixed in a pail or basket and portions from different parts of the pail then go into the sample box.

2. Don't sample knolls — unless they are large enough to fertilize separately. Knolls are usually lower in fertility. Put extra manure on these spots to help overcome uneven fertility.

3. Don't sample those parts of a field within 25 feet of a gravel road. They may be limed from the road dust. Cases are on record where the soil is alkaline for up to 50 feet from a gravel road while the rest of the field is quite acid.

4. Moisture is important. Don't allow your samples to dry out. If the soil is dry when you take the samples moisten them with a little water as soon as possible. This prevents the soil from getting air dry.

5. Don't sample where there has been a pile of manure or other residue. Avoid sampling from a strike-out or dead furrow.

6. Increase sampling 50 per cent on crops which have been band fertilized. The fertility is uneven and more samples increase the chances that a sample truly represents the field. Watch that you don't pick up unused band fertilizer.

The annual 4-H Agricultural Clubs Awards Night for Prince Edward County was held in the Queen Elizabeth Public School, Picton on the evening of Friday, November 5th. The special speaker was Mr. J. M. Purvis, Head, Department of English and Economics, Kemptville Agricultural School. Mr. Purvis gave a very interesting and inspiring address on the topic "The 4-H Winner." All awards merited in the 1965 4-H Agricultural Club program were presented. The winner of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce watch for the outstanding club member of the year is Miss Helen Whitehead, No. 1, Bloomfield. In addition to her 4-H work, Helen has been active in Junior Farmer and other community activities. She has served as President of the Big 5 Junior Institute as well as in the office of press reporter and director of the local and County Association. She is a United Nations trip winner and Provincial Camper and was Prince Edward County Dairy Princess in 1964. She was high girl in the 4-H and Junior Farmer Judging Competitions at Belleville Fair on two occasions. She has represented Prince Edward County in the Provincial 4-H Inter-Club competitions at the Inter-Club competition at Guelph and in 1964 she was a member of the second place 4-H Dairy calf club team at the Inter-club competitions. We would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Helen on her achievements and also to congratulate all award winners in the 1965 4-H Agricultural Club program.

Whipper Watson Will Be Speaker at Conference

PICTON (Staff) — Whipper (Billy) Watson world champion wrestler, has accepted an invitation to speak at the Planned Recreation Conference being held at Queen Elizabeth School Picton, Saturday afternoon, November 20.

Mr. Watson, though busy campaigning as a P.C. candidate in Toronto Friday advised Sheriff H. J. Colliver that he would be pleased to attend. Mr. and Mrs. Watson will be week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Colliver.

While here, Mr. Watson will visit the County Centre and see the Minor Hockey Players in action. It is likely some gathering to permit the born to meet "Whipper" will be arranged.

The Recreation Conference will open at 12.30 and continue to 5 p.m. on November 20. Mr. Watson will likely speak at one o'clock and a special invitation to all interested to attend and hear him is being extended.

The conference will discuss all phases of recreation — that currently in progress and that which might be inaugurated — not only sports clubs, hobbies, collectors, etc. All those interested in any type of sport or hobby are especially welcome.

Leaders will briefly discuss main topics and discussion groups will arrive at conclusions, to be presented to the Conference as a whole.

The Conference should lead to greater recreation promotions of all kinds and possibly bring all under general direction of the Recreation Commission. If this is done, generous government grants are available.

NY Harlem Uneasily Peaceful

By AUSTEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (AP)—The city that led all last year's round of Negro riots in the United States with a bloody four day binge in Sittery this year, but that fact isn't apparent from walking the streets.

It comes to light, however, whenever civil rights marches are planned, when racial trouble occurs elsewhere in the country, or when police are involved in serious incidents with Negroes.

Then authorities strengthen their forces in Harlem and Bedford Shuyvesant, the Negro areas in Manhatan and Brooklyn respectively, where one person was killed and millions of dollars in property were damaged in July, 1964.

New York has been quiet so far. No incidents have reached alarming proportions.

Even a protest march called by the Congress of Racial equality after a white policeman killed a Negro in Brooklyn—an incident strikingly similar to the one which preceded last year's riots—drew only 150 marchers and almost no spectators.

SLIGHT CHANGES

The city has instituted few striking changes in its attempt to deal with its racial relations problems.

The most obvious—and they are given a great deal of credit for the peace so far this year—were the appointments of three Negro policemen to key posts in Harlem.

Civil rights groups hailed one long-sought goal several months ago when Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy unexpectedly resigned to take another job.

The Congress of Racial Equality in particular had long been critical of Murphy claiming he refused to view Negro-police relations as a sociological problem, rather than strictly as a police problem.

Murphy, however, had the backing of Mayor Robert F. Wagner, and he denied that Negroes were treated any differently by the police.

Murphy's successor, Vincent L. Broderick, has repeatedly told his 25,000-man force that a man who cannot treat all persons equally has no business in a police uniform.

Both commissioners opposed CORE's demands for a civilian police review board to deal with charges of alleged police brutality.

MORE UNITY

Other changes have taken the form of stepped-up poverty and social help programs, and somewhat greater unity among the numerous Harlem leaders, who were often publicly at each other's throats in the past.

No one is saying these things will prevent a riot, but they are given credit for the peace so far.

The Amsterdam News, Harlem's largest Negro newspaper, ran an editorial recently crediting social action projects.

In Harlem, where resentment was directed both at the police and at the white merchants who own the great majority of Harlem's numerous small stores and services there has been little change in the business community.

The number of Negro sales clerks and Negro-owned businesses is virtually the same.

Negroes tend to believe that white store owners have no interest in the community whose economy they control. The common cry is, "They made their money in Harlem and take it home to white neighborhoods."

White's District

Marines Fight More Than Viet Cong

AN KHE, Viet Nam (AP)—When you fight in the jungles of Viet Nam's rugged Central Highlands, you get hot, hungry, thirsty, filthy, drenched with rain and your own sweat, bung up on razor-sharp thorns and almost eaten alive by countless insects.

You tramp through some of the thickest vegetation in the world, some times with maps 11 years out of date.

Wrapped in a damp poncho, you shiver at night in a wet uniform while you try to snatch a few hours' sleep on the jungle floor amid the creepers and thickets and the stench.

Sometimes you get shot at by the Viet Cong and you shoot back.

It was no fault of the men of Bravo Company of the 1st Airborne Battalion of the U.S. 25th Infantry that the Viet Cong did not show up during a three-day patrol near An Khe, 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

The company trudged across jungle-clad hills where progress of 200 yards an hour is considered almost a gallop. To get a picture of what it is like, imagine a room of average size filled with 1,000 ceiling-high plants. Stud most of this greenery with spikes and thorns.

At a distance of 20 feet the bulky silhouette of a heavily accoutred U.S. soldier becomes a blur. Even at noon, there is a perpetual twilight. A patrol can march right up to the muzzle of an ambushed machine gun, suspecting nothing.

This is the habitat of wild boar and snakes. And screpsi is known to the U.S. troops as "Mr. Two Steps" — "He bites you, you take two steps, and you're dead."

After a couple of days the men think it's a smell that blends sweat, mud and the acrid, vinegary stench of rotting underbrush.

When night falls and the patrol lies up in ambush, rigid silence is enforced.

A man is lucky to get one meal of cold C rations a day—jungle fighting means a man lean and mean. The water in his canteen is cloudy and reeks of chlorine, but he savors every drop as if it were a vintage wine.

Empty tin cans are jabbed again and again with bayonets and then buried. The Viet Cong did not show up during a three-day patrol near An Khe, 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

Patrol leaders put out replenishing their food and water until the last possible minute. Resupply can only be made by helicopter, which gives away the patrol's position at once.

WILL BE SENTENCED

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Edmond Majoral, 33, of Port Arthur will be sentenced in magistrate's court Friday on a charge of illegally possessing gold ore, He pleaded guilty to the charge last week. He was arrested by Kenora police after a routine search of his belongings turned up the ore. He admitted taking the ore, valued at about $400, while working for Leitch Gold Mines, Beardmore, Ont.

Business as Usual With U.S. After Liberals Again Returned

WASHINGTON (CP) — The return of the Liberals as the largest party in the Canadian House of Commons in Monday's general election spells business as usual with the United States as was named here.

A Liberal majority victory had been expected in government circles here on the basis of information from Canada, including electoral spathy. There was, however, no official comment from the state department, in keeping with standard policy concerning political events in most friendly countries.

U.S. officials had given every sign of wanting to avoid involvement this time after being drawn into the 1963 campaign because of an ill-timed public statement on Canadian acquisition of nuclear arms.

No special problems between the two countries appear to have held up pending the Canadian voting. The most long-standing negotiation concerns a new civil air agreement to give Canada more penetration of the U.S. and little progress has been visible.

Mac Basic is the continuing consultation on meshing balance of payments problems in each country. A special committee established for that purpose met here early and the Canadian head of several meetings a year is scheduled for Ottawa Nov. 18.

However, signs have faded that the Canadian gold and dollar reserves are being swelled by special Canadian borrowing concessions in U.S. markets. Total Canadian reserves gained $100,000,000 beyond the flexible limit in August but the advance has dropped markedly to ease any U.S. concern that Canadian needs for U.S. money are stimulating the U.S. dollar drain.

Some consultation probably is pending on President Johnson's intent to reshape tariffs and in various ways so that countries such as India grow more food and depend less on U.S. supplies. The Canadian aid program is aligned with others where possible.

No swift consultation between Pearson and Johnson seems likely as in 1963 when Pearson went to Hyannis Port to see President Kennedy or in 1958 when John Diefenbaker conferred with former president Eisenhower.

The governments involved—and the leaders—have their communications patterns well established. President Johnson still has an invitation to visit Canada, the only country he has entered since becoming president in November, 1963—and then only for an hour or two in British Columbia.

SHAPING the EARTH

WHY DO WE HAVE CHROMOSOMES?

In any organism, CELLS ARE MAKING CONTINUALLY. Chromosomes split longitudinally so that in each cell there is always a pair of chromosomes. This is how a NORMAL cell nucleus divides.

In the formation of PROPAGATION CELLS, however, pairs of chromosomes split apart with the nucleus of each propagation cell containing a SINGLE chromosome. When the male cell impregnates the female cell, two nuclei unite to form a single nucleus with chromosomes in pairs and carrying the HEREDITARY CHARACTERISTICS of both parents.

The BANANA FLY has four pairs of chromosomes in each cell nucleus. The HUMAN BEING has 24 pairs.

A highly magnified chromosome looks like a beaded necklace.

Groans and Cautious Applause Mingle As Plan to Upgrade Welsh Unveiled

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP) — Proposals for government action to raise the status of the Welsh language have been greeted by mingled groans and cautious applause in the towns and valleys of Wales.

A government-appointed committee has recommended that Welsh should be given statutory equality with English in the 12 counties of Wales and in Monmouthshire, a Welsh - English border county included in Wales for some administrative purposes.

Welsh nationalists from Aberdien to Rhyl welcomed the report as a step towards righting an injustice committed in 1536 when Wales was united with England by Henry VIII, great - grandson of Welshman Owen Tudor. The Act of Union "virtually proscribed the Welsh language," in the words of Gwynfor Evans, president of Plaid Cymru, the Welsh Nationalist Party.

NOT CONCERNED

But for the three-quarters of the population of 2,500,000 who speak no Welsh, the most positive reaction has been a so-what shrug.

"The danger of the recommendations is that under the guise of righting an ancient wrong a minority in Wales would be imposing on the majority an irrelevant and hamper and burden," commented the Western Mail, a Cardiff newspaper that describes itself as the national newspaper of Wales.

The three - man committee headed by lawyer Sir David Hughes Parry, set up two years ago by the British government's Welsh Affairs office, rejected the idea of full bilingualism in Wales. But it termed inadequate the present recognition of Welsh, which is limited to permitting use of the language in a court of law by an individual who would be at a disadvantage using English.

The committee, which also included Merioneth County clerk D. W. Jones-Williams and Swansea history professor Glanmor Williams, opted instead for "the principle of equal validity" of Welsh and English.

PRACTICAL EFFECTS

In practice, acceptance of the principle would mean updating ancient laws, changing procedures in regional administration and recruiting bilingual personnel for courts, government offices, hospitals and the educational system.

Magistrates' courts would be equipped to conduct cases entirely in Welsh instead of merely providing interpreters for individual witnesses. Heads of national government departments in Wales and senior officers in local administrations would be bilingual. Any citizen would be able to conduct business with a public body in Welsh, whether reading, writing or speaking.

The committee gives figures indicating decline in use of the ancient Celtic tongue, despite the efforts of literary societies, schools and BBC radio and television to preserve a lyrical language with a literary tradition 14 centuries old.

Fewer than half of the more than 3,500 members of municipal and rural councils in Wales can speak Welsh. Only 75 of the 108 councils have Welsh-speaking clerks.

Welsh is strongest in the rural north: About 75 per cent of the citizens of Anglesey and Merioneth have can speak Welsh, compared with an average throughout the country of 28 per cent. But speaking Welsh is a race talent in the urban south. Only 17 per cent of the citizens of the capital, Cardiff, speak their native tongue and only 2.1 per cent of Newport residents know Welsh.

The committee recommendations have been criticized by some on the ground that they do not go far enough and by others who consider an attempt to revive Welsh by law as a futile exercise. The government has said it will assess Welsh reaction before acting.

The recommendations in most cases would require a Welshman to ask especially for the right to conduct business in Welsh, said Gerallt Jones of the Welsh Language Society. "This is not good enough and certainly it cannot be termed official status."

Many Welshmen seem to believe that regardless of laws passed in London their homeland will continue to enrich the world with things that matter—coal and choral singing, Caerphilly cheese and rugby players, great politicians like the late Nye Bevan and grand poets like the lyrical Dylan Thomas.

OPPOSE BILL

AMSTERDAM (AP)—Nearly 60,000 persons have signed a petition asking the Dutch Parliament not to pass the bill approving Crown Princess Beatrix's marriage in March to West German diplomat Claus Von Amsberg, the petition committee announced today. The petition says Von Amsberg, 39, is not acceptable as a prince consort to The Netherlands' future queen because of his Second World War activities as a soldier and Hitler Youth member.

Stay Young By Living In Past

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Living in the past is the only real way you can keep young.

A journey back in time refreshes both mind and spirit.

You've got a pretty good power of recollection if you can look back across the galloping mists of the years and remember when—

One of the chores of childhood was going to the grocery store to get a can of real oil.

There was at least one old lady in the block who either smoked a corncob pipe or used snuff.

Exercise was regarded as something good for horses rather than people.

ALL IN PANIC

Everybody in the house was thrown into a panic when the phone rang and the long-distance operator came on the line. It was felt for sure that some loved relative must be ill or in trouble, because if it was good news it would come by mail.

When a boy put on his first pair of long pants, his mother had to hide her tears, but his father smiled and said, "Well, son, don't forget one thing—where your dad sits is still the head of the table."

It was a sign of gentility in the home to have a bowl of waxed fruit in the parlor.

No woman of responsibility would think of reading her wife curtains to the laundry. They were too precious to be washed by any other hands than hers.

KNOW YOUR NEIGHBOR

You hated to sit in church next to someone who was going to drop a quarter in the basket when all you had to give was a dime.

The average dog spent most of his waking hours scratching himself.

A body never felt he really knew his new next door neighbors until they sent one of their kids over with a cup to borrow something.

A rich child was one who took the street car to high school instead of walking.

You knew a fellow was stuck on a girl when he started letting her beat him at checkers.

It didn't help your reputation in the community if you were seen coming out of a pool hall twice in the same month.

Those were the days! Remember?

Will Challenge Question Of Integrity Says PC Chief

By KEN CLARK

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said Tuesday if Prime Minister Pearson "intends to stay on to meet Parliament there will be a strong challenge immediately on the question of integrity."

In a post-election chat with reporters, he said the parliamentary challenge will cover a variety of things besides the Dorion inquiry into the Lucien Rivard scandal. He said other parties have spoken strongly on this subject.

Mr. Diefenbaker said if the government should be defeated on a motion of this type, "it would be the duty of the prime minister to ask the Governor-General to see if another party could form a government."

On the question of integrity in government, "this is one matter" on which Social Credit Leader Thompson has spoken very definitely, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

NDP Leader Douglas has been equally strong and so has Creditiste Leader Real Caouette.

Amplifying on remarks he made in a television appearance Monday, Mr. Diefenbaker said it was "a piece of effrontery" for Mr. Pearson to say that if he did not get a majority there would be an election in a year or 18 months.

Mr. Pearson had no constitutional right to give this advice to the Governor - General, but must advise the Governor-General there is another party that can form a government, he said.

Mr. Diefenbaker, met reporters in his private railway car. He was rather surprised at the failure of the NDP "with all the power they claim they possessed," electing so few members.

He noted they had fewer seats than in 1945 when they got 28, and in 1957, when they elected 25.

"It is very obvious socialism has no appeal to the Canadian people," he said.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he could not recall any parliamentary parallel to Monday's election outcome.

Mr. Diefenbaker added: "The election outcome is an answer and for all to the self-appointed pundits that can feel the public pulse."

In good spirits, Mr. Diefenbaker said the pre - election Gallup poll that forecast a 15-point percentage spread favoring the Liberals over the Conservatives in popular vote was "all wet."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Conservatives in popular vote was less than half that amount.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he is still waiting to "hear what the prime minister has to say" about the election outcome.

Asked how he felt physically, Mr. Diefenbaker said "wonderful. That's not an assumed attitude either. I feel wonderful."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he hoped to call an early party caucus in Ottawa. "I can't see Parliament (being called) before the second week of January."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he wanted to go hunting and "forget politics for a little while.

"The election is over, and I'm waiting to see what the other fellow does."

New Government Booklet Plugs Civil Service Jobs

By PAUL DUNN

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government has added a new weapon to its arsenal of recruitment materials—an informative 27-page booklet aimed at luring university graduates into executive and foreign service positions.

The government's recruiting arm, the Civil Service Commission, has had 18,000 copies of the booklet printed in English and 6,500 in French. Its title: "Careers for University Graduates with the Government of Canada.

The fact-filled pages now are on their way to university placement officers across Canada, to individuals who asked the commission for such information and to Canadian government establishments abroad.

Students are told that chances are they can find counterparts in the government service to many researcher - hungry departments.

There is information on career development, promotion, salaries, fringe benefits and how to apply for a job—you must be a graduate or in your final year at university (and finally graduate) and 31 or under at Oct. 20, 1965.

For positions as a foreign service officer you must be a Canadian and have lived here for at least 10 years. For either position the applicant must face a medical examination and a selection board.

The commission engages 120 to 145 junior executive officers annually after its Oct. 30 examinations. Last year some 2,000 written version of an older manual, is one of several the commission directs to potential job applicants.

SCIENTISTS NEEDED

The hunt for junior executive and foreign service officers, sole purpose of the new booklet, is exceeded only by the program to recruit scientific graduates for the government's many

The booklet, a completely re-

and a similar number was expected this fall. Successful students join the service next May.

General information on government careers is offered: advancement depends on demonstrated ability; work is difficult and challenging; as your capability increases you will be given increasing opportunity, responsibility and authority; the environment is congenial; "there is the unequalled opportunity of contributing to the planning and execution of national public policy."

COURSES OFFERED

Junior executive officers may have specialized at university in a variety of subjects or have taken a general degree. In the government they will receive special courses and be given on-the-job training to assist their development.

The booklet explains that a junior executive officer may enter fields ranging from general administration, where no particular degree is required, to more-specialized fields such as personnel administration, trade promotion, industrial development, and positions in economic and social analysis where specialized degrees in economics and finance or related subjects are required.

The departments of immigration, trade and external affairs need the foreign service officers.

These positions bring the opportunity to represent Canada abroad in an official capacity. Three basic functions are involved: representation, negotiation and reporting.

Says the booklet:

"The work is interesting, even adventurous, and the officer's wife will be able to help her husband to a greater degree than is possible in many other careers."

WINS CHEESE AWARD

TORONTO (CP)—The Farmers' Joy Cheese Factory of Monkland, Ont., won the championship cheese award Tuesday at the Royal Winter Fair. The reserve championship went to the Glenco Cheese Factory of Northfield, Ont.

Thompson Says PCs Received Protest Votes

By STUART LAKE

RED DEER (CP) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Monday night his party failed to make big gains in the federal election because "most of the protest vote went to the Conservatives."

The party, which had four members going into the election campaign, picked up only one seat in the Commons—the Okanagan-Revelstoke riding won by Howard Johnson. Party officials had hoped for as many as 15 seats.

Returning Social Credit members are Mr. Thompson (Red Deer), H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat), A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley), and Bert Leboe (Cariboo).

Mr. Thompson said a caucus will decide whether former Social Credit Leader Gerard Chapdelaine, who won the Quebec riding of Sherbrooke, will rejoin the party. He was the only one of five former Social Credit MPs from Quebec running as independents who held his seat.

While disappointed at the overall showing, Mr. Thompson was elated with his own victory in Red Deer. Several pollsters had predicted his defeat.

'DIDN'T ASK FRIENDS'

"They had spoken only to my enemies. They should have asked the people of Red Deer."

His margin of victory was more than 800 votes in excess of his 1963 win over Conservative Gordon Towers.

Mr. Thompson said the Monday voting was "a complete rejection of the Liberals," who campaigned for a majority government.

Calling the election was Prime Minister Pearson's "greatest blunder."

The voting could also be considered a repudiation by the people of the government's proposed compulsory medical care plan. The prime minister and other cabinet ministers had said a majority vote for the Liberals would be considered a go-ahead signal for medical care.

Mr. Thompson said Canadians won't be subjected to another federal election until 1969 "and certainly not until after centennial year."

'REFORMS ARE NEEDED'

Parliament should get down to work and forget "petty partisan politics." First some reforms were needed.

"The prime minister should stand up in his place and say that the government will not consider a defeat of any of its legislation as a vote of not-confidence," said Mr. Thompson.

The only exception would be a major money bill.

He ruled out any possibility of Social Credit members and the nine Creditistes voting as a block.

"They (the Creditistes) do not belong to the national party," he said.

Mr. Thompson goes to Edmonton today to make plans for the party's national conference, scheduled for the end of the month there.

He will talk with party officials in Toronto Wednesday then spend the remainder of the week in Ottawa.

WELFARE COMES HIGH

The Canadian government's most expensive department is health—and welfare, which is spending $2,295,000,000 in the current year.

Liberals Gain Seats At Socreds' Expense

QUEBEC (CP)—The Liberals picked up an extra eight seats for a total of 55 in Quebec Monday, largely at the expense of the feuding Creditiste and Social Credit factions.

While they were losing ground or holding steady in all other provinces, the Liberals gained four seats that went Social Credit in 1963, three from Creditistes and three from Conservatives.

The Conservative party, often accused of being anti-Quebec by its opponents, refused to die in this province.

Conservatives won nine seats, including three gains from the Liberals, and Quebec Conservative MP Maurice Allard made a comeback in Sherbrooke as an anti - Diefenbaker Independent Conservative. This compared with eight Conservatives chosen in 1963 and 14 in 1962.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette and eight of his followers survived the Liberal tide, a far cry from the 26 Caouette men elected in 1962 and 20 a year later. There were 13 Creditiste MPs at dissolution.

MINISTERS RETURNED

Quebec's eight cabinet ministers and the three new-guard Liberal intellectuals all swept into office with comfortable margins.

The three newcomers, all in their 40s, are ex-labor leader Jean Marchand, law professor Pierre Elliott Trudeau and syndicated columnist Gerard Pelletier.

The Liberals' provincial total of 55 Commons seats was the largest since 1957, when they swept 63 of the 75 ridings but lost power to a minority Conservative government.

The New Democratic Party, which like its CCF predecessor has never captured a Quebec seat, was blanked again Monday despite its "strongest campaign ever and a new platform featuring bilingualism and the two-nation concept popular with many French-Canadians.

However, the NDP boosted its popular vote to more than 235,000 from 160,000 in 1963 and its candidates made strong showings in several Montreal ridings and in the depressed lower St. Lawrence area.

The party's new Quebec leader, country lawyer Robert Cliche, was defeated by nearly 3,000 votes by Liberal Jean-Paul Racine in Beauce, south of Quebec City.

DUPUIS BEATEN

Yvon Dupuis, dismissed as minister without portfolio last January and now awaiting trial on influence-peddling charges, was beaten soundly by Conservative Paul Beaulieu in St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville.

Mr. Beaulieu, 63, was commerce minister for 16 years in the Duplessis provincial government and is the first man since Confederation to break the federal Liberals' hold on the St. Jean seat.

The Conservatives elected two of their former ministers, but lost a third.

Former forestry minister Martial Asselin regained Charlevoix from the Creditistes and former minister without portfolio Theogene Ricard was re-elected handily in St. Hyacinthe-Bagot.

Former mines minister Paul Martineau, who won with the returning officer's vote after a tie in 1963, was edged out by Liberal Thomas Lefebvre.

Two "New Guard" Liberal members of the last House lost to Conservatives. In Gaspe, ex-Conservative MP Russell Keays trimmed Alexandre Cyr and in Argenteuil - Deux - Montagnes, Roger Regimbal ousted Vincent Drouin.

YOUNG CAOUETTE LOSES

Mr. Caouette's son Gilles, 25, lost his third race in as many years. He was turned back in Labelle by Liberal Gaston Clermont.

The closest race took place in Shefford where Creditiste Gilbert Rondeau, the former member, trailed 35 votes behind Liberal Louis Neveu and 113 votes behind Conservative Paul Trepanier, mayor of Granby.

The outcome there could be affected by the service vote to be announced Saturday or by a recount.

The only separatist standard-bearer, ex-boxer Reggie Chartrand, picked up a mere 250 votes in Montreal St. Jacques.

Turnout was cut to about 67 per cent by poor weather and lack of interest. Only a handful of voting incidents were reported, all in Montreal.

Northwest Territories Govt. Sends All Eligible to College

By JANE BECKER

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP)— Since taking over education in the Northwest Territories 10 years ago, the federal government has poured millions of dollars into building schools and hostels.

The territorial government provides more aid to education than any other government in Canada, paying university fees to all youngsters who qualify.

But one problem is that so far few Indian and Eskimo children have gone beyond Grade 8 or 9, let alone reached college level.

The Oblate order of the Roman Catholic Church hopes the situation may be in Grandin College, a residence for 54 Indian and Eskimo youngsters in this settlement just north of the Alberta border.

The priests and lay brothers went to make community leaders of the young people. And within five years they hope Grandin will be the first junior college in the territories offering university entrance courses.

Some educationists say a system that teaches everyone by methods and standards of "southern Canada" is large, up-to-date schools and hostels has created more problems than it has solved.

Most Indian and Eskimo children return to their small northern communities after school with new difficulties. Considered too educated to take up their parents' way of life, they are at the same time untrained for the role of making any contribution to the settlement. Left without jobs or a "place," many gradually lose hope.

The Oblate order started Grandin College in 1959, with an enrolment of 12 boys, after noticing that Indian and Eskimo children didn't do as well as others in the federal school in Fort Smith.

"We believe the main reason was their inability to compete successfully with the other children in various activities," says Rev. Maurice Beauregard, rector of St. Joseph's Cathedral here. "This made them feel inferior and affected their studies."

The children at Grandin still attend the federal school, but they get special academic help from two degree-holding priests. They have a gymnasium and their own 32-piece band and glee club. And they receive continuous guidance from the Oblates. This not only gives them a better chance to match the accomplishments of other children in the federal school, it is also aimed at producing a nucleus of Indians and Eskimos who can help others of their people to overcome educational handicaps.

"From Grandin, youngsters should be able to organize recreation in a small community," says Father Beauregard.

The boys at Grandin are encouraged to take courses in mechanics and carpentry at Yellowknife in preparation for possible return to their home settlements. And the girls are trained in domestic science, with those who show aptitude for nursing encouraged to go on in that field.

Was Hungry Eisenhower Tells Doctors

FORT GORDON, Ga. (AP)— Former president Dwight D. Eisenhower asked his doctors about his blood pressure early today but the question of whether the general of the army suffered a heart attack remained unanswered.

The doctors told Eisenhower, 75, that his blood pressure was stable at 145.

The general awoke at about 4 a.m. during his second night in the Fort Gordon army hospital where he was taken Monday night suffering from chest pains. He told doctors he was hungry and asked for something to eat, just as he had done after a nap Tuesday.

The doctors told Eisenhower he would have to wait until blood tests and a cardiogram had been completed.

They said the tests must be conducted on an empty stomach. Eisenhower did not complain, said a statement issued by the army public information centre, "and promptly returned to the business of sleeping."

Eisenhower, victim of a heart attack in 1955, was stricken with chest pains Monday night while he and Mrs. Eisenhower vacationed at the National Golf Club in Augusta. They were raped by army ambulance to the Ft. Gordon army hospital.

Dr. Thomas W. Mattingly, who treated Eisenhower after the 1955 attack, flew in with John Eisenhower, the former president's son, in a presidential jet.

Mattingly conferred with other physicians called in soon after the chest pains began. Together they issued the statement: "In view of his heart history, recurring episode of chest pain discomfort must be carefully evaluated until it is adequately explained."

And they said it would take up to 36 hours to determine if Eisenhower had suffered a heart attack.

The Eisenhowers arrived at Augusta Oct. 27 and Eisenhower had been playing golf regularly. He played 18 holes on Monday.

NDP Demands Tough for Voting Support

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party may be able to exert telling influence on government business and economic policies in the next few months.

NDP Leader Douglas said in Burnaby, B.C., near the end of the election campaign that his party is willing "to sit down with whichever party is most amenable to implement our program . . . in exchange for voting support."

The Liberal government, with 129 seats in the 265-seat Commons, now needs voting support to remain in office. The NDP has 21 members.

NDP pledges

Here are some of the policies and pledges on which Mr. Douglas and the NDP stood during the Nov. 8 election campaign:

—A responsible economic planning body with management, labor, agriculture and consumer representatives to set "realistic goals" for the entire economy, laying down guidelines for production, prices and wages.

—A prices board "to prevent unjustified increases in the prices of goods and services which affect our cost of living."

—A 50-per cent increase, to $1,500 for single persons and $3,000 for married, in basic income tax exemptions.

—Reduction to three per cent from 6% in Housing Act interest rates.

—Compulsory disclosure of true interest rates on instalment buying.

ATTACKS 'ELITE'

Mr. Douglas said on Oct. 13 at Yorkton, Sask., that fewer than 1,000 Canadians in major industries and corporations exercise an economic dictatorship over Canada.

"They decide whether prices go up or down, or whether the savings of Canadians will be used to develop Canadian industries or lie idle for another 50 years, and we, the people, have nothing to say. They are the corporate elite."

The NDP also favored matching industrial plans with resources, and developing resources where they are found, especially in northern regions.

As a price for NDP support in the Commons, a government would have to agree to deadlines for introduction of universal medical care insurance, tax exemptions, free university education, manpower training subsidies, and curbs on foreign ownership of industry and resources.

Out-of-wedlock Birth Rate In Ontario Lowest in Canada

TORONTO (CP)—A welfare department survey of unmarried mothers in Ontario indicates the province has the lowest out-of-wedlock birth rate in Canada.

A brief presented to the legislature's select committee on youth Tuesday by Welfare Minister Louis Cecile said rates of out-of-wedlock birth rose only slightly for all Canada between 1948 and 1961, and Ontario showed an increase of only fourtenths of one per cent, the lowest of all provinces.

The survey extended from 1943 to 1961.

(A welfare department official said later that 20 years ago Ontario rates were the highest in Canada, accounting for 5.2 per cent of all live births.)

The report also showed teenagers form the largest group of unmarried mothers in Ontario. The percentage of unmarried mothers under 20 increased from 29.7 in 1943 to 57.9 in 1961.

RATES DECLINE

However, the rates of all other age groups have declined as part of a general trend across North America, the survey revealed.

Mr. Cecile said 4,493 unmarried mothers in Ontario received welfare services in 1964. He said 40 girls were under 15 while 2,090 were between 15 and 19.

In his brief, he also outlined a proposed department study of 2,000 children for 15 years.

"We want to know how the 2,000 children will approach the challenge of growing up and how their parents will help and guide them," the minister said.

The 1,000 boys and 1,000 girls, all age 5, will be chosen from across the province.

STATES AIM

"We hope to obtain data on the mobility of Ontario's population, on the frequency of intermarriage and on the rates of divorce and of wedlock. The 2,000 boys and girls will be representative of all ethnic and religious groups which comprise our nation," he said.

He also unveiled other proposed welfare projects, including a certificate course for home-makers, nursery services to children in large housing developments, nursery services to Indian children and their mothers, day care for children of married nurses, teachers and social workers and a community services project to provide a clearing house for welfare problems.

Entire Block In Brockville Lost in Fire

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Firemen kept watch early today over the site of a fire that burned for 16 hours Tuesday, destroying an entire downtown block and leaving about 40 persons homeless.

An insurance adjuster estimated the damage at $2,500,000, making it probably the worst fire in the city's history.

The families left homeless are being taken care of by the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the city welfare field.

At the peak of the blaze, with temperatures in the mid-30s and a north wind blowing at 15 miles an hour, Brockville firemen called for help from nearby Prescott, Gananoque and Elizabethtown townships and from the Du Pont (Canada) plant at nearby Maitland.

None of the residents were injured.

LEG BROKEN

Fire Chief Robert Bell of Maitland, chief of the volunteer department, was taken to hospital with a broken leg and bruises after he was hit by a section of falling wall. Fireman Les McMahon of Brockville suffered chest injuries when a window exploded almost in his face.

Fireman Kenneth Jackson of Brockville was treated for an eye injury. Several other firemen were treated for smoke inhalation.

Destroyed in the fire were six stores, the apartments over the stores, three empty houses and the Oddfellows' Hall.

The fire was discovered at 6:40 p.m. when an employee of the basement of the Adams furniture store rocked the street. The building was ablaze within minutes.

Firemen expect difficulty in determining the cause of the fire as the building containing the Adams store was levelled when it appeared in danger of collapsing. They believe the fire caused the explosion.

The other stores destroyed were the Singer Sewing Centre, Doyle's Men's Wear, Dalley's Leather Goods, the English China Shop and the Cameron Borthwick hardware store.

An elderly widow, Mrs. Betty Pender, was rescued from her apartment over the sewing centre by Brenda Fagan, 17, a neighbor across the street.

TV-Radio Column

Battery Radio and Candles Good Things in Blackout

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—This column, written in a chilly living room in front of a hearth fire and by the light of a single flickering candle, is essentially a love note to old-fashioned radio and the transistor receiving set.

Within moments after the lights of most of the northeast had dimmed and clicked out, Gargantuan power failure last night, local and network radio stations began mobilizing. Soon afterward, we knew it was not just a local failure but before fear or panic could take over, calm radio voices already were reassuring us and offering help.

Obviously, it wasn't easy for them to be on the air. Some of the broadcasts came from station transmitters across the Hudson River where there was still power.

Other stations used telephones to send their words to points from which they could be broadcast.

At any rate, radio performed for us a vital service. And no home should be without a working battery radio as well as a good supply of candles and matches.

Before the blackout descended, NBC television announced that two of its programs which had showed marked weakness in their Nielsen ratings would be cancelled in January and replaced by two more spy series.

Cancelled are O.K. Crackerby, a new comedy series, and King Family, which has not done well since it was shrunk to a half hour program.

One new spy drama will be Blue Light, starring Robert Goulet in a non-singing part. The other is a comedy spy series, The Double Life of Henry Phyfe, starring Red Buttons.

RADIANT QUEEN—Queen Elizabeth II smiles at crowd as she rides in the Irish State Coach from Buckingham Palace to Westminster in London Tuesday for the traditional opening of the new session of Parliament. The queen called for a peaceful and honorable solution to the Rhodesian crisis 'on a basis acceptable to the people of the country as a whole". (AP Wirephoto by cable from London)

SALES UP

Canadian department store sales in the last week of October were 10.3 per cent higher than in the corresponding week of last year, the bureau of statistics reported Tuesday.

SUSPEND TRADING

The Canadian Stock Exchange suspended trading Tuesday in shares of Alscope Consolidated. Nicholas Martini, president of Alscope, said the suspension was unjust. A stock exchange official called him after the suspension, he said, and told him that Alscope had failed to comply with a regulation that requires companies to file information on new acquisitions or expenditures which total more than $25,000.

Diefenbaker Starts Back To Ottawa

PRINCE ALBERT Sask. (CP)—Taking it easy after a high - pressure election campaign, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker today starts wending his way back to Ottawa by train from this city of 25,000.

His private railway car will be hooked on to a freight train at dusk for a trip to Saskatoon. There it will be added to the CNR's trans - continental train The Panorama, for the ride to the capital.

The 70-year-old prairie lawyer, who helped prevent a Liberal majority but failed to regain power himself, spent the election weekend in his private car parked on a Prince Albert siding.

Mr. Diefenbaker's train is expected to arrive in Ottawa Friday evening. Aides said tentative plans for a hunting trip here for prairie chicken fell through.

Mommy, Your Shouting Broke the Lights!

TORONTO (CP)—In the cool—and the dark—of the night, southern and eastern Ontario residents reacted to a massive power failure by doing, in most cases, what comes naturally.

The lights went out at 5:16 p.m. EST Tuesday, after a breakdown on the United States-Canada power grid.

Just at that moment, a suburban Toronto housewife, exhausted from coping with four frisky tots all day, bellowed at them to keep quiet.

"Mommy," the tots cried, almost in unison. "Your shouting broke the lights."

In London, Ont., theatre-goers were just settled down for the feature movie, I Saw What You Did, when the lights went out.

In Brockville, illumination came from an unexpected source—the brightness of a still-burning, million-dollar fire that swept a whole city block.

Among the cities and towns affected by the blackout were Toronto, Hamilton, London, Kitchener, Waterloo, Brockville, Trenton, Perth, Prescott, and Smiths Falls. Power was fully restored by 8:30 p.m.

In Toronto, thousands of home - bound workers slipped into the nearest bar to drink by candlelight, avoiding jammed subway or trolley stations.

For subway passengers who did get caught underground, between stations, city transit officials provided a ladder so they could step from the cars and make their way in the dark to the nearest exit outdoors.

Citizens risked injury in the dark by directing traffic at busy intersections where lights were not operating. Two teen - age girls, on their way to night school, took over traffic direction at a suburban Don Mills intersection.

Eric Conroy, a 20-year-old student, was warned by police he would get no compensation if he was hurt, but directed traffic anyway. "Somebody had to do it, or there would have been people killed."

A passing truck driver gave him flares, and a woman motorist handed him a whistle.

Toronto's Mount Sinai Hospital put its emergency power to good use during the blackout by delivering three babies.

Toronto Police Chief James Mackey said there were no serious law enforcement problems.

"But it's a good thing the stores were closed or closing when the power went, otherwise there might have been a good deal of theft," he said.

At Toronto's Don Jail, the electrically-operated cell locks clamped shut and stayed shut while the power was off.

Successful Living

Does This Girl Know What She Wants?

DEAR DORIS: I am 22, a stenographer, fairly good looking and quite shy. I lead a very dull uninteresting life.

For the past two weeks I have been going out with a 25-year-old German boy named Fred. He is the first boy I have ever dated and is very nice. He lives alone.

DORIS CLARE

The problem is that he mentioned to me one day that he was interested in getting married. I have no intention of marriage for a long time, so I told him that I enjoyed going out with him but do not want to become serious, as I would like to travel and do some other things before settling down to marriage. In spite of what I told him, he still wants to continue seeing me. He has kissed me a couple of times but that is all.

Do you think it is wise to continue on with this type of relationship? As I mentioned above my life is very dull. I enjoy being with Fred and we have a lot of fun together, but I don't want him to get serious about me. — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UNDECIDED: Sounds like you've got it all cut and dried. When do you plan on starting to see the world? How do you know your heart won't begin ruling your head one of these days?

No harm in introducing a congenial young man into your uninteresting life. He knows where he stands with you; but I question whether you know where you stand.

DEAR DORIS: We are a couple in our sixties with a mixed marriage problem. The question has come up as to seeing about a burial plot; naturally each would like the other to see it their way.

My husband is R.C. and I am Protestant: Can you help me try and do the right thing? — PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: Are you choking on the camel's tail?

You've survived a mixed marriage right into your sixties. But you find it hard to swallow separation in death!

The right thing, for a good Catholic, is to be buried in the consecrated ground of an R.C. cemetery; and no one not Catholic is admitted there. Doesn't this settle it?

Don't let a dispute over this matter be a cause for unhappiness now. Plan for two plots.

DEAR DORIS: My mother thinks I'm still a baby. I go to bed on school nights at nine o'clock. Fridays it's nine-thirty.

If I yawn, no matter what, I have to go at eight or eight-thirty. My friends think and treat me like a baby. I am almost 11. — NO BABY.

DEAR NO BABY: It's maddening, isn't it? Some of these older people care so much that they couldn't bear it if your type drew a single tired breath! Give them credit, though — they do keep you healthy!

And be patient, honey chile. When you see a single grown-up way to be helpful — like grabbing a duster when company comes up the walk, or a broom when somebody spills the beans — do it. One day they'll catch on.

Then still later, much later, there'll be times when you'll long for this same babying.

* * *

(Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope!)

461 Candidates In Election Lose Deposits

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The high cost of running a general election was alleviated to the extent of more than $90,000 in lost deposits Monday by candidates who failed to poll at least half the vote of the winner in their riding.

A compilation by The Canadian Press showed that at least 461 of the 1,011 candidates dropped their $200 deposits, to the benefit of the federal treasury. The big losers were the New Democrats, with 177 lost deposits.

In nine cases where the results were incomplete the races were too close to determine whether deposits would be forfeited.

The figures showed that only 28 Liberals gave up their money compared with 83 Conservatives. these tallies were strikingly similar to the 1963 election, when 84 Conservatives and 27 Liberals lost deposits.

Social Credit candidates lost 69 deposits and Creditistes 48. Almost all independents, Communists and regional party candidates—such as New Capitalist and Rhinoceros—forfeited their $200. The total of these was 56.

By provinces, the greatest losses were suffered in Quebec, where 179 candidates, including 53 New Democrats, 46 Creditistes and 44 Conservatives, lost deposits.

In Ontario 111 candidates, including 53 New Democrats, 19 Social Credit and 19 Conservatives, gave up the money. In each of the two major provinces only two Liberals were losers.

Rhodesia Declares Independence

Mystery Still Surrounds Blackout Cause

TORONTO (CP) — Mystery still surrounds the cause of Tuesday night's blackout that plunged millions of people into total darkness in parts of Ontario and eight states.

The Hydro - Electric Power Commission of Ontario can't explain it.

Neither can the Consolidated Edison and Niagara Mohawk power companies in New York state.

Consolidated Edison blamed the failure on a "massive loss of generating capacity somewhere . . . north of our territory."

HEPC chairman W. Ross Strike said a 10-year-old Ontario tie-in with Michigan and New York state power systems "may have developed weaknesses as it got bigger."

He said the investigation was being hampered by a tight security cloak thrown around the incident by U.S. officials.

"Our American counterparts have clammed up tight," Mr. Strike said.

Meanwhile, top - level efforts

2 Killed In Train Wreck

TORONTO (CP) — Two railwaymen were killed at nearby Port Credit early today when a CPR fre^ight train crashed into the rear of a CNR freight train derailing about 20 cars.

Killed when the CPR freight train sped through an open switch and rammed the caboose of the other train were CPR engineer Joseph Cassidy, 51, and conductor Jack O'Donnell, 46, who was in the caboose of the CNR train. Both men were from Toronto.

A spokesman at the CNR-CPR yard at Port Credit, 10 miles west of here, said about 40 cars were derailed in the crash. The cars were toppled end-over-end

Gibbs Suspends Smith and Cabinet On Queen's Order

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG

SALISBURY (Reuters)—The white-ruled African colony of Rhodesia today seized independence in defiance of Britain.

It was the first rebellion of the kind since the United States broke away as a colony in 1776.

The unilateral declaration of independence was broadcast to the nation of 4,000,000 Negroes and 220,000 whites by the prime minister, 46-year-old Ian Smith.

The declaration was made despite an early morning telephone appeal to Smith by British Prime Minister Wilson.

Rhodesians—black and white—crowded tensely and silently round radio sets to hear Smith read the proclamation which was couched in formal, stylized language.

It ended: "God save the Queen."

Wilson Denounces "Self-destroying Action"

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson today denounced Rhodesia's seizure of independence as "an illegal and self-destroying action" for which Ian Smith and his ministers have been dismissed.

Reporting to the House of Commons on the crisis shaking the British Commonwealth, Wilson also announced:

— Rhodesia's expulsion from the sterling area.

— A ban on the export of goods to the country.

— Suspension of Commonwealth preferences as far as Rhodesia is concerned.

Such preferences are trade advantages enjoyed by members of the Commonwealth.

Wilson detailed these additional reprisal measures:

— A control on all fiscal dealings between Britain and Rhodesia.

— A crippling ban on further British purchases of Rhodesia's prized $112,000,000 a year tobacco crop.

— An embargo on the export of arms, and spares for existing weapons, to Rhodesia.

— An end of all British economic and other aid.

The British government, Wilson said, will have no dealings with the Salisbury regime.

Britain's high commissioner in Salisbury, J. R. Johnston, is being recalled and Rhodesia's high commissioner in Britain, Brig. Andrew Skeen, has been ordered to leave.

Wilson told a packed house chamber that Smith and his fellow ministers have been dismissed from office and now must be regarded as private citizens.

All other British subjects in Rhodesia have been asked to remain loyal to Queen Elizabeth.

Telling of his dawn telephone talk today with Smith, the prime minister said he felt he was speaking to "a confused and unhappy man" who has been under "intolerable pressure from some of his colleagues" in recent weeks.

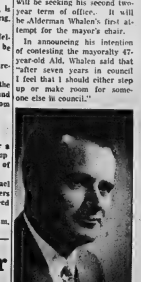
UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Britain today called for a meeting of the UN Security Council to request worldwide support for economic sanctions against the self-governing colony of Rhodesia which today seized independence unilaterally.

In London, it was announced that Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart would fly to New York today to attend the meeting, but informed sources said the council session would be deferred until Stewart's arrival.

This meant the meeting probably would begin at 10.30 a.m. Friday.

For Mayor Whalen vs. Ellis



A two-way fight for the Belleville mayoralty in the December 6th municipal election was indicated today with announcements this morning from Alderman Donald J. Whalen and incumbent Jack Ellis that they would contest the office of mayor.

ALD. DON WHALEN

Alderman Whalen, a seven-year veteran of city council, was first to announce his intention to run, while Mayor Ellis' announcement followed during the noon hour. Mayor Ellis will be seeking his second two-year term of office. It will be Alderman Whalen's first attempt for the mayor's chair.

In announcing his intention of contesting the mayoralty 47-year-old Ald. Whalen said that "after seven years in council I feel that I should either step up or make room for someone else in council."

MAYOR ELLIS

"With my experience in council I feel that I have something to offer," he said.

ANNOUNCES PLATFORM

Alderman Whalen said that his election platform would be one to keep unnecessary city expenditures under control until there was new industry to help meet the tax load.

In his seven years on council Alderman Whalen has headed the former Arena Committee and has also served on the

Eisenhower Suffers Second Series of Pains

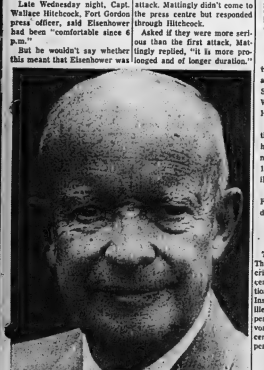
FORT GORDON, Ga. (AP)—Doctors describe former president Eisenhower's condition as comfortable following a second series of heart pains which forced his return to an oxygen tent.

The pains Wednesday were more prolonged and of longer duration than the mild attack of angina pectoris, or heart pains, which occurred just after midnight Monday night, doctors said.

Announcement of the sudden reversal in the condition of the 75-year-old general of the army came about an hour after the doctors had said he was making a good recovery and might be playing golf again in two weeks.

Late Wednesday night, Capt. Wallace Hitchcock, Fort Gordon press officer, said Eisenhower had been "comfortable since 6 p.m."

But he wouldn't say whether this meant that Eisenhower was completely out of pain or there had been any solid improvement in his condition.



Earlier Wednesday, it was announced that the former president would be flown to Washington Friday to enter Walter Reed Army Hospital for the remainder of his convalescence.

However, slightly over an hour later, Hitchcock told reporters:

"While the general had a fine morning, this afternoon he had a return of his chest discomfort. Plans for his departure for Walter Reed have been held in abeyance."

Seeking some idea of the significance of the new pains, reporters asked questions of Dr. Thomas W. Mattingly, who treated Eisenhower in his 1955 attack. Mattingly didn't come to the press centre but responded through Hitchcock.

Asked if they were more serious than the first attack, Mattingly replied, "It is more prolonged and of longer duration."

SUFFERS A SETBACK — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, 75 on October 14, active and in apparent ruddy health, suffered a second and "more prolonged" heart pains in the Army Hospital at Fort Gordon, Ga., Wednesday night and was returned to an oxygen tent. The first attack took place shortly after midnight last Monday. This exclusive picture was made shortly before the birthday at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm. (AP Wirephoto)

Veterans, Service Men, Cadets And Citizens Honor War Dead

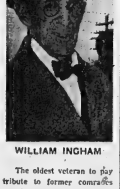
Sullen overcast skies reminiscent of that November 11 back in 1918 when the war bugles sounded the "Cease Fire" to end the world's first great conflict ushered in the 1965 Remembrance Day here this morning.

In the greater part a remembering city paused briefly at 11 o'clock to pay silent and other tributes to the memories of the gallant dead of two world wars.

City branches of the Royal Canadian Legion and the Army, Navy and Air Force with unattached veterans, members of the armed services and many city organizations were represented in a large parade to the Station Street Cenotaph where solemn if brief memorial services were held.

City clergy were represented at the service, Rt. Rev. A. A. Carley, St. Joseph's Parish gave the invocation; Rev. Gordon Woodcock, Victoria Avenue Baptist Church read the scripture; prayer was offered by Rabbi M. Levison, Sons of Jacob Synagogue; and the benediction by Bram Humphreys, Canadian Legion padre.

Major the Ven. A. S. McConnell, MBE, CD, rector of St. Thomas' Anglican Church gave the address.



"The Last Post" and "Reveille" were sounded by Bandsman Doug. Mason with the "Lament" offered by Pipe Maj. or Ken McNevin.

The band of the Salvation Army under director Jack Green provided music for the hymns "O God Our Help in Ages Past" and "Abide With Me," also the national anthem.

Following the service memorial wreaths were deposited at

Oldest Veteran On Parade

WILLIAM INGHAM

The oldest veteran to pay tribute to former comrades at the Remembrance Day Service this morning was Mr. William Ingham, resident at Hastings County Manor.

Mr. Ingham, "If I live until January I will be 88", said he had only missed two Remembrance Day Service since 1918—and these because of illness.

Mr. Ingham served in the First World War with a Canadian Forestry battalion.

No Cabinet Changes At Present

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson pondered the election setback with his cabinet Wednesday and decided to play a waiting game about juggling the ministry and calling Parliament into session.

After a five-hour session that broke only for lunch, Mr. Pearson said he will give no thought to cabinet changes until the election writs are returned Dec. 8 and no announcement about a date for the opening of the 27th Parliament will be made until the results of the armed forces vote are made public Saturday.

Liberal Organizers say the service vote, which is added to the civilian vote by ridings, might gain the government two seats—a result that would only confirm that the prime minister has been denied his plea for a majority. The Liberals who held 129 of the 265 Commons seats after the Monday's voting, needed 133 for a bare majority.

Princess Looks at Refrigerator Where Wedding Bid Stored

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP).— Princess Margaret got a look at the stark beauty of the Old West today—and probably a kitchen refrigerator where an invitation to her wedding once was stored.

The Princess and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, arrived Wednesday from Los Angeles for a three-day rest to break up their three-week tour of the United States.

No more of the laryngitis that plagued her in smogzy Los Angeles was present when she made a planeside speech at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base.

Waiting at the plane along with Governor Sam Goddard were her host, Lewis Douglas and his wife. Their daughter, Sharman, and Princess Margaret became close friends when Douglas was U.S. ambassador to Britain in 1948-50.

Douglas invited 200 neighbors, business acquaintances and old friends to a cocktail party Wednesday night at the picturesque Arizona inn to meet the royal pair.

As the princess circulated among the guests, someone splashed a drink on her beige, chiffon dress.

"I got wet, did you?" she said with a smile.

"Tucson is the place the Princess really planned her trip around," said an acquaintance. "She's really wanted to come here for years, ever since Sharman first told her about it."

So close are the princess and the Douglases that when they did not reply to her wedding invitation, she sent them another cable.

"What happened," said a friend of the Douglases, "was that Lew and his wife were in New York and their Mexican help couldn't read the big invitation when it arrived at the ranch.

"The help saw the big red royal seal on the back and thought it might melt. So they put the invitation in the refrigerator."

The Douglases attended the wedding. They found the first invitation months later, still in the refrigerator.

"We're going to let them decide what they want to see," Douglas told reporters.

Among suggestions offered to the Snowdons were a view of the Grand Canyon and a visit to Lake Powell, both in northern Arizona, a trip to the Papago Indian reservation and one to Kitt Peak observatory near Tucson.

National Liberal Organizer 'Depressed' After Vote

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — If Keith Davey, national Liberal organizer, was planning another election campaign in the light of what happened Monday, what would he do differently?

"I don't honestly know," he replied. "It takes some time to make that kind of assessment."

But he said all the information available when the election was called easily justified the belief that a majority government could be attained.

The 39-year-old organizer, a former packing and putting into storage is still in full former radio and television salesman in Toronto, was "very depressed" over the election results. Of increased 4.3 per cent, creamed the Liberals, Until the service vote is counted Saturday, the party has elected only one Liberal member. There were five in the last Parliament.

In the West, he said, the party was up against traditional hostility toward the Liberals. "It's not just against this government," he said. "This has been the case in four elections.

NO BLAME

Mr. Davey doesn't blame Mr. Pearson's campaign for the party's failure to reach its objective.

"The pension issue is one which Diefenbaker clearly won," Mr. Davey decided. "Prosperity was certainly a cut for us, and the issue of majority government was a cut for us, but not very deeply."

He thought that Liberal efforts to meet the pension challenge by emphasizing the benefits of the Canada assistance plan was "a clear failure. . . . It certainly didn't get across."

Mr. Davey, who became national organizer in 1961, had planned to return to private industry after this election. Since the election he said he hasn't had time to think of his own plans.

Mr. Davey and Finance Minister Gordon, the Liberals' national campaign chairmen, were the two party officials believed likely to remain in office after the election. It was frequently reported during the summer that Mr. Davey and Mr. Gordon were urging the prime minister to dissolve Parliament.

OFA Committee Urges Leasing Hunting Rights

The OFA standing committee on hunting, fishing and wildlife feels that encouragement and assistance should be given to owners of land having game and wildlife potential to collectively negotiate leasing arrangements for hunting rights on a private treaty basis with hunt clubs or other groups.

Alternately, if the owner or owners of such lands choose to commit or dedicate their lands to public hunting, they should be entitled to an acreage payment which would come from increased hunting licence fees.

The above were recommendations from standing committee reporting at the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Other recommendations made in the committee report were:

(1) That the choice between these, or other alternatives, remain with the owner or owners of such lands.

(2) That acreage payments in either case reflect the amount and quality of wildlife management that the owner or owners agree to provide.

(3) That the kinds and levels of assistance be determined which would be useful to the owners and in the long-term public interest.

A. Maracle, Deseronto, Will Be Speaker

Andrew Maracle of Deseronto is one of several Indian spokesmen who will take part in a two-day "Iroquois Speaks" rally in the Chateau Laurier hotel in Ottawa November 27-28.

The rally is a follow-up to the recent three-day meeting in Toronto and is aimed at bringing the needs of Canada's 230,000 Indians before the new government.

Kahn-Tineta Horn, at present on a speaking tour of Canadian Clubs in Ontario, will preside at the Iroquois gathering which will demand, among other things, the reorganization of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration.

Miss Horn, who believes Indian affairs should be placed under the jurisdiction of one minister, rather than being an adjunct of Citizenship and Immigration, will be in Montreal, December 1 to present a brief on Indian affairs to the Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism.

APPLE PACKER—Mrs. Evelyn Barnett, Carrying Place, packs Courtland apples into cellophane bags at Bayview Orchards. Six quart baskets and bagged apples are put up for the supermarket retail trade.

Collision Will Be Probed

By

VICTORIA (CP)—A Canadian navy ocean escort early today was accompanying the flagship of a Soviet Pacific fishing fleet to the scene of a collision which sank the Canadian trawler Aleutian Queen.

Drowned after the Wednesday night collision with a Russian vessel was Ord Grenlund of North Surrey, B.C., the Aleutian Queen's cook.

A navy spokesman said the ocean escort HMCS Stettler and the mother ship of the 45-ship Soviet fleet were proceeding company to rendezvous with two other Russian vessels and a canadian government ship for "preliminary discussions" on the collision.

The trawler's skipper, Oisten Hansen of Vancouver, and his son Robert were rescued by the Western Maid, which had been accompanying the Aleutian Queen.

The Canadian trawler was in collision with a Russian vessel, either a deep-sea tug or the disabled trawler it was towing, during bad weather about 5½ miles northeast of Cox Island, one of a string of small islands extending into Queen Charlotte Sound from Vancouver Island.

The Canadian fisheries department patrol vessel Laurier was at the scene Wednesday night. Both Soviet ships were still afloat.

NO REASON FOR IT

Capt. Charles Loftus of Seattle, skipper of the Western Maid, said in Port Hardy on Vancouver Island that there was "absolutely no reason for the accident."

"Visibility was good at the time. I could see Russian boats all over the place."

He and his crew rescued the two survivors and recovered the body of Grenlund. The two men were treated in Port Hardy and were expected to return home to Vancouver today.

The cook's life was lost, according to Capt. Loftus, as the three clung to a self-inflating life raft in the water.

The overturned life raft it righted itself and Grenlund's cramped grip on the icy lines apparently dragged him under.

Capt. Loftus said Capt. Hansen tried to pull Grenlund up, but the cook's hand was "frozen" to the raft's underside.

Capt. Loftus said Capt. Hansen told him the Russian tug was pulling a drag at the time of the collision, and seemed to be fishing the bottom.

Apple Storage Plant In Prince Edward County Now in Full Operation

Apple picking time is over again for another year, but storing, packing and putting into storage is still in full swing.

And possibly one of the busiest areas in this respect is the Prince Edward County orchard strip bordering the Bay of Quinte west of Rossmore.

For the last two months roadside stands have offered different varieties of apples to passing motorists, but with the approach of cooler weather the activity has now been moved indoors.

This is, particularly true at Bayview Orchards, operated by Harold Bonter of R.R. 1, Carrying Place, where a year-round staff of about six persons is retained looking after orchards, apple picking and storage, together with deliveries for the retail trade.

80 EMPLOYED

The Bonter orchards (mostly McIntosh) spread over about 130 acres running south from the Bay of Quinte, and during the apple picking season as many as 80 persons are employed.

But Mr. Bonter handles a much greater volume than is grown in the Bayview orchards. With deliveries to retailers throughout Eastern Ontario and even into Quebec, Mr. Bonter buys quantities of apples from neighboring bayfront orchards and from throughout the Bay of Quinte district.

Currently he is putting up fancy pack apples for the Royal Winter Fair and for shipment to Western Canada.

Controlled atmosphere storage is now the big thing in the apple industry. With this type of storage apples can be stored for a full year and then be placed on the market in "just picked" condition.

USED NEXT YEAR

It's from controlled atmosphere storage that supermarket customers next July will get those fresh juicy McIntosh eating apples just before the new crop is picked.

Controlled atmosphere storage came in just after the last war and Mr. Bonter was one of the first orchard men to install his own specialized facilities. His controlled atmosphere storage at Bayview Orchards is still the only privately owned storage of its type in the country.

In addition to his own private owned storage Mr. Bonter is also shareholder in the Prince Edward Co-Operative at Picton which also has controlled atmosphere apple storage.

But busy as he is with his orchard business, Mr. Bonter finds time for other activities as well. He is a director of the Ontario cherry association and also serves as reeve of Ameliasburg township.

Radio Network Of EMO Stood Ready - - Duffy

The Quinte Area radio network of the Emergency Measures Organization stood by ready for action during Monday evening's hydro blackout, it was noted today by co-ordinator Col. Angus B. Duffy.

Col. Duffy said that mobile radio units at Belleville, Mill, ford, Madoc, Tweed and Deseronto were all operating from emergency power units, while the Frankford station was also in on the network.

"Fortunately no emergency developed in the area, but the radio network was ready to operate if the need arose," said Col. Duffy.

School Accounts Will End 'In Black' Says Chairman

TRENTON — Douglas Whitley, the chairman of finance with the Trenton Board of Education, said at a board meeting last night that both the public school accounts and the high school accounts would end the year "in the black" and with a "modest" surplus.

James Bowman, chairman of buildings and grounds said the grounds at the new V. P. Carswell Elementary School had been black topped. E. D. Topping, acting chairman in the absence of T. S. Ketcheson, said the new school's home and school association would meet next Monday and he asked board members, E. M. Parker Jr. and Mr. Bowman to meet with the association at that time and attempt to set a date for an official opening of the school.

High school principal John Garrett will present a report to the board next meeting on possible action to be taken should the present high school population of 1,770 rise to 1,900, the estimated number the school could handle. Previously the board had made tentative plans to build a secondary school in east Trenton with all of, and for accomodation (mostly) of students from the RCAF. But members from that district now seem to be falling off. It would not be feasible to build a second school for less than 600 students . . . yet an extra 200 at the present school would change the picture. The new annex might be to have built "portable" classrooms, but these are costly and hard to obtain. Should their use is ever, public school superintendent, E. T. Morris, said last night.

GOOD REPORTS

Mr. Garrett also announced the annual commencement exercises at the school would be held on Friday, Nov. 26 Board members will, as usual, present scholarships and other awards and hand out graduation certificates.

Good reports on the schools have been received from the Trenton Board of Health, (which especially compliment the janitorial staff) as has Ontario Dept. of Education art supervisor and the school nurse. The latter, Mrs. Hamilton said the incidence of communicable diseases, vision and hearing and minor injuries suffered by the students.

Clerk comptroller O. W. Larry had written to the board that by 24 children's budget (1966-1970) be in the hands of town council early this year. The town must make a report on all its departmental forecasts to the Ontario Municipal Board.

Board member Louis Aziz brought up the subject of a public UNICEF collection being carried out in the schools. Mr. Parker and other members did not go along with this suggestion, but a motion permitting home and school associations to distribute cans and tally up results in the schools, was finally passed. Co-operation of the schools' principals must be gained, however.

the fact of the Cenotaph by the Government of Canada, the Ontario Government, the city, the armed services, war veterans organizations and many city associations and individuals.

TRUE MEANING

"I know of no other day in the year that is so poignant, so full of heartfelt meaning to a select group as November 11th," Major McConnell said.

"I believe the true meaning of our gathering together is centred around the homes of our land which those, whom we honor, fought to protect. There is no home in the city of Belleville that does not owe a debt of gratitude to those who served in two wars."

"The saddest part of heroism and valor is that those who die are all young men. Men who but for the horrors of war might now be leading the world into a more secure peace than we have today."

"At the going down of the sun—and in the morning we will remember them."

DEPOSIT WREATHS

The Government of Canada wreath was deposited by the former sitting member for Hastings South, Robert Temple, with Jack Lundberg and Addison Lloyd.

A city war mother, Mrs Frank Parsons, 12 Strachan Street, whose son John George, was killed in action with the Royal Canadian Navy, laid the Ontario government wreath, escorted by Pte. L. E. Cross, 2-30th Battalion members. Everett Liddle and C. R. Fisher.

Mayor Jack Ellis and Alderman Frank Murray officiated for the city.

The Royal Canadian Navy wreath was deposited by naval veterans; the Royal Canadian Army by Lt. B. Crooks, the Royal Canadian Postal Corps, and the RCAF by Flight Lieutenant A. Wendell.

Lieut.-Colonel Ken Willcocks, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, placed the wreath for the regimental officers with Sergeant Bob Wendell, representing the senior non-coms of the unit.

THE PARADE

The parade under the direction of Marshal Arthur Hobbs left the armouries shortly after 10.30 a.m. for the city cenotaph.

It was not immediately clear how the governor would implement the Queen's instructions, however. Wilson previously had ruled out the use of British troops to nullify a declaration of independence.

PLAN QUARANTINE

Wilson in his statement to the British House of Commons was to outline the steps his government would take. Although force has been ruled out, a series of political, financial and economic actions has been prepared to isolate and quarantine Smith's minority government.

As his third move of the day, Wilson arranged to make a nationwide television and radio address to the British people tonight.

Smith in his broadcast in Salisbury said Rhodesians had demonstrated their loyalty to the Crown and to others in the United Kingdom and elsewhere throughout two world wars. Rhodesians, he said, had been prepared to shed their blood and give of their substance to defend their beliefs.

The Rhodesian people, he continued, had given their support in what they believed to be the mutual interests of a freedom-loving people. He said the principles of Western democracy and responsible government and of moral standards had crumbled elsewhere.

He contended that the people of Rhodesia fully supported the request of their government for sovereign independence.

COUNTRY AGREE

Smith said in his broadcast that the British government had consistently refused to accede to Rhodesia's request for sovereign independence. The British government had thus demonstrated that it was not prepared to grant sovereign independence to Rhodesia on terms acceptable to the Rhodesian people, he declared.

Smith said that Rhodesians would still maintain unswerving loyalty to the British Crown and that today's move did not mean that the principles enshrined in the present constitution would be torn up.

He said provision had been made for members of Parliament, judges and civil servants and members of the armed forces to carry on their work.

Smith, his voice sometimes tremulous, said the Union Jack would continue to fly in Rhodesia and the national anthem God Save the Queen would continue to be played.

The premier added that he had promised Rhodesians that he would negotiate with the British government to the very end. "It now falls on me to tell you that negotiations have come to an end."

He said the British government had been playing the Rhodesian government along and added: "The end of the road has been reached."

NO REVENGE

Smith said his government would never take revenge on neighboring African states for sanctions imposed against Rhodesia.

But he warned that, if the Rhodesian economy contracted as a result of sanctions, Rhodesian Negroes would be given priority in jobs and that Negroes from other countries would suffer first. Thousands of Negroes from neighboring states work in Rhodesia, particularly in the mines.

Smith said: "I do not believe that any of the extreme consequences suggested both here and abroad will come to pass but I have that utmost confidence in our people to stand united in the face of any adversity."

In his broadcast, Smith said today's events mean "we have rejected the doctrinaire philosophy of appeasement and surrender."

It was a blow, he said, for justice, civilization and sovereignty.

TAKE SEVERAL STEPS

Among the steps the British government will take immediately as a result of Smith's declaration are these:

1. Britain will take the crisis to the UN Security Council, invoking article 35 of chapter 6 of the UN Charter. This lays down various procedures for the negotiated settlement of disputes that threaten the peace. A majority of the 117 UN members already have demanded that Britain use force against Smith's government.

2. Britain will cut off from Rhodesia all the benefits of Commonwealth membership. This will mean a suspension of imperial preferences which in the case of Rhodesia's big annual tobacco crop will mean a loss of about $32,000,000 a year. It also will end Rhodesian membership in the Commonwealth sugar agreement.

3. Britain will ban provisions of financial facilities to Rhodesia. This will end Rhodesian rights to borrow money on the London market and British banks will be ordered to refuse dealings in the Rhodesian pound. In effect, Rhodesia will be denied the advantages of belonging to the British-led sterling area. A freeze on Rhodesian assets in London may also be ordered and dividends and earnings of Rhodesian investors in Britain would be affected.

4. Britain may refuse to recognize the passports held by Rhodesian citizens. But Rhodesians who disagree with the independence declaration and still profess loyalty to the Queen will be given the option of remaining British subjects.

Excavate Watermain on Pinnacle Project

Water services were off in the Pinnacle Street-Victoria Avenue area of Belleville this morning after work crews cut into a main water supply pipe.

Public Utilities crews began excavating the trench to investigate the break after turning off water in the area, said utilities manager E. L. Burnham.

"We just hope we have the repair parts for it," he added.

"It's a matter of digging down to see what's broken."

The pipe is part of the main city supply system running from the municipal water tank on nearby Hillside street.

Scene of the break was the intersection of Victoria and Pinnacle — now the scene of feverish public works rebuilding activity.

The pipe apparently was nipped by a mechanical shovel digging a trench on the north side of Victoria.

The break was marked dramatically as the broken main threw a watergush in the air. Public works and utilities crews in picture above scurried to the spot, shut the water off and began pumping out the trench.

Gibbs Suspends

Earlier, the Southern Rhodesian Broadcasting Corporation, announcing the premier's broadcast, urged employers to make sure their workers could listen to Smith's message. But the subject was not revealed.

In proclaiming independence, Smith rejected last-minute appeals from both Wilson and Queen Elizabeth. Wilson had telephoned Smith at 8 a.m. today in a final attempt to dissuade him.

Smith's broadcast was monitored in London at 10 Downing Street while the British cabinet was in session considering the crisis.

Wilson's government immediately planned three moves, beginning with a statement by Wilson in the House of Commons this afternoon (noon a.m. EST).

As soon as Smith made his declaration, the British governor of Rhodesia, Sir Humphrey Gibbs, announced that on instructions from the Queen he had suspended Smith and all his ministers from office.

It was not immediately clear how the governor would implement the Queen's instructions, however. Wilson previously had ruled out the use of British troops to nullify a declaration of independence.

STANDS ON RECORD

Mayor Ellis said he was standing on his record of council accomplishments during the past two years.

"When elected two years ago I promised a number of projects would be brought to completion," said Mayor Ellis. "They have been."

"Of the many accomplishments of council in the past two years, I am most proud of the work of the Industrial Commission, overcoming a long log of lethargy and with a bold new approach I can confidently say that results will be seen in the near future."

"Much has been done and much is left to do," Mayor Ellis went on. "You may be sure that I shall run again and when re-elected will continue to give the same energy and devotion to the post."

STARTED IN SIDNEY

Mayor Ellis has been active in municipal life since 1957 when he commenced a two-year term on Sidney township council. He has served on city council continuously since 1959, the last two years as mayor, and over the years has been very active on all the city council boards and committees.

In 1962 he headed up the water pollution control committee, the work of which led up to construction of the new sewage plant.

Producers Only Favored for Marketing Bds.

The OFA's standing committee on Marketing took a strong stand in submitting its report to the annual convention of the Federation, that marketing boards should be producer boards. The committee rejected the popular suggestion that marketing boards operating under the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Act should be composed of representatives from other segments of society such as processors of farm products and consumers. The opinion was expressed that such a move would lead to the erosion and weakening of producer control.

However, the marketing committee endorsed the principle of establishing advisory committees composed of farm and trade representatives to assist marketing boards in their decisions. It was pointed out that most marketing plans now have such advisory committees and they are performing a very satisfactory and useful purpose.

The committee recommended that the operations of farm supply and marketing co-operatives be co - ordinated with the activities of commodity marketing groups to prevent a conflict of interest between the co - operatives and marketing boards.

The need for legislation to safeguard the farmers' interests in the event of labor-management disputes in the processing industry was stressed in the report. Reference was made to the recent strike at the H. J. Heinz Company's plant in Leamington. While farmers were in no way involved in this dispute, they came close to losing their whole year's work and being deprived of their income because of the disagreement.

Terms and conditions of membership in the Federation were suggested by the committee on membership and organization. The committee noted that up to the present time, no obligation had been required of any group seeking affiliation with the OFA and recommended that serious consideration be given to establishing a set of rules respecting affiliation.

Radio Station In Kingston Doubles Power

Kingston's radio station CKLC this week officially increased its power from 5000 to 10,000 watts, to become the city's most powerful station.

The increase in wattage was approved by the Board of Broadcast Governors early in the summer. Since that time, under the supervision of the station's chief engineer, W. W. Grant, technical work has been underway at CKLC's transmitter site on Wolfe Island to prepare for the expansion.

This is the second time CKLC has increased power since it first went on the air in the fall of 1953. In March, 1958, the station boosted its wattage from 1000 to 5000 watts.

Will Study Jews in United States

MONTREAL (CP) — The Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds will make a three-year study of Jews in the United States, at a cost of $650,000, council president Louis Stern of Newark, N.J., said today.

Mr. Stern said the study was necessary because Jews in the U.S. knew little about themselves.

He told the 1,000 Jewish leaders attending the five-day general assembly of the CJFWF that Canada's 262,000 Jews have their own census, whereas American Jews don't know their birth and death rates, the number they are gaining or losing through intermarriage, or exactly how many Jews there are in the U.S. The total is estimated to be 5,250,000.

He said the study will provide the first accurate facts on age patterns, geographic distribution, economic status, family size, the inter-marriage rate of Jews, education, occupations, synagogue affiliation and participation in organized Jewish communal group's and activities.

Saul Hayes, executive vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, said the Jewish population breakdown by areas in Canada is: Montreal 60.4 per cent; Toronto 34.8 per cent; Winnipeg 7.6 per cent and seven other cities accounting for another 10 per cent, so that 93 per cent of Canadian Jewry lives in no more than 10 communities.

Parking and City Growth

In a letter published on this page Tuesday, "A Citizen Shopper" referred to the city planning director's prospectus indicating swift growth in Belleville and across Canada.

In the next 20 years Canada's population will be almost double what it is today. And in Belleville, as in other centres, the tyranny of the automobile, big as the problem is today, is frightening to behold.

Specifically, the writer is concerned with parking problems in Belleville. He feels that parking, in the light of expected community growth, is a matter for a single body such as the Parking Authority.

"This (parking authority) was set up by by-law, I believe under Mayor Hyde, to bring order out of chaos. I think that the intervening six years have shown much progress, which indicates to me that a small interested group can do much better than a larger group which has many interests."

The writer was referring to a notice of motion that comes before City Council next Monday to dissolve the parking authority and hand its responsibilities over to Council.

Whether the responsibility will lie with Council or with the Authority, as it does now, the writer makes a valid case for dealing with the question of parking as a matter of urgency and in relation to the expected growth outlined by Planning Director P. J. Beavis in his address to Belleville Rotarians.

Parking is only one of many problems of growth which must be faced. They include housing and industry, recreation and education. And if education is the responsibility of a single board, answerable in some respects to City Council and the taxpayer, then parking is a matter which might be better left in the hands of a single authority.

As the writer pointed out, Council has other problems to face and would be unable to give undivided attention to this, one of the most urgent issues facing any community anxious to avoid the creeping strangulation that is slowly engulfing Canadian cities.

Nigerian Unrest

The New York Times reports in a copyright story from Lagos that mobs of angered Nigerians protesting the election results in Western Nigeria have been looting and killing without check.

More than 70 people are reported dead. Eleven were slain and 19 seriously wounded, including four policemen, in an exchange of gunfire at Isho last weekend.... Five others were killed in separate incidents in Ijebu province. Among the dead was Judge Hector Obanubi, whose decapitated body was found near his home.

The violence began four weeks ago after the ruling government party was returned to power in a regional parliamentary election. The Opposition Action Group was favored to win and militant elements of this party are said to be responsible for the current disorders.

This tale of unrest from what otherwise had been one of the most stable and progressive of the newly-independent African nations is one reason why white leaders like Ian Smith of Rhodesia are dead set against handing over administration of the country to the African majority. The violence follows the pattern of events in the Congo following Belgium's withdrawal some years ago. It could be expected in Rhodesia as well, following any precipitate abdication of responsibility by the white government there.

Vancouver's Lament

Out west, in Vancouver, it seems people have only a hazy idea of what life is like in Montreal or Quebec City, or indeed La Belle Province as a whole. What it is like, for example, to drive a car in Quebec.

Otherwise, how could the Vancouver Sun be so ill-advised as to describe Toronto drivers as "maniacs." Toronto drivers are as mild as kittens compared with some. Has The Sun writer never driven a car in Montreal or in rural Quebec? This is the ultimate experience in a driver's career, and to come through unscathed is to be fortunate indeed.

Be that as it may, The Sun reserves its most blistering attack for the home product. It quotes a Canadian Highway Safety Council's survey which show that Vancouver has "the worst traffic death record of any Canadian city."

A total of 8,054 accidents were recorded in the city up to mid-October and the fact seems indisputable, laments The Sun, "that we are the worst drivers in the whole country."

"Far worse than the drivers of Toronto even. And any traveller knows that Toronto drivers are maniacs."

Well well! While we may continue to risk 401 and those demon Torontonians we had better add Vancouver to our black-list, presently headed by Montreal.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
November 11th, 1945.

Capt. the Rev. J. W. Houston of the Tabernacle United Church, who has returned to his pastorate after years of service in the Canadian Army as a padre, brings home a high praise of the spirit of Canadian youth with whom he served. In action and in every other phase of military life he saw the young men who upheld the Empire's and Canada's cause. As a padre he had special opportunity to come to a full appreciation of the mental and moral makeup of these young Canadian soldiers. His report is one of high praise. Their unselfishness stands out clearly. He made particular reference to the men of the stretcher bearer corps and their devotion to their task and of soldierly comradeship.

These young men have come back and will be coming back to their former homes and cities, towns and villages and countryside and will be taking their share in the cause of Canada's future in the era of peace. There are no finer indications of what the future will be than in knowing these men who have served.

The city council has granted the sum of $200 to the Belleville Football Club to assist it in defraying expenses during this season.

Belleville's most impressive Remembrance Day ceremonies were conducted at the Cenotaph on Memorial Park this morning. Representatives of every separate branch of the various services and veterans in large numbers marched from the armouries, led by the Belleville Municipal Band and the Argyll Regimental Band, to the Cenotaph where an impressive service was conducted by the chaplain of the Argyll Regiment, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne of St. Thomas' Church, the Rev. Dr. J. Semple of Bridge Street United Church and the Rev. W. J. Wasker of St. Andrew's Church. A large number of wreaths were placed at the Cenotaph, the honor of placing the wreath of the Ontario Government was given to Mrs. J. W. Ross of Geddes Street, this city. There was a large crowd of citizens present at the service.

To Your Good Health
No Universal Remedy For Poor Complexions

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have several skin problems. The skin is very oily. I also have blackheads and bumps under the skin. They are more like small boils.

Should I take vitamins or something for my blood? I had boils when I was a teenager, but my skin got better in my 20's and I don't see why I should have this trouble now?

I know what foods I can eat and what I can't — fresh fruit of any kind, eggs, chocolate nuts, etc. Besides this I have brown spots on my face. Can you help me bleach them out without bleach cream which I cannot use?

I was my face twice a day with oatmeal soap, and put alcohol on it at night. I hope you can help me. — Mrs. W. J.

To such degree as I can, I try to offer help on skin problems; but most skin conditions have to be seen to be identified accurately.

The foregoing letter is fairly typical of quite a few that I get — and have to leave unanswered, because there is no universal remedy for complexion troubles, any more than there is any single medicine that "is good for anything that ails you."

I could make any number of suggestions to you, Mrs. W. J., but you would waste time and money trying them, and probably get little or no benefit. Why? Because without seeing you, I have no way of guessing what the real trouble is, and if I don't know the trouble I certainly can't guess at the right approach.

For one thing, what are those "bumps"? Are they acne? Does the oily skin contribute to them?

Do you have a chronic, low grade staph infection stemming from your teenage boils? Or are the "bumps" something entirely different?

Many people have learned to see their doctor when they detect suspicious symptoms. Yet some don't often do so when one particular organ is involved. The organ? The skin!

Oh, yes, the skin is an organ, the largest in the body. It not only covers a considerable area but weighs, all told, somewhere around 16 or a dozen pounds.

Yet folks are disinclined to get expert diagnosis, and instead fuss around with soaps, creams, lotions, and even "blood purifiers" which are a total waste of time.

Maybe it's our fault for not having emphasized this. After all, complexion troubles aren't often a severe peril to general health or life. Still a considerable variety of blemishes can be quickly identified by a skin specialist.

So instead of relying on the oatmeal soap, alcohol rinses and other home remedies, go to a dermatologist and find out (a) what your troubles really are; (b) whether any of the things you are doing can help, or whether they may even be harmful; and (c) what you can do that will improve the health of your skin.

Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter, now 17, had all three Sabin polio vaccine doses in a mass immunization in 1962. Does she need any boosters now. Doctors in our locality are not in agreement about this. — W. C. H.

She should have a fourth dose and preferably should have had it one year after the third. Then one booster every five years.

Note to H. G. B. From your description, I'd agree with your guess that it may be seborrheic dermatitis of the scalp, but in view of the location keeping in your scalp and your hair lotion clean may not really do any thing. Suppose (and this is possible) that your skin is sensitive to something (dye, or whatever) in the bathand? Why not go without a bath, or baths that don't have such bands, for a time and see if it helps. If so, you have a precious clue.

Building Flaws

Windsor Star

One would think, with all the modern designs and techniques, buildings could be built without major defects. It just isn't so. Many new edifices have faulty ventilation, are awkward in their layouts or have other disabilities.

Windsor's new city hall is an example. Its air conditioning system never has worked well and no one has been able to do anything about it. It will cost $287,000 to make it function as it should. That's a lot of money to pay for some body's mistake. Why, with all the modern architectural and engineering knowledge available, was it not done right in the first place?

Which Is Best—Carrot or the Stick?

Saskatoon Star-Phoenix

The use of marks in school grading systems is unfair to the child and can be harmful to his mental health, in the opinion of a Canadian authority, Dr. Charles G. Stogdill, sponsor of this view, is chief of child adjustment services for the Toronto Board of Education.

In this discussion, we find ourselves on the side of Dr. Stogdill, a former director of the mental division in the federal health department. He tells us that the destructive effect of marks for purposes of comparison is widely recognized by educators.

"Why then," he asks, "do they continue to use them and force competition? The teachers themselves are computing. Parents compare marks and class standings and passing from grade to grade."

It is reassuring to learn from Dr. Stogdill that the damaging effects of meaningless competition in marks "will soon no longer be tolerated." Instead, demand will grow for the employment of psychologists, social workers and psychiatrists in school systems.

Of course, something can be said for the traditionalists' views. While they subscribe to the theory of learning for its own sake, for the growth of the learner, and the inner satisfaction resulting, this presupposes a certain idealism. Such learning is based on the acceptance of the fact, or the presumption that every teacher is excellent, and has the power to motivate the child. At the present time, it is presumed that children themselves exude idealism as learners, as pursuers of learning for personal fulfilment.

The trouble is that such assumptions are not supported by past or present educational experience. Only in the first teacher called his first class, Johnnie has been there-as pursuer of knowledge.

Johnnie's descendants have been motivated since the first school began. The fear for him is not the danger to his mental health, but the neglect of his personal resources and capacities.

Then, too, there is the question of scholarship. To what extent is the competitive factor involved in this kind of drive? Co-operation does not displace competition because the co-operator is often times the competitor.

Critics of Dr. Stogdill's thesis must wonder at the dependence of his theories on child nature. If health in the school is so precariously balanced, then, perhaps, the more natural approach is to categorize the competitors in one group and the non-competitive children in another.

It seems to us there is more room for exploratory studies of the major problem in modern education. The carrot works for one child while the stick prods the other, with the question of the victim's health not in grave jeopardy.

Some teachers use marks tyrannically. They withhold marks (or they used to do so) in order to punish a pupil. How can this be avoided? Not easily, we suggest, unless near-perfect adults become teachers of the young.

The balloon, launched at Rapid City, S.D., carried a heavy load scientific equipment which recorded temperatures and took photographs. The flight, sponsored by the U.S. Army and the National Geographic Society, broke the previous record of 61,221 feet set two years earlier by two other American officers. The 1935 record remained unbroken for more than 20 years.

Ottawa Offbeat
Dief's Campaign by Rail Failed to Draw Crowds

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Now they're starting the post mortems and the first clinical finding is that there'll never be another campaign quite like it.

The top cast, of course, will change.

And with it, the campaign.

Not merely a change in its character.

But in the physical thing of conducting it, in the essential getting-about-the-country for that vital face-to-face confrontation with the taxpayers.

The biggest physical change will be in the transportation department.

This was the last campaign to be fought, at least by one of the Party Leaders, from the rear platform of a private railway car.

It never would have been a campaign-by-rail this time if it hadn't been for Conservative Leader Diefenbaker's nostalgia for the lonely wail of the iron horse high-wheeling it across the empty prairie of his early Western days.

He went by rail, this time, because when he zipped cross-country in a few of the campaign, he found too often that about all he was doing was flying with the breezes and the voters.

So this time, he decided to keep down to the railroad grade level of the grass roots and whistle-stop it. He hired Car 97 from the CNR, an executive coach, complete with all the comforts of home with some of the conveniences of a business office.

TIME MARCHES ON

Trouble was, he forgot it this wasn't the 1930's or 40's even the 50's, and that the railway station no longer is the centre of community life.

And when the railways have striven to keep pace with the changing world, the station can be a long way out.

Like at Saskatoon — and he should have known, for he'd passed through it a thousand times on his way to and from Prince Albert — where they've moved the station well out on the prairie, more than a mile farther from the city's centre than the airport.

So the station crowds — not only at the whistle stops but in and around the big centres — were disappointingly small.

People have simply got out of the habit of going down to the depot to watch so many of the trains that no longer run.

And when you have a habit and do go to the station, they often find it takes a bit of going, with the depot out on a perimeter line by-passing the town like a highway.

Oh sure, Car 97 is comfortable enough.

Dief swivelled back in an easy chair with two phones, one red, the other black, at his elbow for frequent calls to personal aides and party brain-trusters.

There was even a mobile phone — dial any number in Canada or abroad.

There were secretaries, files, typewriters, mimeograph machines, the business office works on a coupled-on staff car with eight compartments for the hired help.

GREAT IRON BIRD

And there was even a special diner for the campaign hands and the press.

Dief and his wife Olive, on "old 97," — newly re-modelled and redecorated with the latest in contemporary. Drapes of Scarlet prints, wood-panelled walls — had their own private bedroom and connecting bath and shower, a dining room with covers for eight and a lounge.

While it was comfortable and convenient, it just didn't work out — it didn't get Dief far enough and far enough to meet nearly enough people.

Whistle-stopping, it was reserved his lady-love out with Harry Truman in the presidential campaign of '48.

Those with Prime Minister Pearson found he wasn't much better in his CPA chartered DC6B know-how and it's the big flew in her as "The Great Iron Bird."

Things had to be hashed down — like the files and the typewriters at the odd times the lunch trays — even the beds take off for the ceiling when the train hit a sudden few hundred feet through a air pocket.

Even too, it wasn't all that convenient.

For to reach the washroom, the press had to run the gauntlet of the press section where everybody wanted to know the why's of it all — and the where's and the questions.

People have simply got out of the habit of going down to the depot to watch so many of the trains that no longer run.

And when you have a habit and do go to the station, they often find it takes a bit of going, with the depot out on a perimeter line by-passing the town like a highway.

Strictly Personal
Anxiety Complex Plagues Students

By Sydney J. Harris

Purely Personal Prejudices: Humanity's progress is so slow because the only real and permanent gains are made through a combination of intelligence and character, which is one of the rarest combinations in the species — and the difference are too often self-serving, while men of character are too often intellectually limited.

Language is shaped largely by the ruling caste of any given culture; when the church was dominant in the Middle Ages (or example the adjective applied to laymen was "lewd" and the word gradually came to have its present connotation of "dirty" or "obscene," although it originally meant only some one who was not in holy orders.

Less well-favored women may take comfort from the fact that beautiful women do not seem to be conspicuously successful in their love-life or marriage; the homely girl may not even be certain whether a man has chosen them to fulfill his deepest needs or merely to decorate his ego.

Competition to get into college is so keen these days that many youngsters begin fretting about it the moment they enter high school — and they almost necessarily make them better students, only more anxious ones.

We expect a philosophy to answer our questions, which is the real shortcoming of the "proper task was defined by Pegguy, when he said: "A great philosophy is not one that utters definitive judgments, that lays down some definitive truth; it is one that introduces restlessness, that stirs things up."

One of this columns earliest campaigns is finally beginning to win acceptance — next year, Yale University will ask its students to "grade" their instructors on the basis of their teaching ability, which every edifice should allow its students to do, speaking, as that college, "as most important research to be done in the social sciences is learning how to measure learning, for until we know more about the dynamics of human learning, how it is best transmitted and absorbed, most of our educational efforts operate in a vacuum.

The Russians are being hypocritical when they insist that a free society can not be coexistence between West and East, they may believe in physical coexistence, but not in ideological coexistence, where ideas can be freely circulated and debated — and without which there is no real freedom They oppose capitalist "monopoly of property," but they will not give up their "monopoly of ideas," which is even worse.

THE MOSQUE WITHIN THE OLD CITY AT KANO, NORTHERN NIGERIA

Nigerian Life Described by Teacher

NO. 1

Mr. Don Lockyer, a former principal of Prince of Wales School, is now teaching in Nigeria under the Canadian Government's External Aid scheme for assistance to Commonwealth countries. The following is the first of two articles sent to pupils of Prince of Wales School in the form of an open letter.

By DON LOCKYER

It is difficult to believe that this letter has travelled 7,000 miles to reach you. If I had sent it by sea, rather than by airmail, it would have taken three months to arrive in Belleville. Yes, Nigeria is a great distance from home, and all the familiar sights of Prince of Wales School, but for me and my family it is to be our home for the next two years. I'm writing to you because I thought that you would be interested to learn what it is like to live in northern Nigeria.

You will be able to find the city of Kano marked on the map of Nigeria in your atlas. We are living 30 miles north of Kano, near a small village called Bichi. If we were to continue a few miles further to the north we would find ourselves in the Sahara desert. Long caravans of camels are now beginning to pass through Bichi as the desert people head for Kano where they will exchange the dates and salt which are so obtained from the oasis, for the wide variety of manufactured goods which Kano has to offer.

SEMI-DESERT REGION

There are other interesting signs which would tell you that the desert is near. The earth is very coarse, and reddish brown in color. Very few plants are able to grow in this earth, which is called laterite, because it contains little food value and does not hold moisture. Trees are not plentiful, and the varieties which do survive, the locust bean, the neme, and the baobob, struggle especially hard in order to rise fifteen or twenty feet into the air. If you were living here you would be careful not to waste any water.

Two main tribes of Africans live in this part of Nigeria, the Hausa and Fulani. Most of the people are farmers and live far off in the bush, in small villages of mud and thatched houses. The villages are connected to the main roads by narrow footpaths. During the rainy months from June to September, crops of groundnuts, cotton, sugar cane, millet, and guinea corn are grown. Just as you had a special Thanksgiving day, these people also express thanks for their God for a bountiful harvest. They show their thankfulness in the form of tribal dances which seem to continue well into the night. Each night for the past few weeks, the local villagers have filled the darkness with the beating of drums and chants. They seem to be very happy with this years' harvest.

PEANUTS, MAIN CROP

The next time you have a peanut butter sandwich think of Kano and Northern Nigeria. This is the world's greatest growing area for groundnuts — peanuts to you. Right at this moment, the groundnut crop is being harvested all across the countryside. If you could travel with me, into the railway yards at Kano you would see thousands of sacks of groundnuts piled into the shape of a pyramid, waiting to be loaded on the freight cars which will carry them all the way down to Lagos, the capital of Nigeria, 700 miles to the south. From there, ocean vessels will carry the groundnuts to all parts of the world.

If only you could be my passenger as I drive from Bichi along the narrow, bumpy road into Kano. What wonderful sights you would see! Try to picture the scene as I describe it to you.

The roadway is lined with masses of black people who are walking to or from market, or are just sitting under the shade of a tree and passing the time in friendly conversation. The men are dressed in long white jumpers which hang loosely from the body; women wear brightly-colored wrap-around dresses and kerchiefs about their heads; children are either dressed like their parents, or go about completely naked. Upon the heads of all are loads of firewood, sugar cane, clay jugs, pots made from a vegetable called the calabash, or any item at all that needs to be carried. I have yet to see anyone carry an item in his hands.

ANIMALS CROWD ROADS

You would notice how carefully I must drive. Donkeys trudge along, so heavily loaded that their noses almost touch the ground. Scrawny looking goats and sheep browse across the highway as they are being led to market for slaughter. I'm especially careful to avoid the herds of Fulani cattle which are so numerous. Why they should share the road with me. What enormous horns they have! Can you imagine a four foot spread between the tip of the horns?

If you were the son or daughter of a Fulani farmer how different your life would be. You would go naked, or dress in goat skin, carry a long staff in your hand to drive the cattle, probably not have a permanent home but just a shelter or grass and sticks, and never see a school nor learn to read nor write. Your days would be spent wandering the hillsides in search of pasture for your cattle, and then, during the dry season, leading the herd down to the southern parts of the country, a distance of between 400 and 700 miles.

As we enter the city of Kano, you might think that you're entering a carnival, for everywhere you look, you can see merchants selling their wares, and your ears hear the sound of music and the shouts of people. What you are viewing is, in fact, one of the large Kano markets. Anything and everything is for sale, from three-speed bicycles to huge python skins.

SICKNESS PREVALENT

Your heart would be saddened by the sight of large numbers of blind and crippled, including many children, who seem to be found wherever there are large crowds. Leprosy is quite common. These persons, unable to earn a living, spend the entire day begging for food or pennies so that their stomachs might not go hungry.

A few days ago, I watched a small Nigerian boy, no more than six years of age, who was leading his blind mother along the street. He would speak to those who passed by, asking for pennies so that he and his mother might buy food. I thought to myself—"How many Canadian children would show such love for their parents?" This boy would never know what it is like to play and laugh as you do—nor would he ever have the chance to learn to read or write. For as long as his mother lived, he would be expected to care for her.

In spite of so much sickness, everyone wears a smile. Disease and death are not greatly feared by the Hausa and Fulani, because they have such a strong faith in the will of Allah, their God. How much we enjoy walking amongst these Africans, as they smile broadly, wave their hands in salute and yell, "Bature," meaning white man. We feel proud to be members of the same family—the Commonwealth. Wouldn't it be nice if, for your next celebration of Commonwealth day, you were to give special attention to Nigeria?

Attend School Twice Weekly To Solve Family Problems

Mother's Helper

CREATIVE ART can be encouraged in even a young child. The secret is to provide him with materials and give his imagination free rein. Instead of coloring books, give him plenty of blank drawing paper in interesting textures, and an assortment of crayons, drawing pencils, finger paints and colored markers. Only one medium at a time is best, however. Get him to explain to you what he's painted. (Thank you to Martha Weathers, Phoenix, Arizona)
© 1965 Publishers Newspaper Syndicate

TORONTO (CP) — Mothers and pre-schoolers living in a low-rent government housing project are attending school twice a week to learn from volunteers how to cope with their problems and improve their outlook on life.

Most are from families of five or six members and are trying to live on $65 or so a week. The volunteers are members of the National Council of Jewish Women. They are working with 25 mothers and 30 children in the second year of the council's Higher Horizons program.

Some are trained nursery or kindergarten teachers who show the three- and four-year-olds how to play games—some the ordinary nursery variety, others stressing healthy family living patterns. The youngsters are given direction and discipline which help council members casually, discovering companionship and the fact that women share many problems.

ATTEND SESSIONS

They have sessions on grooming and posture, trips to the art gallery and museum, cooking and budgeting classes and discussion groups.

Once a month the principal of a school is invited to talk with them, and many women learn for the first time that the school can be a friend.

Last year's experience indicated that husbands noticed an improvement in conditions at home and often became involved as well.

Some of the mothers who "graduated" last year are attending twice-monthly evening meetings. Most of the children are in kindergarten and doing well.

Council members are enthusiastic about the results and hope to see the program spread to other parts of the country. But it's expensive. The total cost to the Toronto council last year was $5,000, raised by the group's thrift shop. It was enough only to reach 35 families.

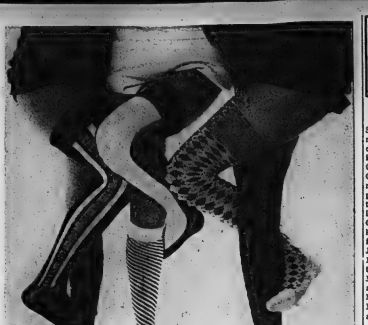
Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH PARISH GUILD



The regular meeting of Christ Church Parish Guild was held on Tuesday, ninth in the parish hall with a fine representation of members, President, Mrs. J. R. Cousins, welcomed the members and conducted the business portion of the meeting. Correspondence included letters from The Canadian Mental Health Association, reminding members of the need of Christmas gifts for women patients in the Ontario Hospital in Cobourg, and also letters from several absent members. A report from the rectory committee was read and its recommendations will be considered by the Guild in consultation with the church wardens.

Mrs. Earl Hickey and Mrs. A. Jordan will represent the Guild at the Parish Variety Night which is being sponsored by the Chi Rho. Mrs. M. Boyd reported a fine response for the cent-a-meal project. Members were reminded that there are still wall plaques available for Christmas giving. These attractive plaques, with a beautiful sketch of Christ Church, are the essential project of the Guild, and may be obtained by phoning 962-3500 or 962-3839.

The Guild will visit many shut-in members of the church at Christmas time. The December meeting will take the form of a pot-luck luncheon and Christmas party with each member bringing items which may be used in the church Christmas baskets. This meeting will be held on December 7th, one week earlier than the usual meeting date.

President, Mrs. Cousins, presented a thoughtful and inspiring Remembrance Day devotional which included an essay written by a grade 12 student and the prayer that "The price be not paid again, but if it must be, God will see us through."

An enjoyable and profitable auction sale was conducted by Mrs. A. Jordan, when everything, from dale towels and pies to necktaces and aprons was gagerly bid for by enthusiastic members. Tea hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. J. H. Bone, Mrs. R. M. and Mrs. F. A. Beaby.

NEW TWIST IN STOCKINGS—Patterned stockings come with the trend to shorter skirts. Checks, plaids and stripes all get a play. This year's designs are both bolder and more subtle, depending on taste. Stripes can be worn straight or twisted around the leg barber-pole fashion. (CP Photo)

Believed Legs Were Bare Until the Christian Era

By MARGARET NESS

Five hundred years ago, in 1565, a London apprentice produced knitted worsted stockings. Shortly afterwards a pair of knitted - in Italy silk stockings was presented to a delighted Queen Elizabeth.

It was fashion history and nothing as revolutionary occurred again until the 1920s, with the advent of rayon and full-fashioned hosiery.

The exact moment when man thought up the idea of leg-covering is not known. It's believed legs were bare until the Christian era. Some fashion historians say that mail—armor made of chain - work or rings — so chafed bare legs that fabric was inserted under the metal. Thus were stockings born. But in medieval times they were called hose and were a toe-to waist garment.

Oddly, until the 19th century hose was the sartorial preserve not of women, but of men—at least outwardly. Noblewomen did wear stockings although they didn't show under their floor-sweeping skirts. Marie Antoinette even bore bejewelled stockings that were never in view.

However, if men showed off their stockinged legs for centuries, women have tried to catch up in this century, especially in the skirt-hiking 1920s and now in 1965. In fact, so high are some of this season's skirts that fashion has returned to the medieval hose-like single garment from toe to waist.

UP TO NECK

The popular jumpsuit has even extended the hose to the neckline. Designers such as Rudy Gernreich now use jumpsuits as part of a brief dress costume for the younger set.

In early times it wasn't long before leg protection gave way to emphasis on appearance. Fabric was sewn up into a sort of stocking. Wealthy nobles used velvet embroidered leggings, followed by flesh-color. Women, even if their stockings didn't show, liked grey with inserts of scarlet, green or orange.

This decorative device has reappeared over the years and, with floral designs, was a spring feature this year. This fall Hanes points up the ankle with marigold and scroll motifs in dacron velvet appliques on ultra-sheer black nylon stockings.

Men took to long trousers at the beginning of the 19th century and the stockinged male leg wasn't seen again until the 1920s brought golf knickers.

Color has always been popular. An 1879 illustrated fashion guide shows a woman's leg in gay tartan hose. Price, in wool, was 50 cents, silk, $2. This autumn there's a return to the plaids for casual stockings and Argyles are popular. From the 1920s, however, the nude look in stockings was dominant and it was only in 1959 that tinted hose returned, this time in pastel shades.

Heavy silk or lisle were the only fabrics in general use until this century. In the early 1900s silk was combined with cotton tops but it was nine times heavier than today's sheer silks. With the introduction of rayon and later nylon, stockings caught up with the 20th century.

Other top collectors were Mary Lynn Morey from Mrs. L. Carter's class in Johnstown, Randy Blakely from Miss L. Gray's class in Johnstown, Bambi Lyn Orr from Mrs. M. Sine's class in Glen Miller and Mary Lou Morgison from Mrs. K. King's class in Glen Miller. A small prize will be awarded.

Cub sand Scouts were discussed, it was decided to help promote the bottle drive by sending home a notice with the children from school.

Dr. R. E. Leavitt of Trenton, from the St. John Ambulance Association, gave a demonstration and talk on the most favored method of artificial respiration, the method known as mouth to mouth resuscitation. He explained the need for quick action in case of drowning, electric shock, asphyxiation, lack of oxygen in the blood can cause irreparable damage to the brain. Dr. R. E. Leavitt made use of a specially constructed dummy to demonstrate exactly the position the head must be in. If the person does not have the patient in the correct position the lungs will fill up. It was noted that with children, especially babies one must use only a short puff of air so as not to damage the lungs. For anyone interested in a course in First Aid the St. John Ambulance holds classes in Trenton.

Dr. Leavitt mentioned that the history of the St. John organization dates back to 600 A.D.

Coffee and refreshments were served by Mrs. L. Johnston.

BRAISED RIBS WITH DUMPLINGS

My thanks go to June A. for sparking a wonderful dinner for three hungry people. She said "I have noticed at the meat counter that Braised Ribs are quite low in price. Have you any recipes using them?"

Dinner Menus
by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Broiled Lamb Patties; Mint Jelly; Fresh Frozen Green Peas; Buttered Noodles; Shredded Lettuce with Roquefort Dressing; Canned Peaches; Banana Bread (see Wed.); Coffee.

SUNDAY

Braised Short Ribs of Beef with Dumplings (see Tues.); Buttered Carrots; Endive, Cucumber and Parsley Salad with Sour Cream Dressing; Boston Cream Pie (see Fri.); Tea.

Because I had three to feed I bought slightly under 2 lbs. braising ribs which were only 39c per lb. This was a good buy for no fat was added or taken away in the cooking process and the rib bones which I salvaged after dinner weighed only 2 oz. Choose your package of braising ribs carefully - selecting one with lean meat and thin bones.

For 6 o'clock dinner I started braising my short ribs at 3 p.m. Brussels sprouts.

BRAISED SHORT RIBS OF BEEF WITH DUMPLINGS
(Serves 2 — double these amounts to serve 4)

NOTES: (1) This method may be used for same weight in oxtails. (2) After browning and after tomato juice is added, this may be tipped into a covered baking dish and baked for 2½ hours at 325 deg. Fahr.

2 lbs. braising short ribs of beef; 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 2 tablespoons flour; 2 medium cooking onions; 1 20-oz. can tomato juice; 1½ teaspoons sugar; 1 chicken bouillon cube.

DUMPLING INGREDIENTS

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour; 2½ teaspoons single-acting baking powder; ½ teaspoon salt; ½ cup milk.

Either ask your butcher to saw your short rib pieces through the bone into serving-size pieces or when you have them at home cut each short rib piece crosswise through fat layer, into serving pieces, leaving bone in only one-half of each piece.

Do not add fat but place rib pieces, fat side down, in heavy frying pan, add salt and pepper and brown well on all sides — about 10 min. Sprinkle with flour, turn meat over and continue sauteing for 2 or 3 minutes longer. Add tomato juice and sugar and bouillon cube, cover and simmer slip from it until meat is tender enough to nearly fall from bones.

Dumplings: Sift together flour, baking powder and salt, stirring in milk to blend. (NOTE: There is no fat needed in these dumplings). Dip spoon in hot meat liquid, then dumplings will easily slip from it onto top of stew. Cover and cook gently 10 to 12 minutes without peeking.

This makes a wonderful wintertime dinner served with Brussels sprouts.

Successful Living
Wedding Etiquette Confuses Bride-to-be

DEAR DORIS: I need some outside advice or support from someone who has knowledge of my problem.

I purchased a "Canadian Bride" book which states that it is proper Canadian etiquette to address the outer wedding invitation envelope to the wife only — eg: Mrs. Wm. Smith. The inner envelope is addressed to both, such as Mr. and Mrs. Smith. This is contrary to the American custom which addresses the outer envelope to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Smith and leaves the inner envelope blank.

DORIS CLARK

Since I mailed my invitations a week ago I have heard many times over that this was in bad taste and just not the proper thing to do. I still haven't talked to anyone who agrees with me, book or not.

As I am a Canadian, marrying a Canadian, in Canada, I would think it altogether proper to use Canadian customs. — MRS. TO BE .

DEAR MRS. TO BE: And so it is. Either procedure is acceptable in Canada.

Many Canadian brides like to address a letter to a single individual. Then names of those included appear on the inside cover, be they simply "Mr. and Mrs. Good Guest" or "Mr. and Mrs. G. Guest, James, Joan, Jack and Jill."

What you did was in good taste. Show your friends this column.

DEAR DORIS: My mother has recently remarried after my father has died. The man she has married is 31 and she is 35. He has made up a list of rules for me and has even inserted it to spank me.

I am 15 years old. Most of the rules are childish, eg: I have to be in bed at nine o'clock, and I am not allowed to date boys, which mother let me before she remarried.

I have tried my hardest to stay inside all those rules but I don't think I will be able to for very long. — FRUSTRATED.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Fact is, you miss your Dad. Your mother's new husband didn't raise you from a baby, and hasn't learned yet what fathers are for. He doubtless knows, vaguely, that you haven't accepted him and wants to insist on his authority.

Have you given him a chance to be loving? Think about this, and when you next get your mother alone, ask her what I mean. Point out that you miss the friendly freedom you had before. She should be helping you — and him — to bridge this gap.

DEAR DORIS: I am 18 years old and as much in love as any girl could be with a guy 20. He is in the navy and has been gone for nine months. When he returned he asked me to go steady again; I did.

A few nights ago he said he wanted to hold on to me and the only way he could do that was to send me an engagement ring. He asked me if I'd wear it; I said yes. Do you think he means it?

Then he said we were getting married next year when he comes back. I've been going with him for almost five years off and on. I think he really loves me but sometimes I'm not sure. Do you think he does or is he just pulling my leg? He comes to pick me up as soon as I get off work and we are always together. — LOVESICK.

DEAR LOVESICK: What has kept him coming back to you over five years? Would he invest in an expensive ring just to pull your leg? These are hardly signs of a practical joker.

Ask your mother what she thinks. She has seen him; I haven't.

What Women Are Doing

St. Joseph's C.W.L.

Mrs. D. V. Duminie, President

The Catholic Women's League is a national organization of Canadian Catholic Women numbering over 153,000. Its motto, "For God and Canada," describes the purpose of the League.

The president of St. Joseph's C.W.L. is Mrs. D. V. Duminie.

On the local level each parish council has a number of convenership portfolios pertinent to the community including social action, education, Girl Guides and spiritual needs. Besides projects of a parochial nature the C.W.L. undertakes in conjunction with other organizations many community projects for the benefit of the spiritual or temporal welfare of all people.

The League stimulates interest to education and helps many students with scholarships and bursaries at the university level.

In Ontario the latest Provincial endeavour has been the adoption program of 1964, which is being extended through the current year. Homes for over 300 children have been found as a result of this appeal. The centennial project of the National Organization is a donation of $100,000 to the Vanier Institute of Family Life Conference.

The C.W.L. is part of a world-wide movement under the banner of World Union of Catholic Women's organizations representing 65 countries. There are three separate councils in Belleville, St. Joseph's, St. Michael's and Holy Rosary. Each group holds monthly meetings with a regional meeting held each fall and a Diocesan convention in the spring. The Provincial and National conventions are held each year in different centres.

In cities where there is more than one C.W.L., council activities of a community nature are co-ordinated under one convenership known as Civic Action. Volunteer welfare work is one of the main functions of this group and the Belleville Civic Action is a member of the United Appeal. During 1964 there were 71 families given supplementary assistance and a bursary was awarded to a graduate at Nicholson College.

This is the 33rd in a series about women's organizations in Belleville and their activities.

Many Problems For Nurse in Malayan Jungle

VICTORIA (CP)—The case of the pregnant woman was just one of the problems Diana Symons of Victoria encountered during her two years as a nurse in the Malayan jungle.

She was stationed there with Medico, the International, non-profit medical aid organization.

Diana was at the hospital at Gombak, a centre caring for the aborigine people of the area, when she flew by helicopter to a village where there was an obstetrical case.

At the scene she decided the patient's condition was so serious it could not be handled at Gombak and the woman would have to be taken to the general hospital at Kuala Lumpur. She persuaded the helicopter pilot to fly direct to Kuala Lumpur where he landed in the garden in front of the hospital maternity building.

"Then I began to feel a bit of a fool. I thought 'supposing I've misjudged this case?' But it was a real emergency. They saved the baby and the mother, which we couldn't have done at Gombak."

ENJOYED WORK

Diana enjoyed her work at Gombak and at a village hospital at Kuala Lipis, even though it was strenuous. There were only two nursing shifts a day, one on the morning and one being on call throughout the night.

Some native practices shocked the Western nurses.

They rub everything into their skin. Dung is a very popular thing. We were just applauded but it does stop the bleeding.

Diana, who now is matron at Queen Margaret's school in Duncan, B.C. said education was helping to overcome some native superstitions in Malaya.

"Many know about germs carrying disease, but they don't understand it. It's awfully hard to explain unseen germs. They still think of disease in terms of evil spirits."

W. M. S. Rally Held in Foxboro

IVANHOE — The annual sectional rally of Kingston Presbyterial of the Women's Missionary Society was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Foxboro on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. John Wallace, president of Kingston Presbyterial of W.M.S. presided. Mrs. E. Lyons, Foxboro extended a welcome to the 40 women present. The theme of the rally was "To Serve the Present Age."

A worship service was conducted by Mrs. Bert Cook, assisted by Mrs. Donald Forgey, Stirling.

Mrs. Sam Cross of Roslin, introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Mae Manthorpe, wife of Mrs. Manthorpe, who attended the Presbyterian W.M.S. training school here. Cobalt College, Belleville in July gave a report of the program. Mrs. Manthorpe is convinced that the W.M.S. has worthy leaders of a worthy cause and urged a greater number of W.M.S. and Auxiliary leaders to attend the summer training centre. The time is well spent in fellowship and Bible study and prayer.

A solo was sung by Mrs. William Donnan, West Huntingdon, accompanied by a dialogue, "Packing the Bale" given by West Huntingdon W.M.S. Mrs. Harold Thompson gave the report of the courtesy committee The offering was presented by Mrs. Harry Stout and Mrs. John Hailstone and dedicated by Mrs. John Bailey, Madoc.

A short business session was held. The minutes of the last rally were read by B. M. Fleming, secretary. An invitation to hold the 1966 Rally in Madoc was extended by Mrs. John Bailey, Madoc.

Appropriate hymns were sung during the program.

Mrs. Nellie Skinner presided at the organ throughout the service. Lunch was served by the Foxboro members.

TO PICK BEAUTY

TORONTO (CP)—Miss Canada 1966 will be chosen Sunday from among 24 beautiful girls across the country. The winner of the pageant will receive a $1,000 scholarship, $5,000 in cash, more than $15,000 in merchandise and a year's work as a Canadian good will ambassador. The Miss Canada pageant is not connected with the Miss Dominion of Canada contest held annually at Niagara Falls.

Many Attend St. Joseph's CWL Tea

In a colorful setting of autumn blooms and rustic leaves St. Joseph's Catholic Women's League held a most successful tea and bazaar in the Parish Hall, Herchimer Avenue, Wednesday afternoon. Monsignor J. A. Carley, parish priest was present and officially opened the event which was charmingly convened by Mrs. J. A. Ellard assisted by co-convener Mrs. B. P. Beirne, who along with League president Mrs. D. V. Duminie warmly greeted the many guests at the door. Treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. J. J. Marta.

The autumn color scheme of brown, yellow and green was carried out throughout the hall with two large baskets of colorful fall blooms, the piano and each of the windows highlighted with sprays of rustic leaves and multi-colored streamers The attractive decor was in charge of Mrs. H. Clarke.

Separating the tea room from the hive of activity at the sales tables was a single row of chairs and inside was the attractive tea table covered with white lace and centred with an artistic floral centrepiece and flanked with bittersweet candelabra holding brown, orange and green spiral candles. Equally attractive were the sales tables covered with white luncheon cloth and centred with a Yule motif centrepiece with a miniature candle rising from a tiny wreath of holly interspersed with poinsettia.

TEA POURERS

The tea room convener was Mrs. H. Carr-Brain who was assisted by other members of the League while a number of others assisted in the serving and replenishing. Pouring tea were Mesdames Wills and Bowes, Belleville and Mesdames Hall, Bonisteel, Sir Columbo; Mrs. J. Dobson, St. Margaret's; Mrs. J. A. Glover, Queensmiter; Mrs. R. Slater, Lutheran Holy Trinity Church and Mrs. J. Hanley, St. Joseph's.

The various sales tables did a rousing business with an array of tempting wares and the homebaking table being sold rapidly by convener Mrs. F. Maund assisted by Mrs. H. Meagher, Mrs. A. Grey and Mrs. J. F. Letersky. A draw on a Yule log cake made by Mrs. Maund was won by Miss Margaret Durkin. Another table for those with a sweet tooth was the candy table where maple creams, chocolate fudge and a fine assortment of other sweets along with a variety of preserves, jams and jellies were sold. These were in charge of Mrs. B. Bankey.

One was made aware of the fact approaching festive season upon approaching the Christmas table with its splendid display of table centrepieces, Christmas wreaths of plastic and other novelties. In particular with a display of golden bells cleverly made with the basic commodity being a small magazine with the pages sprayed with gold. There were also many other varied and inventive items in charge of the convener, Mrs. J. Aston assisted by Mrs. H. Clarke and Mrs. A. Dustin.

The knitting booth convened by Mrs. G. Filon assisted by Mrs. L. J. Briand and Mrs. O. Donald drew many patrons who upon a touch of frost in the air, were anxious to stock up on warm mittens, socks and toques and a number of other knitted items. The sewing table was equally busy with its splendid assortment of articles convened by Mrs. J. Belanger, assisted by Mrs. G. Murphy and Mrs. H. Fitzgerald. A draw on an Irish linen bridge set was won by Mrs. Leeman.

MANY APRONS

There was an excellent supply of aprons in all sizes, shapes and colors, all so appropriate for Christmas gift giving and these were readily sold by Mrs. B. Beebler and Mrs. M. Barlow. The table of novelties and novelties was convened by Mrs. Panting and the flair pond for the children by Mrs. G. Cunningham; also candy for the children was looked after by Mrs. J. McCabe.

This year there were two innovations which proved most successful. Mrs. A. F. McCarthy was in charge of a "Penny Draw" which drew a large number of patrons. For a small sum, a total of 25 tickets could be purchased and those in turn were deposited in the cups opposite items of one's choice but a table where there were numerous donated prizes. Draws for these were made during the afternoon. Mrs. I. Groves was responsible for a previous "waistline" project which proved a real financial success.

A draw on a sweater was won by Mrs. Tom Barrett and for the arrangement of flowers, Mrs. George Bell. Door prize was ticket number 048035.

Jewish Bazaar Is Year-Round Affair

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London's annual Hadassah bazaar has just closed its doors but in four months donations will start trickling in for the next one.

It takes eight months to collect, sort, price, mark and pack the 30,000 to 60,000 items sold at each bazaar.

Usually they start to arrive in March, says Mrs. H. E. Rosedall, who is in charge of eight basement rooms which she uses as a warehouse for the donations.

The bazaar, started five years ago, attracts about 10,000 people every year. Mrs. Rosedall has been in charge of the warehouse all along except for 1963, when she was bazaar general chairman.

She says by the end of summer and early fall as merchandise comes in faster she has to open the warehouse daily and work with her volunteer helpers from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

All kinds of merchandise are donated.

"Anything you find in the home we've got. Sometimes we don't even know what the article is."

Everything is evaluated and priced on the basis of a standard price list.

Two days before the bazaar Hadassah members, husbands and children get together and move everything from the warehouse to the Progress Building at the Western fairgrounds where the bazaar is held.

Parliament Approves Marriage

THE HAGUE (AP) — The lower House of the Dutch Parliament Wednesday gave overwhelming approval to the union of Crown Princess Beatrix to marry West German commoner Claus von Amsberg.

It also voted — but by a smaller margin—to give the former German soldier Dutch citizenship

This was the first time in the history of The Netherlands monarchy of modern times that Parliament debated and voted on a royal wedding.

An unprecedented controversy arose over von Amsberg's German past.

Those who voted against the plan said the Dutch hold anything against von Amsberg because he was a German, but a royal position in the country that had suffered the terrorism of the Nazis during the Second World War.

The bills now go to the Senate where approval is assured, Princess Juliana then will sign the bills into law.

The wedding will take place next March in Amsterdam.

Church Groups

ST. MICHAEL'S C.W.L.

The November meeting of the Catholic Women's League of St. Michael's parish took place in the Junior School, on Monday evening.

After the meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. G. F. O'Brien, and the opening prayer said by the director, Monsignor Sullivan, various reports were read and discussed.

Mrs. R. Rouse reported on the success of the rummage sale held recently and in future, articles be brought in earlier.

In answer to an appeal, a cheque for $20 will be sent to the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Mass was celebrated at Hastings Manor for the first time, on All Saints' Day. Several members of the C.W.L. visited residents at the manor, recently.

Mrs. G. F. O'Brien reminded members of the bazaar in St. Joseph's parish, also one at Bonarlaw Street United Church in the near future.

The next meeting, which will be held in January will take the form of a dessert meeting, with an exchange of gifts and an effort will be made to have an interesting program.

In a taped address by she first lady, it was suggested that all of Catholic Women, mention was made of the apathy among people. "The society in which we live," said the speaker, "has tremendous possibilities but we must use our talents to impart Christ to others."

In the discussion, which followed, it was suggested that reading, study clubs, and taking part in community affairs were the best means of preparing to do this.

After the closing prayer, a social cup of tea was enjoyed.

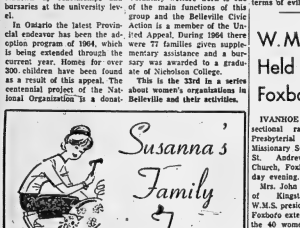
Harris — Miller

MR. AND MRS. AUBREY JOHN HARRIS



St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church, Belleville, was the setting for a lovely fall wedding on Saturday, November 6, 1965, when Andrea Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton W. Miller was united in marriage to Aubrey John Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Harris, Colpoy's Bay. Rev. J. Arnold Dunlop officiated at the ceremony. Mr. Scott Bradford, the organist, accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Rogers Riedel in two selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length sheath gown of antique white French radzimir satin with fitted bodice and a fringe of crystal beading forming a low neckline. The long sleeves came to a point over her hands, and her Cathedral train flowed from the waist. Her fingertip veil of French silk illusion was held in place by sprays of orange blossoms and lily of the valley. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias, yellow Sunbeam roses, yellow Sweetheart, stephanotis and German ivy.

The maid of honor, Miss Nancy Miller, sister of the bride, the bridesmaids, Misses Sharon and Gayle Holden of Ottawa, and the junior brides maid, Miss Marian Wishart, of Belleville, wore floor length gowns of autumn leaf gold peau de soie, styled with Sabrina neckline and angel sleeves The Empire waistline was accented by a fringe of gold beading and they wore matching gloves, headdresses and shoes. They carried sheaths of glittered commercial white 'mums on golden huckleberry.

The flower girls, Miss Sandra Livock, Belleville, and Miss Dawn Leslie Garland, Port Hope, were dressed alike in floor length gowns of white peau de soie. The Empire waistline was accented with a sash and bow of autumn leaf peau de soie. They wore matching braided coronets and carried gold baskets of white and gold pompoms.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. James Harris, Cobourg, and the ushers

GOURMET KITCHEN SHOPPER

Dear Susanna: Thank you very much for sending me the booklets on dragées, flowers and weeds. In return I would be happy to share with your readers some ideas for entertaining the bride-to-be:

One unique party given for me was a grocery shower. The gifts ranged from fancy printed tea towels and decorative spice vegetable baskets to unusual utensils such as a butter curler and lemon rind peeler. There was hardly a single item that one could consider a necessity so I was doubly delighted to receive it. Otherwise, it would probably be years before newly-married's like us would go out and purchase them.

Another most enjoyable shower was a mixed couples dinner. The gifts were for the groom as well as the bride and we were given a great variety of truly useful articles. The choice was wide open and included a hammer and other tools, garbage pails, Christmas tree decorations and bath towels.

Wherever it can possibly be achieved, I feel that the best introduction of any type of shower is that wonderful element of surprise. — Patti Grand

TIGHT TOP

Dear Susanna: For the first time in my life I came across a jar I couldn't open by my standard method. No matter how stubborn metal lids are to remove (unless of course they are rusted and rusty) I have always been able to get them off by cracking gently but sharply a number of times with the handle of a knife and then soaking the tops well in hot water . . . but I guess this container now was just too, too vacuum-packed.

Since I'm stubborn too, I finally won by puncturing a small hole in the lid. This must have released the suction because it gave up meekly after that. Try it some time for a lid that just won't come off. — Benny

Ann Landers

Transvestite Needs Professional Help

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several weeks ago my boy friend, Dale, asked me if he could dress up in my clothes just for the fun of it. I thought he was joking, but when he showed me the wig he had bought for himself I knew he was serious.

ANN LANDERS

When Dale dressed up and put on make-up he looked like a very pretty girl. I couldn't get over it. He said it would be a great gag to take a walk and see if any fellows made passes at us. I was so curious to find out if he could get away with it that I agreed.

I know this sounds crazy, Ann, but Dale got more whistles than I did — and he loved it.

Dale is not a homosexual. I know for sure that his sex drives are normal. He just likes to dress up like a girl for kicks. I'd like to marry Dale but this gimmick bothers me. Should I? — STYMIED.

DEAR STY: Dale is a transvestite. This does not mean he's homosexual but it is a deviation, nonetheless.

If you want to marry a man who enjoys wearing your clothes and getting passes from men, go ahead. But please urge him to get professional help right away.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several weeks ago I gave birth to a premature child. She lived three days. My husband and I were heartbroken.

Almost every day since I came home from the hospital with empty arms I have received a gift (which is really a sales pitch) or a telephone call offering a free sample or free services for the new baby. Each letter and phone call brings added sorrow.

Birth and death are both a matter of public record. Why don't these companies check before sending a gift or making a telephone call inquiring about photographs or books for a child who didn't live?

Please publish this. It could do a world of good. — MRS. C.

DEAR MRS. C.: I'm with you. The outfits that make all those calls to get new customers should be able to make a few more phone calls to the hospitals and determine whether the baby lived to go home.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Thanks a lot for taking our side against "Old Creepy Bones who knocked the rock. Sure, our music is different from the music our parents danced to, but almost everything else has changed so why should anyone expect the music and dances to be the same?

My brother and I had a long discussion with our parents about this. They are old, like you — between 45 and 50. We asked what songs they used to sing and dance to. Here are some titles — and I don't know of any today that are as goofy:

"I Scream, You Scream, We All Scream for Ice Cream";
"The Music Goes Round and Round and It Comes Out Here";
"My Knock-Kneed, Consumptive Mary Jane";
"Do Wacka Do Wacka Do";
"It Must be Jelly 'Cause Jam Don't Shake Like That."

The current hits, "Mrs. Brown You Have a Lovely Daughter" and "I Wanna Hold Your Hands" make some sense, at least. Be a pal again and print this. — NORMAL TEEN.

* * *

DEAR NORMAL: O.K. I'm a pal. (Yeah Yeah Yeah). But now the parents will be mad. Help!

* * *

When rocking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mother, Placing Wreath, Thinks of 3 Lost Sons

By ANN RUEBOTTOM

OTTAWA (CP)—A tiny-grey haired widow walked up to the National War Memorial shortly after 11 a.m. today and placed a wreath bearing the words "motherhood representative."

But 75-year-old Mrs. Nora Wagner of Teeterville, Ont., didn't think of herself during the national Remembrance Day ceremony.

Like the other bereaved mothers she represents, Mrs. Wagner thought of the sons she lost in the Second World War.

Two boys, Ivan, 28, and Harry, 20, were killed in 1944 in Europe while serving with the Royal Regiment. The youngest Wagner boy, Bruce, a member of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, was killed in 1945.

Another son John with whom Mrs. Wagner now lives was unable to serve in the armed forces for medical reasons.

Mrs. Wagner, wearing the three Silver Crosses she received when her sons died, visited the Memorial Chamber of the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill Wednesday.

She said she feels she is "doing something for the boys" by taking part in today's ceremony.

Mrs. Wagner and her daughter, Mary, were shown the names of her sons written in gold in the Book of Remembrance.

She and her daughter were to be guests of the chiefs of staff at luncheon today, and have tea with Governor-General and Mme. Vanier before returning home.

The petite woman is still active, baking and sewing as a volunteer in some Simcoe County institutions.

What worries Mrs. Wagner on her first visit to the capital is that her suitcase got lost on the train and she has nothing black to wear for the ceremony.

But she is a fitting representative of the mothers of sons killed in action. She said the thing that sustained her most when she lost three boys within a year was the thought that there were many other mothers like her.

WEAR DYED NUN'S HAIR

MONTREAL (CP)—The false eyelashes fluttering these days at "in" resorts may once have belonged to a nun in a secluded European convent. Visiting beauty expert Gerard de la Baudiniere said the nuns are shedding their hair to help raise money for churches.

Dick Shatto Tips Women On Watching Grey Cup

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP)—If you don't kno anything about football, you can't ask questions before and after a game because you don't know what to ask. If you ask questions during a game you won't get much of an answer, especially during the annual Grey Cup watching party when everyone but you seems to be an expert.

Toronto Argonaut veteran Dick Shatto says you can watch the game with some notion of what's happening and why if you keep a few key ideas in mind.

Shatto retired after the final Argonaut game this season. He had played with them for 12 years and set a Canadian Football League record for scoring, with 91 touchdowns during his career. He has already started a new career as salesman with Toronto radio station CFRB.

WATCH PLAYERS

Shatto says the first thing to remember when you are watching a game is to watch the players, not the football.

"The quarterback is the major person to watch. All the action centres on him. He throws passes, runs, calls the plays.

"Each team has probably 12 basic plays, but a number of variations on each one, so you could end up with a couple of hundred possibilities.

"The offensive play is called by the quarterback who tells the seven linemen what to do, depending on whether it will be a pass or running play.

"There is a different type of blocking used for a pass than for running."

The linemen, reading from centre out are: centre, guard, tackle and end. The quarterback is the player who takes the ball from the centre.

When play is about to start, the linemen will take a three-point stance, feet firmly planted, one hand on the ground. If the quarterback is going to pass, they will back off and stand up, in the classic football pose, elbows out and hands at their shoulders to block for the passer.

GUARDS LEAD CARRIER

"On running plays the linemen would charge, straight ahead or to the side, depending on the play called, but their movement is forward.

"In 95 per cent of the cases you can tell which way a running play will go by watching the guards—the men next to the centre. They will lead the ball carrier."

If you lose track of who is carrying the ball momentarily, that's fine. You're supposed to if the team is working well.

"The deception is one of the important parts of football. The way the backfield keeps the ball hidden will determine the success of some plays."

Shatto says except for a few obvious situations, the pattern of defensive play is too complicated to describe briefly.

"If the other team has a second down and long yardage to go, you expect a pass. If it's second and one yard to go, you'll bunch your defence in the centre to stop them getting one yard.

"There is a defensive quarterback, which not everyone knows. He is usually a line backer, the fellow that's not directly on the line, but immediately behind it.

"Defensive football is mostly a guessing game. He keeps track of downs, yards, time, position on the field. These will decide what defensive play he's going to call.

"All 12 men have a particular job to do, a certain area to cover in a certain position. If they make a mistake or are blocked out, it will cost their team dearly."

Shatto says football is a more complicated game than many fans know. Success depends on background preparation which includes knowing the opposing team and the capabilities and weaknesses of individual players.

He says knowing something about a team or a player can help a spectator as well by making the game more interesting and making it mean more.

Questions Bound to Arise From Power Grid Failure

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The searching questions about a national power grid encompassing Canadian links into a continental system seem bound to arise from Tuesday's great blackout.

Both pros and cons exist.

Planning for expanded power connections has been proceeding in each country. Preliminary studies have looked about the continental approach have been desultory, perhaps because Canada's appraisal of its water resources which is an integral phase of any such study.

At its simplest, a power grid enables connected electrical systems to help each other out—ideally, mutually or in emergencies such as the vast failure Tuesday evening which directly touched more than 30,000,000 people in Ontario and adjacent northern states.

Just why the failure occurred will shed light on the inability of the whole electrical complex to bear up. That it did not—and the fact that the electrical "backfire" actually spread because of the grid rather than in spite of it—indicate technological shortcomings somewhere that must be solved.

ANTI-GRID CASE

What happened could be used as an argument against extensive grids, leaving connections loose enough to enable single systems such as Ontario Hydro to cut out in time to prevent being dragged into massive failures.

It also raises the question of the effectiveness of a grid under attack by nuclear or other military means.

Canada has the primitive makings now of a power grid but province - to - province connections would have to be increased. They are strongest now between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and Ontario and Quebec.

Canada-U.S. links are extensive, depending on region, as indicated by Ontario's problems Tuesday night in a power failure apparently in the U.S.

British Columbia is tied into the Pacific Northwest and will be more firmly linked on completion of the high voltage power line designed to tap the Columbia River developments.

Manitoba is associated with a U.S. midwest group and maritime connections would be expanded by the proposed $227,000 dam on the St. John River in northern Maine.

Last Dec. 13, the Federal Power Commission here issued a comprehensive report called Guidelines for Growth of the Electric Power Industry. It urged greater co - ordination among the 3,600 separate American systems large and small—with the giants all in private hands.

FOR CLOSER CANADA TIES

It also urged closer ties with Canada, citing existing links with Ontario Hydro as a measure of the benefits to be obtained both ways.

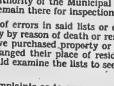
The FPC report estimated that Canada might have further export capacity of about 7,000,000 kilowatts on the Peace and Columbia rivers, the Nelson and Hamilton falls in Labrador.

The logic behind the FPC stress on greater collaboration was that power on a grid wide individual members to avoid costly emergency generating facilities which otherwise operate only at periods of peak or emergency demand.

The report said:

"The Canadian government currently is encouraging coordination among the electrical systems in the U.S. and Canada and particularly the long-term export surplus power in order to expedite the development of major projects which are too large to be supplied by the present Canadian market."

The predominence of publicly-owned power in Canada facilitates such planning while in the U.S. faces opposition at times between the public and private sectors.



SIGN OF PRIVATE SYSTEM

There have been signs that the private interests are working toward their own brand of national system.

The FPC in discussing defence implications said the "power industry now is, and will be through 1980, significantly less vulnerable to nuclear attack than the load (consumers) served."

It said the "greater interconnection of systems enhances survivability . . . more specifically, it decreases the probability that a given service area would be totally without power. Even in 1963 interconnections are so numerous that this eventuality is very improbable."

The report's finding may well require another look in the light of the massive failure Tuesday but it urged that the reduction in standby generating capacity which power grids make possible does not appear to be a critical factor in the event of a nuclear attack. The view taken in the report was that any shortages could be made up from nearby connected systems.

nouncement was that Carlyle Allison, whose seven-year-term as vice-chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors expired Tuesday, will not be reappointed.

The prime minister, who at one point appeared irritated about the throng of reporters sailing outside the cabinet room, said he should be able to indicate when Parliament will be called into session after an other cabinet meeting next Monday.

He said the main subject discussed was legislation to be proposed to Parliament.

He also said that forestry Minister Sauve has been appointed acting agriculture minister in place of Harry Hays who lost in Calgary South riding, and Veterans Minister Teillet acting mines minister in place of J. Watson MacNaught who lost Prince riding in Prince Edward Island.

He dismissed questions about Opposition Leader Diefenbaker's statement that he will challenge the government in Parliament on the issue of integrity with the comment "I thought the election campaign was finished."

The prime minister said he might get away for a holiday later on but "I don't feel I need a holiday at the moment."

His file box which bothered him during the latter stages of the election campaign, is "practically gone—it's down to my ankles now."

He and his wife, Ingrid, 26, received a dozen calls from apartment block owners in a single evening.

Alcoa, Reynolds Rescind Order To Increase Aluminum Prices

By SEYMOUR M. HERSH

WASHINGTON (AP) —The top two United States aluminum producers have backed down in a dispute with the Johnson administration and cancelled price increases the government had labelled "inflationary."

The Aluminum Company of America—No. 1 producer in the country — ended a week-long battle with the federal government Wednesday night and rescinded the price increase it announced Monday. Two hours later, Reynolds Metals followed suit.

Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation, third largest manufacturer which also raised prices this week, said it will consider its next step today.

Alcoa's decision to cancel the pates increase was announced at a press conference by Defence Secretary McNamara. He called it as "a patriotic act."

McNamara also said the government agreed to an immediate resumption of negotiations for the orderly disposal of a surplus of 1,400,000 million tons of aluminum now held in U.S. stockpiles.

LIMIT DUMPING

McNamara said he believes the government will be able to limit the amount of aluminum disposed from the stockpile to less than 200,000 tons and thus "avoid disruption" of prices.

Last Saturday when federal officials announced the price increase, they also announced that the government was considering releasing 200,000 tons from the stockpile in 1966.

At one time last week, it was reported that President Johnson was "sputtering mad" about the boosts. Johnson, who has not commented publicly on the dispute, was described by McNamara as being "very pleased" over the price-increase cancellations.

McNamara said he and Alcoa officials John D. Harper and executive price-president E. E. Hickman had discussed the price boosts for three days before the company decided to rescind its increase, which went into effect Monday. The talks were initiated by the company, the defence chief said.

The price increases were roughly two per cent, raising the ingot cost one-half cent to 25 cents a pound and the cost for fabricated products by an average of one cent a pound. At its recent high, the price was 26 cents a pound in 1960.

FEEL JUSTIFIED

In statements Wednesday night, Alcoa and Reynolds both stressed that they considered the price increases justified and needed to maintain adequate profits.

Alcoa said it "continues to feel strongly that its pricing actions were not inflationary and were justified by economic circumstances."

The company added that it "felt compelled to cancel the price reduction because of the insistence of the government.

It is urgently concerned about the possible effect of any general adverse price increases on the national economy while the Viet Nam military operations are being waged."

It was the second time in three years a Democratic administration battled with a steel industry.

In June, 1962, president Kennedy was met by a steel industry boost at a time when he, like Johnson, was trying to stabilize prices and avoid inflation.

MOSCOW (AP) — Lenin's tomb in Red Square will be closed to the public for the next two months for "normal repairs," an official said Wednesday. The repairs were not specified. Four Dolphins in Aquarium At Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) Four dolphins, one of them a rare species never before kept alive in captivity, arrived Wednesday at the Niagara Aquarium after an air journey from the south Atlantic.

A five-man scientific expedition to the Amazon River captured five dolphins. However, one of the two rare snared dolphins died of pneumonia at Belize, Fla., where they had been flown a week ago.

An aquarium official on the scene said the flight from Vera Beach to the Niagara Falls airport reported no difficulties with the sacred dolphin or the three pink dolphins.

Mystery Still

are being made to pinpoint the exact cause of the failure that started at 5:18 p.m. and ended in degrees up to early Wednesday in New York City.

Service to most Ontario points was restored by 8:30 p.m. after two smaller breaks followed the first hour-long blackout.

Representatives of the HEPC and U.S. Federal Power Commission plan to meet today in Washington to pool their ideas.

President Johnson has ordered the federal power commission to investigate and the New York State Public Service Commission instructed all power companies in the state to analyse causes of interruptions in time to report Wednesday.

President Johnson's order to commission director Joseph C. Swidler is certain to involve CANUSE—Canada - U.S. Eastern Interconnection—which was set up to prevent just such a colossal power failure.

The theory behind CANUSE, a Canada-U.S. power-exchange program, is that a failure in one region could be rectified quickly by power flow from another. Companies in both countries trade power back and forth as demands rise or fall.

POWER REVERSED

Ontario Hydro officials said that at the time of the failure—5:18 p.m. Tuesday — the CANUSE schedule called for 500,000 kilowatts to be entering the province at Niagara Falls. Instead, an unexplained reversal sent 200,000 kilowatts highballing into the U.S. at Niagara Falls while 100,000 charged into Ontario through Cornwall from New York state.

The reversal automatically triggered switches in the affected areas of Ontario, removing from service about 3,300,000 kilowatts. It also cut off the province from the New York and Michigan power systems.

Similar triggering devices blanked out U.S. centres, including New York and Boston as far south as Florida.

No deaths in Ontario were attributed to the blackout, but in New York city John J. Lyncheg, an insurance company investigator, was killed when he fell into a radiator at the bottom of a darkened office building stairway.

Indian-Pakistan Ceasefire Stands Out as Major UN Accomplishment

By BORIS MISKEW

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Indian-Pakistani ceasefire stands out as the major accomplishment of the current session of the United Nations General Assembly—highlighted by Pope Paul's historic plea for peace.

The big question now is whether the 117-nation assembly, which opened Sept. 21, will be able to stabilize the shaky ceasefire with an agreement by the two countries to withdraw their forces to positions held before the Aug. 5 outbreak of hostilities over the disputed state of Kashmir.

The ceasefire was only one of a number of problems dealt with by the UN during the first half of its 20th session.

Many of the items on this session's agenda were a carry-over from the previous session which had bogged down because of the Soviet - American disagreement on peacekeeping costs.

This problem was removed during the dying days of the 19th session when the United States decided not to press for the withdrawal of voting rights from nations two years in arrears in peacekeeping costs.

While the London Security Council grappled with the dispute over Kashmir, the General Assembly threw its support behind Britain when the white-minority-ruled colony of Rhodesia threatened to seize independence.

The assembly overwhelmingly approved two urgent resolutions calling on Prime Minister Wilson to use military force if necessary as well as other measures to prevent Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith from carrying out his threat after the breakdown of constitutional talks.

TOUCHED OFF DEBATE

The Rhodesian question touched off a heated debate in the assembly which this year saw the seating of three new members—Gambia, the Maldive Islands and Singapore.

An important step forward was taken in the disarmament field when the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain—three of the five nuclear powers —joined forces in supporting a compromise resolution calling for a quick agreement on a treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

France, another nuclear power, shtahned from the disarmament vote taken several hours before the start of a major debate on the seating of Communist China, the fifth nuclear country, in the world organization.

Canada supported the disarmament resolution, sponsored by eight non-aligned countries on the 18-nation disarmament committee. The resolution urged the disarmament committee, of which Canada is a member, to draw up a treaty containing no loopholes which might permit nuclear or non-nuclear powers to proliferate directly or indirectly, nuclear weapons in any form.

A big increasing number of nations spoke in favor of the admission of Communist China into the UN, with France being among the strongest supporters. The United States, however, continued to oppose the seating of the Peking government on grounds that it is behind the war in Viet Nam and for its part in the Chinese-Indian border tension.

Canada has told the General Assembly Communist China should be represented in a proposed world disarmament conference and has indicated that she would favor eventual seating of the Peking government if it assumed a peaceful posture.

The assembly still has much work before the end of the current session, expected shortly before Christmas. The Vietnam war which Canada hoped would be taken up in the assembly has been overshadowed so far by other issues.

MUST SETTLE COSTS

Another matter of urgent importance is the settlement of the question of peacekeeping costs as well as the establishment of better peacekeeping machinery —both of utmost interest of Canada, along with disarmament.

The session was launched during an atmosphere of co-operation in the Security Council which led to the passing of resolutions ordering Indian and Pakistani forces to quit fighting in Kashmir and along the 1,000-mile border dividing the two Commonwealth countries.

Assembly President Alex Quaison-Sackey, foreign minister of Ghana, opened the new session and then was succeeded by the new president, Amintore Fanfani, the Italian foreign Minister.

The one-day visit by Pope Paul to address the assembly Oct. 4 gave added significance to the assembly. The Pontiff, making an unprecedented trip to the Western Hemisphere, called for an end to war forever.

The warm atmosphere of the early weeks of the session was chilled somewhat several weeks later when the Soviet Union accused Secretary - General U Thant of over-stepping his mandate by setting up the new UN observer mission on the Indian-Pakistan border and naming its commander, Maj. - Gen. Bruce Macdonald of Edmonton.

The Soviet union disagreed with the stand taken by the United States, Britain and Canada that the secretary-general had acted under the terms of the resolutions ordering the ceasefire. She argued that that was a matter for the entire Security Council to decide.

But despite this unresolved question, Macdonald and his observer team, supported by six RCAF aircraft, has managed so far to preserve the ceasefire although the main task of the observer mission, to supervise the withdrawal of both armies, can only be carried out when this becomes the wish of India and Pakistan.

Ontario Liberal Leader Remanded Till December 1

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Andrew Thompson, Ontario Liberal leader, was remanded Wednesday to Dec.1 when Magistrate W. R. Philp reserved judgment on a charge of dangerous driving in connection with a highway mishap in which the accused and five other persons were injured.

Thompson also is charged with careless driving, impaired driving and failing to share the road in the Oct. 6 accident here in which two cars were in collision.

Crown Attorney John Bradshaw was accused during the trial of making improper statements.

Defence lawyer J. J. Robinette of Toronto, red-faced and shouting, protested when Mr. Bradshaw asked Magistrate Philp whether Thompson was already getting his legal defence ready when he was examined by a doctor for a concussion the morning after the dangerous and impaired driving charges had been lodged.

Constable Gordon Maclnnes testified Wednesday he spoke with Thompson at the scene of the accident and the accused swayed back and forth while standing beside his car.

NO ODOR

Constable Maclnnes said he could not smell alcohol on Thompson's breath until both arrived at the police station.

In the station Thompson leaned on the counter, straightened up and then staggered two or three steps, the officer testified.

Constable Maclnnes said the accused first denied drinking the night of the accident but later said he had one drink on his farm in Bowmanville, Ont., before driving to Peterborough.

Two other officers, Sgt. Edward Patterson and Const. Robert Lewis, said Thompson appeared to them to be impaired while standing in the police station.

Last week Dr. W. D. Blastorah, a defence witness, said Thompson received a light to moderate concussion in the crash.

The concussion might make the accused appear impaired to police, he said.

and one boxcar was tossed over the railing of an overpass onto highway 10 below. Another car balanced precariously over the side of the bridge.

There were no injuries among other members of the train crews. The CPR train carried a crew of five and the CNR freight four.

MESS CARS

Lambert and steel from the derailed cars was scattered in the area. Debris from a freight car smashed the windshield of a woman's car just as she was entering a tunnel under the tracks. Another car swerved aside, barely missing the flying debris.

Spilling propane gas and Diesel fuel created a fire hazard and police used a public address system to warn against smoking in the area.

Coroner Dr. Raymond Nesbitt of Port Credit said an inquest will be held into the deaths.

Highway traffic was being rerouted via the Mississauga Road and Cawthra Road. Police said it might be 15 hours before Highway 10 would be open to traffic.

Railway traffic between Toronto and Hamilton was being rerouted through Brampton, Georgetown and Burlington.

Commuter service along the lakeshore was disrupted and the railways provided bus service to those passengers into Toronto. Many were as much as 1½ hours late. A CNR spokesman in Toronto said it was expected that the line would be clear in time for afternoon commuter service out of Toronto.

U.S. Only Big Power Opposing Entry of Red China Into UN

By TOM HOGE

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — For the first time, the United States finds itself the only big power opposing Communist Nations.

With France and Britain favoring Peking's admission, supporters of the move are putting up their hardest fight since the issue first arose in 1950.

The main target of the attacks by Peking's supporters has been the United States, which is considered the only real obstacle to victory.

In the first three days of debate, a parade of speakers has denounced the U.S. government before the 117-nation General Assembly as the last bastion of imperialism and the arch opponent of emerging peoples.

Britain, which voted against Communist China's admission during and right after the Korean war, has supported Peking in recent years.

France came out Wednesday for the first time in favor of seating Communist China. Both Britain and France recognize the Peking regime.

Some delegates were surprised, however, that France reversed its earlier stand and contended that a simple majority vote should be sufficient to get Peking in.

The assembly decided in 1961 that the China question was important enough to require two-thirds approval. It has not been decided yet whether this rule should apply in the present session.

Diplomatic circles predict that if the two-thirds rule is again applied, Peking will be barred for at least another year.

REMEMBRANCE DAY REMINISCENCES

"Smitty" (the name on his attestation papers was John R. Smith) was on the carpet for the umpteenth time.

"Smitty" was the colonel's groom who dry-nursed "Black Beau," the old man's favorite charger. He had worked for the colonel in civilian life, looking after his stable of horses.

He was an ever-age old sweat who knew KRO backwards and added some of his personal paragraphs. He was a favorite of every estaminet madame from Wipers to the Somme.

He soaked up vin rouge, vin blanc et biere like a human blotting paper. And usually he got pegged.

This time the colonel appeared to be at rope's end.

"I've taken away from you everything I can, Smith," he said. "Pay, leave, rank, handed you a few CB days. There's nothing left for me to strip you of."

"Pardon me, sorr," said Smitty. "There's sumpun you can never deprive me of."

"What's that?" asked the old man.

Smitty drew himself up to his full height.

"Me military appearance, sorr," he said.

"Pancake" Farnham had news. He was the brigade cook and announced he had pilfered the ingredients for a suet pudding.

He produced his culinary masterpiece and some of the boys wanted to know where he got the caraway seeds. "They're good," was the consensus.

"Pancake" didn't answer, but it was discovered later he had boiled the pudding in an old army shirt that hadn't been washed for weeks.

It was the first time live "cooties" had been used in an army recipe.

"Smiffy" Grogan was the battery's business man. "Smiffy" specialized in selling equipment taken from the German side of the battlefield like Luger pistols, iron crosses, German officers' riding boots, etc.

"Smiffy" had an order from an Army Service Corps RSM for a pair of the Heinie jack-boots.. He delivered the goods, collected a nice wad of ASC francs and hurriedly departed.

The ASC bloke later made a startling discovery. He didn't know the late owner of the boots had been blown to pieces.

He couldn't put them on, for inside the boots were the grisly bony remains of the late officer's lower legs.

* * *

The battery's gun positions were under very heavy fire from German artillery. The Huns had pinpointed the guns and the fire became so heavy the gun crews were ordered to retire to a hedge some 100 yards to the rear.

Suddenly "Toothless" Tiny Thompson raced from the hedge to the guns. Shrapnel and H.E. shells were bursting all over the place.

"Come back you bloody fool," roared BSM Titch Allison, "you'll get killed."

Tiny paid no heed. He raced to his gun position, disappeared in the smoke, re-appeared a minute or so later and rushed full speed for the safety of the hedge carrying a tunic.

Before a red-faced BSM could give him hell, "Toothless" grinned and shouted, "I got 'em, I got 'em."

"You got what?" roared the BSM.

"These," said "Toothless."

And reaching in one of the tunic pockets he pulled out, in all their chopping glory, a full set of false teeth."

Hill Rise Out Of Big Race

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — Canada's George Royal and jockey Willie Shoemaker combine today in the 14th running of the $150,000 Washington International Stakes against six other horses from four countries.

"We'll leave it in Willie," said co-owner Robert Hall of Aldergrove, B.C., in discussing Canadian strategy for the 1½-mile race over a grass course.

But the withdrawal Wednesday of Hill Rise—an old adversary of George Royal—was one obstacle out of the way for Hall and his co-owner, Ernie Hammond of Vancouver.

Both said they respected Hill Rise, more than favored Roman Brother.

Overnight odds placed the four-year-old B.C. bay fourth in betting at 6 to 1. The tough little gelding Roman Brother was favored at 6 to 5 to give the United States its eight victory in the International.

Distance of France was 3 to 1, Super Sam of England 5 to 1, Hail To All of the U.S. 8 to 1, Berenjenal of Argentina 10 to 1 and Carvig of France 12 to 1.

Mikita Gets Pair ★★★★★

Hawks Clip Wings; Leafs Tie Habs

★★★★★ Blues, Bruins Draw

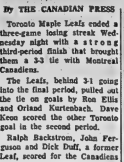
By THE CANADIAN PRESS



Toronto Maple Leafs ended a three-game losing streak Wednesday night with a strong third-period finish that brought them a 3-3 tie with Montreal Canadiens.

The Leafs, behind 3-1 going into the final period, pulled out the tie on goals by Ron Ellis and Orland Kurtenbach. Dave Keon scored the other Toronto goal in the second period.

Ralph Backstrom, John Ferguson and Dick Duff, a former Leaf, scored for the Canadiens in the game at Toronto.

In other NHL action Wednesday night, Boston Bruins gained a 3-2 come-from-behind tie with the Rangers at New York and Chicago Black Hawks dumped Detroit Red Wings 5-2 at Chicago.

Ed Westfall, a converted defenceman playing at centre this year, beat Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin on a 20-footer at 2:14 of the third period to climax Boston's comeback.

SCORES 10TH

The Rangers scored twice in the first 10 minutes of play, grabbing a quick 2-0 lead. John MacKenzie scored his third goal of the season at 3:15 and then Phil Goyette clicked with his second of the season and 100th of his NHL career at 9:40.

Parker MacDonald put Boston on the scoreboard at 12:17 of the opening period, 44 seconds after Giacomin was forced to leave because of an injury. He was replaced by Don Simmons.

Chicago took over undisputed possession of first place by beating Detroit and extended the team's unbeaten streak to seven games.

Stan Mikita paced the Chicago victory with two goals, his second coming in the last period while teammate Eric Nesterenko was serving a five-minute penalty.

ED WESTFALL

The triumph moved the Hawks into top spot, one point ahead of Montreal.

SCORES DEFLECTION

Billy Harris gave the Red Wings a short - lived 1 - 0 lead early in the second period when a shot by Paul Henderson bounced off his pads and trickled behind Chicago goalie Glenn Hall.

Len Lunde tied the score less than three minutes later and Mikita followed quickly with the first of his two goals, a 15-footer.

Phil Esposito and Bill Hay put the game out of reach for Chicago by scoring early in the final period.

Midway in the third period Detroit's Gordie Howe scored the 598th goal of his 20-year career.

A brilliant passing combination between Doug Mohns and Mikita befuddled goalie Roger Crozier and brought Mikita his second goal of the night.

Put Life In Offence

Patterson Sparked Ti-Cats

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton Tiger-Cats came up with something old a month ago to put new life into their offence in time for their Eastern Football Conference final against Ottawa Rough Riders.

The something old is Hal Patterson, 32-year-old veteran of 12 seasons in the Eastern Football Conference, nine of them as an all-star.

Patterson retired after the 1964 season with the Tiger-Cats but was called back to active duty by coach Ralph Sazio with four games left in the schedule this year. Injuries to key players and an offence that never got out of low gear had Sazio in dire straits.

In three of those four games, all victories, Hamilton exploded for a total of 85 points. The Ti-cats were held to six points in the remaining contest, a 6-2 win over Ottawa in the mud.

Patterson managed only one touchdown in the four games, but his presence gave the Ti-cats a balanced running and passing attack and made opposing defensive teams more "honest."

With Prince Hal around to catch long aerials, quarterback Joe Zuger had more than just Tommy Grant to throw to. And with the pressure off, Grant scored two of his five season touchdowns after Patterson arrived.

COUNTS A WORRY

With Patterson back Sazio's chief concern Wednesday was halfback Johnny Counts, who injured an ankle in the last game of the schedule against Toronto Argonauts.

Counts is limping at workouts and Sazio said after Wednesday night's session that if he can't play, Gerry McDougall will replace him.

The Hamilton coach isn't sure of linebacker Herb Paterra's status for the first game of the two-game, total - points series opening Sunday at Ottawa's Lansdowne Park. Kickoff is 2 p.m. EST and the game will be televised nationally by the CBC.

Willie Mays Wins Second MVP Award

BOSTON (AP) — Wondrous Willie Mays, San Francisco Giants' great centre fielder, won the National League's Most Valuable Player Award Wednesday for the second time, outdistancing Los Angeles' Sandy Koufax and Maury Wills.

The 34-year-old Mays was the only player named on all 20 ballots cast by two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each of the National League cities.

The former "say, hey" kid received nine first-place votes, 10 seconds and one third in piling up 224 points in the balloting.

Ken Boyer of St. Louis Cardinals received 243 points with 14 first-place votes in winning the honor in 1964, but didn't receive a point this year.

KOUFAX SECOND

Koufax, who captured the Cy Young Memorial Award as baseball's top pitcher after a 26-4 record this year, polled 177 points, while Wills, the Dodgers' speedy shortstop, drew 164.

Mays became only the fifth player since 1931 to win the coveted MVP Award more than once. Stan Musial captured the honor in 1943, '46 and '48; Roy Campanella in '51, '53 and '55; Carl Hubbell in '33 and '36, and Ernie Banks in '58 and '59.

Appearing in 157 games in a vain bid to lead the Giants to the pennant, Mays led the major leagues with 52 homers and 359 total bases. He topped the National League in runs scored with 119. He drove in 112 runs while compiling a .317 batting average.

"Bearing Koufax is a great thrill," commented Mays.

Oakville Shades Aces 3-2

KINGSTON (CP) — Oakville Oaks defeated Kingston Aces 3-2 Wednesday night in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game.

The victory moves Oakville three points ahead of second-place Kingston in the league standings.

Bill Ford, Don Fuller and Grant Moore scored for Oakville. Moore's goal at 10:40 in the last period was the winner.

John Ford and Bob Rawson scored for Kingston.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) —Holarctic, a two-year-old colt owned by Frank Sherman of Hamilton, won the $10,000 added Carleton Stakes for two-year-olds at Greenwood Race Track Wednesday.

The colt covered the mile in 1:40 and returned $12.70, $6.80 and $3.60.

The daily double of Black Ringo and First Fashion paid $134.50 and the quinella of Martin York and Fairmar returned $69.50.

Riders Recall Last One

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP)—Most Ottawa Rough Rider football players have a good reason to be at their best Sunday when they meet Hamilton Tiger - Cats: They remember when they blew a 17-point lead and lost last year's two-game, total-point series by a single point.

But veteran tackle Mo Racine has another memory, the final games of the regular season when Tiger halfback Don Sutherin kicked 14 points to win the EFC scoring title.

Racine went into the final game with a shoulder lead, but a gimpy knee kept him on the bench throughout, except for a brief appearance to kick his 34th convert of the season. Ottawa lost the game to Montreal Alouettes 16-8.

The following day, Sutherin kicked three field goals, three singles and two converts as Hamilton walloped Toronto Argos 35-21. He finished with 82 points, seven more than Racine.

"My knee is feeling better every day," Racine said in an interview Wednesday.

FRACTISES KICKS

"I was kicking without any trouble at practise today."

Racine, at 28, is in his eighth year with the Riders after coming up from high school ranks, without the benefit of college football experience.

The transition from a crushing fullback at Cornwall's St. Lawrence high school to a professional offensive tackle hasn't been easy, but it has been steady.

For the third straight year he has led his club in scoring, with a total of 75 points on 12 field goals, 34 converts and five singles. He missed only two converts all season.

NHL President Defends Pro Tie-Ups

More Rinks Needed

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence Campbell appeared before the legislature's select committee on youth Wednesday to clear up what he said was a "considerable misunderstanding" of the relationship between professional and amateur hockey.

The National Hockey League president presented a lengthy brief defending the three ways in which the NHL carried ties up amateur players: sponsorship, negotiation lists, and the draft.

In describing each he said their purpose was to prevent competitive bidding by NHL clubs for the services of players at young as 14—"unproven talent," as Mr. Campbell described them.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

He said the sponsorship system, under which NHL clubs could support two amateur teams and receive exclusive negotiating rights for the 15 players on each, was the "real backbone" of players development for the pros.

The negotiation list, under which an NHL club can receive exclusive negotiating rights for at least four players for at least a year, was described as a "life - saver" because it had helped eliminate bidding wars and large bonuses.

Campbell also told how the draft system was evolved in 1963 because there was "a growing feeling that the cost of operating sponsored teams was becoming too expensive."

Using this device an NHL club could claim up to four 17-year-olds each year—the age was raised to 18 in 1965—for $2,000 each, giving the pro club a third avenue for exclusive rights to negotiation for the player's services.

Campbell said players drafted or placed on negotiation lists were under no obligation to play professional hockey. However, if they chose to turn pro they would have no choice but to play for the team that had their names on the list or that had claimed them.

He said there was no hardship on the youngsters. "Players usually make arrangements with the claiming club which they would prefer to be associated, then a deal of some kind is normally worked out between the clubs which results in the player getting to the club of his choice."

Players associated with sponsored clubs also are under no obligation to play professional hockey. Campbell said, but since they were being paid up to $65 a week there was an understanding between them and the pros.

CITES OBLIGATIONS

"In many cases—probably in the majority of cases — the player is under strong moral obligation to the professional sponsoring club for financial allowances made to him to finance his education or to supplement his earnings when his job is low-paying."

The NHL president said that in paying youngsters to play amateur hockey the league had an excellent record of achieving its helping them get an education "in spite of the criticism that has sometimes been directed at it on the grounds that it was interfering with the schooling of players through excessive numbers of games, extensive travel and the general distraction experienced by pro clubs who were also hockey players with ambition to be professionals."

Campbell's main recommendation to the select committee was that more hockey rinks should be built.

"The thing which would be the most helpful in the efforts of the NHL to play a role in the development of young people in their relation to society," he said, "would be to increase the facilities for playing our game."

Decisions "Weary Old Man"

Archer Bursts Sugar Ray Bubble

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Young Joey Archer dropped Sugar Ray Robinson in the fourth round and rocked the 45-year-old ex-middleweight champion repeatedly Wednesday night in winning a unanimous decision in a 10-round bout witnessed by 9,023 fans at the Civic Arena.

The crowd gave the faded fighter an ovation for a gallant effort, but he could not handle this 27-year-old challenger, who expects to step over Robinson to a title fight with middleweight champion Dick Tiger of Nigeria.

SUGAR RAY ROBINSON

Archer, noted for his skillful boxing, surprised fans by flooring Robinson with a right to the chin in the fourth round. The dazed Sugar scraped himself off the deck at the count of nine by referee Buck McTiernan.

In the final round, Archer chased Robinson around the ring and rained punishment on the weary old man, who has been boxing as a pro for 26 years.

But he couldn't floor Robinson again. When he finished on his feet, the crowd gave Ray a big hand.

Referee McTiernan scored the fight for Archer 48-41, judge Ernie Sesto had it 49-40 and judge George Lupinacci saw it 50-39.

It had to be the end of Robinson's possessive dreams about winning the middleweight crown for a sixth time.

Stamps Up For Bombers

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders can take the first step toward ending a 16-year Grey Cup drought Saturday when they meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the first game of a best-of-three final in the Western Football Conference.

The Stamps last won the Grey Cup in 1948, when they downed Ottawa Rough Riders 12-7 for the national title.

The last time they batted heads with Bud Grant's hard-nosed Bomber squad here Oct. 27, the Stamps were thumped 22-0.

Can the Stamps still beat the Bombers?

"Certainly," says freshman coach Jerry Williams, who led the Stamps to their WFC first-place finish since 1949.

Saturday's game will be televised nationally by the CTV network starting at 4 p.m. EST.

Second game of the final series will be played in Winnipeg Nov. 17 and a final game if necessary in Calgary Nov. 20.

STAMPS AIL

Williams says linebacker Wayne Harris, who suffered a groin injury in the Oct. 27 debacle, likely will dress Saturday but that's not certain. Guard Hal Ebelhe, who has a slipped disc in his back, "probably will suit."

Defensive end Roy Payne, who had some cartilage removed from his knee, is on the 30-day injured reserve list and will be out of action until after the second game of the series. Williams says.

Legal Prince, a 12-year-old trotter owned by Wilbur Sinclair and John Clement, both of Colinwood, Ont., won the first race. Hi Acres Averill, a 12-year - old pacer owned - and driven by Bill Sirton of Orangeville, Ont., captured the second race for an $18 double.

Magic Millie, owned by Irvin Ness of Bellwille, won the sixth race and combined with runner-up Gracie Lochinvar for a $30.40 quinella.

WINDSOR (CP)—Penny Scot sped past Imperial Lady in the eighth-race mile trot to victory at Windsor Raceway Wednesday night.

The daily double was a combination of Elbert Wilson and Tar Chips for $83.20.

$250,000 Guarantee Posted

CHICAGO (AP)—A $250,000 guarantee was posted Wednesday for Ernie Terrell, World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, to face the winner of the Cassius Clay-Floyd Patterson bout in a Chicago title fight before July 1.

The guarantee was contained in a contract submitted to the Illinois State Athletic Commission by promoter Ivy Schoenwald, who said he might "go up to $500,000" as guarantee for Clay or Patterson to face Terrell.

The WBA, which previously stripped Clay of its version of the heavyweight title, has approved the Clay - Patterson match at Las Vegas, Nev., Nov. 22 with a proviso the winner faces Terrell.

Terrell outpointed Toronto's George Chuvalo, Nov. 1 in his only title defence to date.

Buckaroos Blank Victoria

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shutouts were the fashion in the Western Hockey League Wednesday night.

Portland's defending champion buckaroos blanked Victoria Maple Leafs 6-0 to move into a tie with the Leafs for first place while Phoenix Hornets of the American League stung San Francisco Seals 4-0 in an inter-league clash.

The Bucks jumped into a 3-0 lead in the first period with Arnie Schmautz, Art Jones and Dick Van Impe each getting a goal. It was the first of three for Van Impe, who completed the trick with the final goal of the night.

Jones picked up an assist on Van Impe's last goal to take over the league scoring leadership with 20 points.

The loss broke a seven-game winning streak for the Maple Leafs and extended Portland's victory skein to five games.

Wins Cup, Year Honors

Armbro Flight Trot Champ

WESTBURY, N.Y. (CP) — Armbro Flight won the $81,326 Dexter Cup and Seasoned Trotter of the Year honors in the U.S. with a fine three-length victory at Roosevelt Raceway Wednesday night.

Her time for the mile stake was 2:03 3-5. She had been favored in the betting and paid $3, $2.20 and $2.20.

Second was Egyptian Candor, the colt that had beaten Armbro Flight in the Sept. 1 Hambletonian at Du Quoin, Ill., in their historic fourth-heat race-off.

Owned by Elgin, Ted and Charles Armstrong of Brampton, Armbro Flight's earnings were raised to $211,050 with the Dexter victory.

Short Stop was third while Noble Victory, the colt figured to give the Canadian filly her toughest opposition, finished out of the money.

Armbro Flight, the only filly in the field, chalked up her sixth straight victory and 31st win of the season.

The winner's purse was $39,943. Second place was worth $19,971 and third $9,586.

HEAD WEST

Joe O'Brien, who trains and drives Armbro Flight, made arrangements after the race to fly the Canadian horse to Hollywood Park in California for the $50,000 - added American Trotting Classic Nov. 20.

"That will be her last race of the year," O'Brien said. "We've come this far and while this race (the Hollywood) is against older horses, her performances have earned her a shot at the best trotters around."

All told, Armbro Flight's earnings in two seasons amount to $318,326.

Tv weeks ago at Delaware, Ohio she set a world record for a trotter on a half-mile track of 1:59 1-5 and now stands after the Dexter victory head and shoulders over the best three-year-olds in North America this year.

Quickly now, what's your image of that overworked word — teenager?

Is it (or she) the empty-headed, perennially cheer'a dolt of the television situation comedy? Is he the serious individual who gives the annual valedictory address at the local school?

Is he the shaggy-haired creature we see pictured several times a week, part of a screaming mob that threatens to invade a rock'n'roll stage ?

Or is he the solemn individual with horn rim glasses who takes care to put on old clothes in the morning in case he joins a sit-in and has to be dragged away by policemen?

Several readers have attempted to define their generation in this column. But none, I believe, has done as well as 17-year-old Bruce Hoare, a Grade 12 student who recently felt moved to put pen to paper.

Because I think you'll find it interesting, I'll let you share his letter. Just look over my shoulder and carry on.

He writes: "It seems many occasions talked to adults terms can be classified that way by age only) who have a great misconception of the Canadian teenager.

They visualize Canadian youth as living in a world of unreality with their jock'n'roll, points ted shoes and clothes which they recognize as monstrosities.

"But! Are we to blame? Are we wrong?

"It is my opinion — speaking as a teenager — that we are seeking individualism and not strict rules of conformity which may or may not have been the social policies of our parents.

"We keep hearing about increased juvenile delinquency. The fact that a dying society is rejecting the younger generation makes some young people rebel against it.

"Some of them, unfortunately choose a means of breaking the law. And under our judicial system they must be punished.

"But what do we want? We want to be able to make decisions of our own. Many of us have our thinking done for us daily by either our parents or through the means of communication.

SEE ONLY BAD

"So frequently adults distort the good to see only the bad in teenagers. And why? Is it because that's what they expect and want to see?

Bruce wonders how many adults either know about or want to know about another side of his generation. He spells it out for them if they don't.

"Do they realize the large sums of money raised for charity by high schools across Canada?

"Do they even think about contributions made by girls in practically every hospital across Canada in the way of nursing and keeping the morale of practically every patient as high as could be hoped for?

"Do they realize there is little or no racial discrimination among teenagers?

"Only when adults lose their obscure opinions about teenagers can they expect a significant percentage of young people to stop rebelling against those opinions."

Well done, Bruce. I suspect by the style of your letter that you may be running for election yourself sometime in the future. And more power to you.

What do the rest of you think of Bruce's strong opinions? Are you the quiet misunderstood generation in Canada's history?

If you're worrying about inexpensive Christmas presents, this is the time of year to start raising Christmas flowers. Simply place bulbs in small pots, just below the earth surface; place the pots in a cold, dark location for several weeks; the bulbs will flower soon after they're given away.

We're indebted to Joanne Marshall of Halifax, N.S., for the idea. She's tried it successfully for the last three years.

Bob Hope Comedy Show Was Built on Old Device

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—An assuming—and mighty familiar—little comedy idea on NBC's Bob Hope Theatre Wednesday night was just the right prescription for some of the tired 30,000,000 people recovering from Tuesday night's power blackout.

And so was the problem of The Virginian's hard luck neighbor and the derringer-gun the I Spy agents chasing an escaped spy. NBC, in fact, was a comfortable island Wednesday night for a smooth sail away from stern reality.

Mr. G o v e r n e r, the Hope show comedy, was busy building laughs on the old device of having a tall, lanky, homemade man forced to disguise himself as a woman. It was broad comedy, of course, plus a mixed pair of romances and the anticipated windup—star Tom Tyron out his wig.

Throughout the day—particularly in news shows and in a pair of news specials—the TV networks busily cleaned up the big story of the previous night's oig blackout.

Producers of CBS' What's My Line? after considering the matter for two days went back to their original idea of putting a close friend of Dorothy Kilgallen's into the late columnist's spot on the show panel Sunday night. They chose Kitty Carlisle. The other guest on the panel will be Steve Allen, once a regular on the show. For obvious reasons, it will be a difficult show for all participants.

Batawa

BATAWA' — Mr. Arthur Duncan was guest speaker at the Northumberland Holstein Breeder's Association at Campbellford on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Edwin N. Erion, student minister of Batawa - United Church was guest speaker on Sunday at the 171st anniversary services in Lundy's Lane United Church, Niagara Falls.

Mr. Fulvio Pasbacci of Queen's University, Kingston spent the weekend with his parents.

Mr. Felixx Skoutjan and Mrs. Jack Beach reported on an evangelism and social service conference held at Elim Lodge at the services at Batawa and Zion United Churches on Sunday.

Mr. Art Walker, Mrs. Walker and their son Peter arrived recently from England and are residing in their new home on Fraser Drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Erion and family spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs- F. C. Erion in Niagara Falls.

Wayne Newton Acquired Education in Tough School

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Wayne Newton's first job in show business was a Christmas show for a labor union in his native Roanoke, Va. He was 10, and the fee amounted to $10, which he split with his brother.

Now 23, he estimated his earnings so far this year at $750,000.

Singing and playing everything from banjo to violin, he acquired his education in the toughest school for an entertainer: The Las Vegas lounge.

The lounges of that gold-rush town are people-packed boxes where performers must compete with the rattle of dice and ice cubes. "Hecklers: I've seen a very kind," says Wayne. "When I get them in clubs nowadays, it's a cinch for me to handle the situation."

Wayne recently completed a two-week run at the Cocoanut Grove, a b o o k i n g he had wrangled for three years because "I wasn't ready."

Like other multi - talented stars who became big entertainers (Newton has two corporations, is forming a third) he refers to his performing self as "we."

"We got our first big break at the Copa Cabana now in Phoenix and put us on big television show," he says. "He put us on the map in times."

Newton is still cherub-faced, but there is less of him.

"We dropped 40 pounds this year," he explains. "I'm down to 170 and I may take off five or six more pounds. I'm six feet, two, so the weight wasn't unusual nor my height, except that it was all in my legs and hips."

Newton's prince p l a s success has been as a singer in night clubs, television and on records —his Capitol singles of Danke Schoen and Red Roses for a Blue Lady helped establish him as a favorite of teen-agers. Like all young performers he wants to broaden his horizons.

"I'm signed to great star on Bonanza in December," he reports. "It's a darned good story about a boy who wants to be a singer and his father doesn't think it's a manly profession."

AT THE BELLE — Ingrid Bergman as the fallen Swedish missionary and Rex Harrison as Mac the Knife in "INGRID BERGMAN" — "The Yellow Rolls Royce" in Color and Wide Screen, now playing an extended engagement at the Belle Theatre. The picture depicts the adventures of a Rolls-Royce and its owners during over a period of years. See Harrison, Shirley MacLaine, Alain Delon and Jeanne Moreau are starred.

NOW SHOWING
Co-Star of "McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force" Has Sore Experience for Advice.

Joe Flynn, the ever-flustered Captain Binghamton, co-starring with Tim Conway in Universal's full length Technicolor comedy feature, "McHale's Navy Joins The Air Force," showing today at the Park Theatre, has a sore case of sage advice for parents who want their children to become movie stars. His imparted wisdom would invariably start with one word, "Don't."

He's not discouraging young talent from entering the field, but he speaks from bitter experience what the job entails physically. And he's got the scars, cuts, bruises and broken-to prove every word he says is true.

In "McHale's Navy Joins the Air Force," he gets kicked, thrown around, bung by his heels in a rope harness, carried off a pier, and forced to bang his head on the fuselage of a plane while a belt is in cycle, just to name a few of the miseries he endures as a comic actor.

During the production of this feature and the previous zany "McHale's Navy" film, he lost count of the number of scenes in which he was battered, bruised and beaten. "I've run into the hundreds," Joe says. (The studio hospital file on Joe actually lists 227 minor injuries treated.)

"I'm resigned to the fact that the Binghamton role involves sometimes painful physical activity. We work hard and long and unless you're a natural to go through an individual scene where I get hurt, I'm in for a long, long stance, as many as 15 times. Hitting one spot on the body 15 times is more than each body but bruise."

"McHale's Navy Joins The Air Forces" was produced and directed by Edward J. Montagne who has helmed the TV series on ABC since its inception and also produced and directed the previous "McHale's Navy" feature film. The McHale's Navy crew co-stars.

The added feature, in Color, "The Sword of Ali Baba" is a wonderful World of Magic action, romance with Ali Baba and his fantastic 40 Thieves. Complete shows are at 7.00 and 8.45 p.m.

Why is watching a Philips automatic TV like riding in a chauffeur-driven car?
(Because you just sit back, relax and enjoy it.)

Philips planned it that way. In fact, that's really the whole idea behind this new Canadian designed and built Automatic TV.

Here's how it works:
Instant picture & sound: The Philips Automatic comes on in two seconds—with famous Philips sound and picture clarity. (You get an exclusive 2-year guarantee on the direct-vision picture tube—automatically).

Automatic contrast and brightness: Twin electric eyes measure changing light conditions in your living room. One adjusts the contrast. The other adjusts picture brightness to give you the ultimate in viewing, automatically.

Pre-set fine tuning: Changing channels is no problem with Philips. Pre-set-fine tuning "remembers" the proper setting for each channel, automatically. Just set it and forget it.

As for limousine "looks," you have your choice of over 33 custom-designed wood cabinets and hand-rubbed finishes. Crafted by the artisans of Strathroy.

Have your family "chauffeur"—take you to your Philips dealer—for a demonstration (automatically).

Trust in Philips is world-wide.

Service Vote Could Reverse Results in Eleven Ridings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The armed services vote, to be announced Saturday in Ottawa could reverse the result of Monday's civilian vote in perhaps 11 ridings, but with much the same situation in 1963 only one seat changed to Liberals from Conservatives.

Closest contest is in Ontario's Norfolk riding where Liberal Jack Roxburgh edged Conservative G. Jones Crowley by 36 votes. The riding had 167 service votes cast in 1963.

There were 122,614 eligible voters in the service vote conducted Nov. 14 at defence bases and installations at home and abroad. The figure includes 10,852 servicemen, 8,726 servicewomen and wives living at bases abroad and 536 patients in veterans' hospitals.

In 1963 the service vote elected Liberal Robert Temple by 648 votes in Hastings South after Conservative Lee Grills had come out on top by 92 votes election night.

Two seats were won on service votes in 1962, one in 1958 and one in 1957—all ending up with the Liberals having benefitiously received the lion's share of armed forces support. In 1953 it was 70.5 per-cent Liberal.

RECOUNTS COUNT

In addition to the service vote Saturday, there could be result in extremely close races.

Here are the ridings where the winning margin Monday night was under 500 votes. In cases where the total service vote in 1963 was greater than the winning margin, the service vote is bracketed:

Algoma East, Ont. — Conservative David MacDonald 180 votes ahead of Mines Minister MacGregor (Lib).

Antigonish - Guysborough, N.S.—Conservative D. Hugh Gillis 213 votes ahead of Liberal John B. Stewart. (210)

Cape Breton South, N.S.—Conservative Donald MacInnis 322 votes over Liberal Joseph MacEachern. (1,373)

Carleton, Ont.—Liberal A. M. A. McLean 67 votes over Conservative H. D. Caldwell (recount, (206).

Bellechasse, Que. — Liberal Herman Lavardiere 376 votes over Creditiste Bernard Dumont.

Charlevoix, Que. — Conservative Martial Asselin 20 votes over Liberal Aime Racine.

Joliette - L'Assomption-Montcalm, Que.—Liberal J. Lucien Beaudry 397 votes over Conservative Rock Lavallee.

Pontiac - Temiscamingue, Que.—Liberal Lucien Lefebvre 313 votes over Conservative Paul Jarrieau.

Canadians Uncertain in Most Elections in Last 45 Years

By FRASER MacDOUGALL

OTTAWA (CP) — More often than not, Canadians have spoken with an uncertain voice in federal elections over the last 45 years.

The uncertainty began in 1921, the year the so-called agrarian revolt in Ontario and the Prairies found expression in federal political action.

There may be no connection with the country's seeming inability to make up its mind, but that was also the year women got the vote. The 1921 election was the first with universal suffrage for all Canadians at 21.

The indecisiveness reached its climax Monday, when Canada elected a minority government for the third consecutive time. It was the fourth minority government from five elections in 8½ years.

In 13 elections before 1921, the two-party system had a firm hold and Canadians returned a majority of Conservatives or Liberals. Each time, the winners captured more than half the party vote.

MAJORITY 6 TIMES

But in 14 elections starting in 1921, the winning party has taken a majority of House seats only six times. Only twice has the winner attracted more than half the vote—the Liberals did it with 50.9 per cent in 1940 and the Conservatives with 53.6 per cent in 1958.

After the First World War, farm organizations that grew out of the grange movement of the late 1800s burst into full political flower.

Farm governments won office in Ontario in 1919 and in Alberta in 1921—the latter in a July 11 election. In 1920 they won 12 of 55 legislature seats in Manitoba, to become the second largest group.

Heartened by provincial success, farm candidates swung into the 1921 federal election on Dec. 6 with eagerness.

Running under the Progressive banner, they captured 65 of 235 Commons—24 of 82 in Ontario, 12 of 15 in Manitoba, 15 of 16 in Saskatchewan and 10 of 12 in Alberta. They also picked up one of New Brunswick's 11 seats and three of B.C.'s 13.

LABOR WON SEATS

Labor, ranked by some students as the urban counterpart of the agrarian revolt, won another three seats. One of its successful candidates was J. S. Woodsworth, founder of the CCF. Its descendant, the NDP, was the strongest third force on last Monday's vote.

Between them, Progressive and labor MPs held all but three of the 43 Prairie seats in the 1921-1925 Parliament. Liberals salvaged the other three for the old-line parties.

The Liberals had the largest group in 1921 and formed a government with 117 seats, they polled only 42.7 per cent of the party vote. The Conservatives, who won 50 seats, polled 32 per cent. Progressives, labor and others received 25.3 per cent.

Indecision reigned again in 1925. The Conservatives got the biggest share of the party vote, 46.4 per cent, and elected most members, 116 for a 245 - seat House. But the Liberals, with 101 members and 40.2 per cent of the vote, stayed in office for eight months with the help of 24 Progressives and four others elected on 13.4 per cent of the vote.

In 1926, straight Liberal candidates took 42.8 per cent of the vote and 118 were elected. They governed four years in the 245-seat House with the 20 Liberal-Progressives, who basically were Liberals. The Conservatives got the biggest share of the vote, 47.5 per cent, but elected only 91 members. Liberal-Progressives, Progressives, United Farmers of Alberta and others had 36 members elected on 10.9 per cent of the vote.

The 1945 election returned only 118 Liberals in a 245-seat House, but enough MPs elected as Independent - Liberal joined the party caucus to provide a Commons majority.

In 1957 the Conservatives formed a government with 112 seats and in 1962 with 116, each time in a 265-seat House. The Liberals won in 1963 and again Monday with 129 members in the 265-seat House.

In addition to capturing more than half the party vote in 1940 and 1958, the winning party just missed out twice. In 1930 the Conservatives won on 49 per cent of the vote, in 1949 the Liberals swept in on 49.5 per cent. Three times in the 14 elections, the winning party has received less than two-fifths of the vote. The Liberals got 39 per cent in 1945, the Conservatives 208 per cent in 1957 and 37.2 in 1962.

Charges and Counter Charges Over Explosives Issues Heard

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Communists, union rivalling, Canadian involvement in Viet Nam and human rights were all a part of Wednesday's discussions at the ninth convention of the Ontario Federation of Labor. Almost 1,000 delegates attending the three-day convention which ends today let fly with charge and counter-charge over the explosive issues, but remained for a consistently mild downtown, at the height of the evening rush hour.

Some of the bitterest exchanges concerned charges of union raiding in Sudbury and, on the international scene, disagreement on who to blame for escalating the Viet Nam conflict.

A resolution called for support of Sudbury nickel workers, members of the federation-affiliated steelworkers union, and condemned the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) for "continued efforts to split the nickel workers."

It was passed after heated debate. One delegate called the resolution "the dirtiest ever to come before the federation." Another objected to giving the steelworkers support for a "no raiding" policy and the union had raided mine-mill in winning the huge international Nickel Co. local to its fold.

Then a delegate jumped up and shouted he hoped American would come back from Viet Nam "to clean the commies out of Sudbury." The inference was that mine-mill was kept out of the Canadian Labor Congress because of so-called Communists in its leadership.

Delegates chose their sides on the war in Viet Nam and waged their own verbal battle.

However, they approved a proposal urging Britain and Russia to reconvene the Geneva disarmament conference to work out a political solution to the war. It also insisted Canadian troops not be involved in the conflict.

The rush-hour march followed debate during the afternoon when a resolution called for a federation petition to the provincial government asking changes in legislation affecting court injunction.

The resolution sought to have injunctions issued only after the labor relations board had processed the case and after a "trial" of the case had been held.

Carrying placards, some 300 of the delegates marched from the convention hall to the downtown business offices of Union Gas Companies Ltd., striking for one week by some 300 employees here and in Sarnia over a contract dispute.

Last Monday a court injunction against picketing in larger numbers than two men at a site was obtained by the gas company.

Finance Minister Gordon Quits

Takes Full Responsibility For Defeat

WALTER GORDON

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Gordon left the cabinet Thursday night after accepting full responsibility for Monday's general election.

The prime minister accepted it "regretfully."

Mr. Gordon, 59, had been finance minister since Mr. Pearson formed his first minority government in 1963, and he submitted his resignation Tuesday, a day after the general election resulted in another minority situation. The finance minister, also Liberal campaign chairman, had urged Mr. Pearson to call the vote in search of a majority.

"The conclusion is quite clear," he wrote to the prime minister. "I gave you bad advice, both as a minister and as campaign chairman. I accept full responsibility for this and therefore submit my resignation from the cabinet."

Two days after receiving the letter, and following a two-hour talk with Mr. Gordon, the prime minister accepted the resignation. But he refused to hold his finance minister responsible for the election.

"I cannot accept your assumption of responsibility for the decision to hold the recent election which, while it confirmed our position as a government with considerable the largest support in the House of Commons, did not give us the majority of members we sought. You and others advised me to hold the election at this time, for reasons which seemed perfectly valid, but the decision was mine and the sole responsibility for the decision remains mine."

Mr. Gordon will remain in the Commons as a private member.

The announcement from the prime minister's office Thursday night came as a surprise. Two years earlier, Mr. Gordon had survived a harrowing fivemonth ordeal in the Commons when he introduced his controversial first budget. At that time he was under considerable fire for bringing in three outside consultants—still being paid by their non-government employers—to help prepare the budget.

It was freely predicted at that time that Mr. Gordon would be forced to resign because of his alleged lack of judgment involving the budget secrecy. But he bounced back to remain as one of Mr. Pearson's closest friends and advisers.

Is Likely Successor

By FRASER MacDOUGALL

OTTAWA (CP) — Mitchell Sharp ranks as the odds-on favourite to succeed to the finance portfolio vacated Thursday night by the resignation of Walter Gordon.

The 54-year-old trade minister stands high with close political colleagues to take on the most sensitive post in the cabinet.

Moreover, associates feel he has the confidence of the Canadian business community, an asset they look on as vital for the man who guides the country's fiscal and monetary policies.

Initial speculation as to the man Prime Minister Pearson might call on to fill the vacancy naturally ranged far beyond one man.

One suggestion was that the resignation might provide the opening needed for Robert Winters, the engineer who came back to political life Monday with a victory in York West.

Since his defeat in 1957 when he was minister of public works, the 55-year-old Nova Scotian has carved out a successful career in business at Toronto.

Ex-Minister Meets Press

Liberals to Continue His Policies - Gordon

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Walter Gordon, who resigned Thursday as finance minister, said today the Liberal minority government now is in a stronger position than it was before the Nov. 8 general election and that it will carry on his economic policies.

He told a press conference he resigned because he believed he had given Prime Minister Pearson full support in forcing the calling the election, but that if he had it to do over again, he would give the same advice.

Mr. Gordon denied that he was making a scapegoat of himself for the election result, or trying to take the heat off Mr. Pearson.

"Mr. Pearson is quite competent to deal with whatever heat may come his way," Mr. Gordon said.

He said he thinks the government is in a stronger position now because the danger of another general election is lessened. It will be difficult for anyone in Parliament to force a new election, and the government can carry on "as if it had a majority."

'WON'T BE EASY'

"I cannot believe that Parliament would seriously consider another election now until after redistribution is in effect. I think the Liberals are in a stronger position, and that we are likely to have over 130 members. So, even if some individual might wish to do so, it won't be easy to force another election."

At a crowded press conference in the finance minister's confederation building office, Mr. Gordon said there would be "great resentment against anyone who challenged Mr. Pearson's carrying on for many years to come."

He said the prime minister has unanimous support in the party. Then he added: "Oh, there may be one or two people where across the country . . ." his remark seemed to imply some criticism.

Mr. Gordon intends to remain in Parliament as MP for Toronto Davenport. He now plans an extended holiday in Ireland.

He said he advised Mr. Pearson as strongly as he could that party campaign committee and as a senior member of the Cabinet to call the election at this time "because I thought that it was desirable to have a strong government in Canada."

If the election had not been held this year circumstances not have allowed for a date convenient to government planning until March, 1967.

PROMISED RESIGNATION

"I told the prime minister at the time that if we did not get a majority, I would submit my resignation. Mr. Pearson in Quebec and Maritime returns Monday night, I called him immediately and reminded him of that undertaking."

He said that despite their return to another minority position in the Commons, the Liberals now are stronger than they were in December. He was previously urged the prime minister to call an election in October, 1964, or June 1965 next year.

"I'm not a believer in minority government," he added.

Mr. Gordon said he is confident there will be no change in government economic policy.

"I prime minister went out of his way to express his belief and the government's belief in the kind of policy we have been pursuing. . . . The policies we introduced in the summer of 1963 paid off to a remarkable degree; never again will a government be able to say that nothing can be done about unemployment."

As a private MP, he would urge the government in Ottawa council meetings to push forward as quickly as possible with establishment of the proposed Canada Development Corporation, a holding company to acquire holdings in Crown owned and other firms. Individuals could invest in CDC shares.

ECONOMY'S HEALTHY

"The economy is in first-class shape and I will go on expanding through 1966," Mr. Gordon said. "The stretch-out program is continuing in a wise one and I am not terrified, as some people seem to be, that we are on the brink of an inflation that cannot be controlled."

But as finance minister he foresaw difficulties in getting important finance, taxation, and federal-provincial legislation through the Commons without a majority government.

Bank Act revision is due, and the royal commission on capital taxation is expected to submit its report early in 1966. Negotiations begin soon for new federal-provincial tax-sharing arrangements.

Now, with another election behind it and still with only minority support in the Commons, the government is in a stronger position because Parliament will try to avoid a further general election, said Mr. Gordon.

"The government is in a position now to carry on as if it had a majority. It would not have done so without an election."

Mr. Gordon, replying to questions, said he had been under heavy fire in 1963 after he introduced his first budget which had to withdraw parts of it because of criticism. He said he did not publish the resignation then in any formal way, but had casually offered to leave the post if anyone else in the cabinet wanted to carry on.

Asked about his relations with Bay Street, the centre of the financial community in Toronto, Mr. Gordon said: "I'm not the member for Bay Street, but for Davenport, and I had pretty good support there — something like 58 or 60 per cent of the vote.

"Perhaps I got more support from the younger people on Bay Street than I did from those who are older and more inflexible in their thinking."

"Undisguised Approval" As Gordon Quits Finance

TORONTO (CP)—The resignation of Walter Gordon as finance minister was greeted today with undisguised approval by most Toronto businessmen, many of whom had feuded with him while he was in office.

Several said, however, it is unfair to blame one man for unpopular policies adopted by the cabinet and government. They added that it will be necessary to wait to see exactly changes if any his successor makes before trying to estimate what effect his departure might have on the economy of the country.

Most businessmen declined to be quoted by name, but one construction industry official noted that although Mr. Gordon's 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials and production equipment had been blinded "it could now is becoming acceptable.

"Someone has to pay taxes and certainly the tax has not affected the amount of construction going on in Canada—that one is working at capacity," he said.

Another official, however, said Mr. Gordon's resignation was "one of the best things that's ever happened to Canada."

Senior officials of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were in Japan on a trade mission, but one spokesman noted it had consistently demanded withdrawal of the 11-per-cent sales tax and added it would be fair to hope the new minister would repeal it as soon as possible.

He said the tax seriously interfered with industry efforts to modernize their plants with equipment—something of vital importance in Canada's international competitive status.

One official source said the attacks on Mr. Gordon follow the accepted line of Canadian politics that the finance minister be made the sacrificial goat.

"Some people seem to have the incredible idea that the finance minister is solely responsible for measures introduced in his name" he said.

"They seem to forget that these measures have to be okayed by the cabinet and also the minister often has to go along with the cabinet on policies he doesn't necessarily approve of."

confiscate passport documents issued or renewed by the Rhodesian regime.

Jones noted that other actions by Britain—such as the ban on imports of Rhodesian tobacco and sugar—had already been carried out under existing statutory powers.

Jones said the illegal regime in Rhodesia to give to the people a new constitution — a move which he described as "the grave aspect of this rebellion."

He added: "We have not yet seen the document, but it would seem clear that one of its objects is evidently to usurp the authority of the United Kingdom government and the sovereignty of Parliament."

"There is abundant authority for the conclusion that conduct of this kind that has taken place is treasonable."

Meanwhile, there was a possible split in Britain's united front on the independence issue because of some rumbling in the opposition Conservative party over sanctions against Rhodesia.

Conservative party leader Edward Heath was reported strong pressure from some of his shadow cabinet to modify his public support for Prime Minister Wilson's handling of the independence crisis.

Some urged him at a private party meeting Thursday night to accept the condemnation of tough economic sanctions imposed against Rhodesia but said he would not be outflawed white rigime.

Heath indicated in a television speech that he may be critical of the ban on Rhodesia's tobacco exports to Britain as a mainstay of the colony's economy.

Wilson was anxious to maintain the British Commonwealth and he went out of his way in a nationwide television broadcast Wednesday night to say that sanctions "have not been taken in any punitive sense."

The prime minister emphasized: "We shall need the wisest counsels to ensure that those measures are taken, and only those measures are taken, which can best bring about a peaceful return to the rule of law and to democratic development in Rhodesia."

But Wilson lashed out at the Rhodesian government, terming it a "group of small and frightened men" who were setting up a police state.

Legion Banquet Speaker Suggests Members Secure Housing Units for Elderly

Nearly 100 persons attended the Royal Canadian Legion's annual Remembrance Day dinner last night at Legion Headquarters on Pinnacle Street.

Guest speaker, Noble Drew, Director, Homes for the Aged Branch, Ontario Department of Public Welfare, suggested the Belleville Legion could establish housing units here for elderly veterans and their families under the Elderly Persons' Housing Aid Act.

"There are a total of 234 units provided by your Royal Canadian Legion in four widespread areas of the Province of Ontario. The provincial grant toward the capital cost of these units totalled $117,000.

"It is my personal opinion Legion who have constructed that the four branches of the Legion for the elderly, i.e. Fort William, North Bay, Ottawa and Toronto, not only honor and respect their fallen comrades, but go beyond this, showing honor and respect for those who are still with us.

"Under the charitable institutions Act, it is possible that such an organization as the Provincial Command for Ontario of the Royal Canadian Legion could sponsor and operate a home, providing care for those veterans, who can no longer care for themselves: since they have the companionship and good fellowship of their comrades, both male and female.

PROVINCE TO CONTRIBUTE

"Under this program, the Province of Ontario will contribute $2,500 per bed toward the capital cost of a new building and 75 per cent of the operating cost up to a ceiling of $4 per day.

"Old soldiers never die—they just fade away, but for Legion sake, if they must fade away, let us have a home where they fade to be one where tender loving care can be available to make the fade as easy as possible.

"The Lindsletter is claimed to have said on the arrival of his fifth grandchild, "I don't mind being called a grandfather, I just can't get used to living with a grandmother."

"Experts in the field have stated time and again that there is no disgrace is being old. That is a time of life to enjoy and perhaps look forward to many things that can be done that were impossible during the period we spent in reaching this stage. This is good thinking, but my personal thoughts on the matter are, don't rush me into it.

"I believe we should plan toward this period of our lives but this does not necessarily mean that I have to look forward to it with glee and say to myself, 'Gee, I wish old age would hurry along.'

"Don't get me wrong—I'm not saying that old age cannot or should not be enjoyed, but I do feel we all must consider and plan for this period to certainly enjoy it as much as we are physically, mentally and financially able."

In other business at the dinner, Norm Bailey was presented with the Legion's 35-year service pin.

Two Kingston Youths Fined

Failure to have a car ownership permit started a minor explosion at Kingston Traffic Court ended for two Kingston youths before Magistrate T. Y. Wills Friday.

Police early Thursday morning were called to investigate a disturbance on Parker Street, found 19-year-old Donald Laplante in charge of a car with other young people — including Russell Tyner, 20.

Officers became suspicious apparently when Laplante could not produce his car permit and took the car keys while checking his ownership. At this, Laplante said, he thought police were taking his car.

He swung at an officer while Tyner began shooting.

Today Laplante was fined $25 for striking a police officer and Tyner $10 for creating a disturbance. Both pleaded guilty.

years as trade minister, provide the background for the challenging finance post. They suggest trade might be the portfolio he'll choose.

Mr. Sharp sits for Toronto Eglinton, the seat held for 18 years by Donald Fleming, who was minister of finance in John Diefenbaker's Conservative government in 1957 until 1962 when he became justice minister.

If Mr. Sharp takes on the challenging finance portfolio it will be in keeping with his whole career. He has been establishing hard things most of his life, starting at 14 when he went to work to help support his family in his native Winnipeg.

He left school to go to work but remained in high school and his University of Manitoba graduation mostly by night school classes and correspondence courses. Then he went on to post-graduate studies at the London School of Economics.

In 1942, he came to Ottawa and joined the civil service in the finance department where he spent nine years, first as assistant to the deputy minister and later as director of the economic policy division.

In 1951 he switched to the trade department as associate deputy minister, leaving the government service in 1958 to become a vice-president of Brazilian Traction Light and Power Co., an international utilities firm with its head office in Toronto.

In 1962 he plunged actively into politics, running against Mr. Fleming in Eglinton in the June 18 election. He lost by 760 votes. Mr. Fleming didn't contest the 1963 election and Mr. Sharp won by a wide margin. He was re-elected Monday.

the wake of the announcement was that Trade Minister Sharp, who became acting minister of finance, would be appointed to succeed his Toronto colleague. Another name prominently mentioned was Robert H Winters, the one-time Liberal works minister, elected in Toronto's York West riding Monday after an eight-year absence from the Commons.

HAS THREE VACANCIES

The resignation leaves Mr. Pearson with three vacancies to fill. Agriculture Minister Harry Hays and Mines Minister J. Watson MacNaught were defeated in Monday's election. The Liberals have no members from Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Mr. Gordon has been considered one of the main architects of Liberal policy since 1958, when the party returned only 49 members in the Commons.

Mr. Pearson said in his letter that "no single person has done more, indeed I do not know of anyone who has done as much, to restore the fortunes of our party from the low point of 1958 to a position which resulted in our victory of 1963 and the defeat of the attempts of the opposition parties to reverse that victory in 1965."

The prime minister tried to talk Mr. Gordon into remaining in the cabinet. "You know how much I regret that decision and my inability to persuade you to take another cabinet post where the responsibilities would be lighter and more continuous as they have been in finance. In the circumstances I can only admire but to accept your resignation."

The friendship between the two men goes back to Mr. Pearson's first days as leader when Mr. Gordon offered him his support. It was the beginning of work as chairman of the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects. He worked with the party behind the scenes until 1962, when he was elected to Toronto Davenport and became the Liberals' finance critic.

WAS KEY MAN

When the Liberals were returned with a minority government in 1963, Mr. Gordon was one of the key men in the first "sixty days of decision." His budget, and the subsequent battle, overshadowed everything else in those first two months. As a result of the pressures, he was forced to cancel one important clause and modify another.

His resignation was demanded by an irate opposition, and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker charged him with a "flagrant departure from consistent budgetary practice." The prime minister stoutly defenced his colleague.

Mr. Gordon has been involved in controversy many times since he entered politics. His book Troubled Canada has been frequently criticized by the opposition, and he ran into a storm of criticism over interpretations given his commission reports on the Maritimes. More recently, some members of the Canadian business community have criticized the minister's economic policies.

The prime minister was always quick to defend him. He said in Wallaceburg, Ont., Oct. 26 that "he is going to be elected again and he is going to be minister of finance."

MADE DECISION EARLY

While there was no hint around Ottawa that Mr. Gordon's resignation was in the offing, an aide said the minister decided during the campaign that if the Liberals didn't get a majority of seats, he would quit the cabinet. The 129 Liberal seats—prior to the service vote—meant the party was four short of a majority.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said Thursday night he respects Mr. Gordon's integrity for admitting blame in bringing on the election. "It was very poor judgment and advice."

Creditiste Leader Caouette said he thinks Mr. Pearson asked the finance minister to resign.

"He (Mr. Gordon) was the one responsible for the election being called at his time and the prime minister and the others blamed him, I am sure."

"They presented him with a nice little gift."

DRAWING LAUGHS by drawing analogy with his personal political situation Robert Temple receives ANAF life-membership from president J. R. Boyle at Remembrance Day dinner.

ANAF Veterans Honor Robert Temple With A Life Membership

Robert Temple rounded off a Belleville Remembrance Day veterans' banquet as guest speaker last night with a speech on the Canadian scenes — then shattered the formality of the occasion by turning a serious joke against himself in his present political predicament.

The Liberal MP in the last House is presently awaiting tomorrow's announcement of the overseas vote to possibly offset the Conservative majority marked up against him in Monday's election.

At the end of his speech last night to the city's Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans Association, he was presented with a lifelong membership in the organization — to which he has personally belonged for years.

ANAF president J. R. Boyle noting only five or six such memberships had ever been presented locally, pinned an emblematic ribbon on Mr. Temple's lapel.

Then, as he went, to attach the membership-pin and the veterans rose in applaud, the pin refused to open. Mr. Boyle made several attempts to lodge it, dropped it, picked it up and tried again.

As the audience started to shift uncomfortably, Mr. Temple resolved the situation in laughter as he suddenly quipped: "This is taking as long as the service vote to get in there."

Another, in more serious tone, he suggested that Remembrance Day should be a statutory holiday.

The federal government already has enacted such legislation within its own jurisdiction, he said.

"And I hope that this will be extended to the provincial jurisdiction as well."

PAY RESPECT TO PAST

He said flippancy and scorn once existed in certain circles in Canada toward Remembrance Day and the sacrifices it symbolized.

This, however, no longer exists.

"I may sound very trite, I may sound very mundane, but we are gathered here now to pay respect to the past."

"From those sacrifices that Canadians made has emerged the great country of Canada which has taken its place in the councils of the world and which is respected and listened to and asked for advice."

Mr. Temple, who spoke out in the last House for more aid to Canada's Hong Kong veterans, mentioned their plight and focussed attention on present affairs in the Far East.

In Viet Nam, he told the veterans "much has been said that the United States should stop being international policemen."

"It would be very nice indeed . . . if we didn't have to have policemen, municipally and otherwise."

But policing meant law and order and world peace "is not going to be accomplished by saying let's pull out and let the Americans pull out and everything will be fine."

"It's not very many years ago that the situation existed much the same in Eastern Europe. This is one of the big reasons why the United States is in Viet Nam today. We're determined to be strong so that another world war will not erupt about us."

PREVENTED WAR

Were the U.S. to quit Viet Nam now its neighbors from India and Japan might be engulfed by communist China and its agencies.

"This is the lesson surely, we've learned over the years."

The various alliances to which Canada has been a party have "very successfully" prevented war, said Mr. Temple.

Since the alliance existed no countries have fallen to communism "and that's the reason why the peace has been kept."

A member of the first Commonwealth defence commission, Mr. Temple paid tribute to the modern Canadian serviceman.

In many parts of the world "they are risking their lives—and sometimes giving their lives—in the cause of Western freedom."

Chairman of the meeting was ANAF Dominion president Jack Lundberg, of Belleville.

Among other speakers was George Christopher, who attended the International Veterans' Conference in Switzerland with Mr. Lundberg earlier this year.

At the conference, said Mr. Christopher, he had been told by representatives from other nations how highly Canada was regarded as a peacekeeper.

"It made men feel mighty, mighty proud to be a Canadian at that time and also that our forces were doing the job they were sent to do."

"Unless the job is not so much to fight battles as to keep other people from fighting them," he told his fellow veterans. "And it's a tougher job than actually doing the fighting."

"I for one am very happy that Canada is first and foremost as far as the United Nations is concerned to supply those peacekeeping forces."

ARDA Grant Approved for Authority

Continuation of Ontario's Moira River Conservation Authority ARDA program of retirement of submarginal agricultural land for forestry purposes, has been approved jointly by federal forestry minister Maurice Sauve, and provincial minister William A. Stewart.

The project enables the Moira River Authority in the counties of Hastings and Lennox-Addington to obtain a Federal-Provincial ARDA grant of 75 per cent of the cost of acquiring submarginal agricultural land for forestry and other related uses. The land is placed under a long-term agreement with the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests for planting and management.

The program of land acquisition is estimated to cost $60,000 over the five-year period of the ARDA agreement ending March 31, 1970.

The determination of the land required for this program is based on the conservation report of the Moira River watershed prepared by the Ontario Department of Planning and Development in 1955 with the agricultural capability section of the Canada Land Inventory, in 1963.

185,000 PLANTS THIS YEAR

Mr. George Wishart, chairman of the Moira River Authority, said today that the Authority had been purchasing reforestation property for some time with the assistance of ARDA grants.

He said the approval granted by the federal forestry department and the Ontario Department of Agriculture means the Authority would try to step up its marginal land purchases providing they could be acquired at a reasonable price.

The Authority has 13,804 acres of reforestation under management by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, which has planted 2,856,255 trees, including 185,000 trees planted this year.

Chips Are Down in Africa

With Premier Ian Smith's unilateral—and to all intents and purposes, illegal—declaration of independence, the white minority government in Rhodesia has stepped off the brink in a move that has profound significance for the African continent and for the world.

Africa will never be the same again, the Commonwealth will never be the same and the consequences at this time cannot be fully measured.

Britain has ruled out military action, but the results of promised economic sanctions may be severe.

Meanwhile, by authority of the Queen as head of the Commonwealth, the British governor in Rhodesia has issued an order suspending the authority of Premier Smith and his government —an edict which, in the absence of military action, cannot be enforced.

What happens now is anybody's guess. The situation is almost without parallel. The only precedent, ironically, is the American Declaration of Independence · 1776.

Now that the step has been taken one immediate result will be a strengthening of the already close ties between Rhodesia on the one hand and Portugal (which controls neighboring Mozambique —as well as Angola) and South Africa. These lines must now, of necessity, draw more closely together for both economic and military assistance.

Portugal is likely to supply Rhodesia with oil. There is a refinery in Lourenco Marques on the Mozambique coast and a 187-mile pipeline is being built from Beira in Mozambique to Umtali in Rhodesia. Supplies would probably come from South Africa as well.

Another touch of irony, where Portugal is concerned, is that this country is Britain's oldest ally. · Any help it extends to Rhodesia cannot help but weaken this traditional link.

What of the cause of African nationalism? Clearly, Rhodesia represents a setback. As in South Africa, many Negro leaders have been placed under detention. Now, with independence, invalid as it is on paper, more repressive measures can be expected as the Negro cause is driven further underground.

Guerrillas have been operating in both Mozambique and Angola for some years. Defence of these territories has cost more than 700 Portuguese lives since 1961. What we are probably about to witness is an extension of African guerrilla warfare into Rhodesia, and possibly years of turmoil and savagery. The chips are now down in Africa and the future fraught with danger.

Mind Over Matter

People are tougher then they know, and the human frame of sterner mettle than many give it credit for. Granted there are numberless people who do think they are ill in the manner of the hypochondriac. But such people should take heart.

For example, an Ottawa medical man, Dr. J. E. Devlin, says that barring complications a month should be the optimum limit for convalescence from surgery, no matter how big or intricate the operation.

Dr. Devitt, addressing colleagues at a fall refresher course, said: "The patients are so confused by pressures and superstitions that they prepare themselves for being sick a long time and it is hard to break the habit."

He said children recover faster because "they don't know they are supposed to be sick."

Another reason for optimism in last week's statement by Dr. Henrietta Banting that the survival rate in cancer is increasing over the years. She attributed this to "refinements in treatment techniques and the increasing public awareness of the importance of early detection."

In another area—that of heart trouble—traditional theories that the patient must take it easy have been debunked. When the noted New Zealand athletic trainer, Arthur Lydiard, was in Canada recently with former triple champion Peter Snell, he told of many men with heart conditions whose health improved · markedly after they embarked on physical training schedules.

The Blackout

The obvious lesson of the big power blackout Tuesday evening is that means must be devised to ensure it never happens again. The fact that such an occurrence was thought impossible is all the more reason for getting to the bottom of this extraordinary failure of an essential service.

That there was apparently no loss of life or undue increase in crime during the blackout was sheer good luck. One thing that comes to mind, if a blackout of this nature, affecting almost the entire eastern part of the continent, can occur in peacetime, what sort of chaos would ensue in the event of a nuclear attack?

Back up systems, to ensure power maintenance in the event of an emergency may be costly. However, Tuesday's episode has shown that where they do not exist already, they must now be installed.

And now–On With The Dance

CPR's Emphasis on Freight

Toronto Star

The Canadian Pacific Railway is showing a depressing lack of foresight and imagination in downgrading passenger train traffic on its lines to the point where freight may soon take over the entire system.

CPR chairman N. R. Crump says he can "see no future in rail passenger traffic." And yet the United States has just started a multi-million program to develop rapid inter-city passenger trains and other countries already have some.

CPR, of course, argues that railways throughout North America are losing money on their passenger services. Trains can carry only about three per cent of all intercity passengers, with the rest taking to the highways or going by air.

Does this indicate that trains are outmoded as a means of public transportation? No, this merely proves that the public is no longer willing to accept a 19th-century inventing run with a 19th-century mentality.

It's not that they haven't got the technology or the financial resources. They have been able, for example, to do an excellent job in modernizing freight services — now highly profitable for all railway companies. It's only the public that has been short-changed.

The C.N., following the example of some American and overseas lines, is now trying to reverse the trend. But just compare this with the attitude of the Canadian Pacific.

When early this year, for instance, the CPR announced that it would spend a million dollars to rebuild and beautify 700 passenger cars, the CP announced on the very next day that it would spend five million dollars on 150 new refrigerator cars. Canadian Pacific freight salesmen were told: "get money to list their needs; if we haven't the cars to handle their products, we'll design new ones." Anything for freight; nothing for passengers.

But fast and convenient passenger trains appear to be the only solution to the commuting problems of the "supercity" — the spread of metropolitan areas toward each other. And high-speed trains can gain time over air travel within a 300-400 mile radius.

Japan, for example, has electric express trains which travel the 320-mile run between Tokyo and Osaka at an average speed of 125 miles an hour. It is, according to passengers, "the closest thing to jet travel on the ground" — except that the ground trip takes less time.

There is a real future for passenger trains. And the CPR — which had the foresight to build the trans-continental line in spite of all the difficulties a century ago — shows poor judgment now in trying to get out of the passenger business altogether.

Sparing Rod Is Safer

Peterborough Examiner

An irate Guelph father bit one boy in the mouth, breaking four front teeth, because he thought the lad had been fighting with his son. In fact, another boy had been involved in the fight with the man's son and the mistake cost him $1,029 in damages.

There is no quarrel with the judgment. Irate fathers cannot be allowed to break teeth indiscriminately. But the case has some food for mind in the changed attitude of society with regard to child-adult relationships.

Even if the father had struck the offending boy, that boy's parents could have brought charges and would have made an excellent chance of seeing a conviction.

In times not long past, adults took quite a different attitude to youthful misdemeanors. And it would pay five million dollars on 150 new refrigerator cars. Canadian Pacific freight salesmen were told: "get money to list their needs; if we haven't the cars to handle their products, we'll design new ones." Anything for freight; nothing for passengers.

Strictly Personal

We Can Learn From Our Enemies

Suppose that an editorial in the Communist newspaper, "Pravda," said the secret resources of the United States have been so ruthlessly exploited by real estate developers, by exploiters, by the raw material extractors and other private interests, that relatively few stretches of unspoiled, high-quality, esthetic natural environments are left along the nation's waterways or anywhere else."

We would look upon this as typical Soviet propaganda, wildly exaggerated, and bitterly slanted against the "private interests." Our initial reaction would be to rebut this unqualified attack upon us.

In point of fact, the sentence quoted comes from a recent editorial in the New York Times, a highly respected and one of the bastions of the Establishment in the U.S. As such, the statement was calmly received and given thoughtful attention by readers.

A long time ago, Don Marquis wrote: "An idea isn't responsible for who believes in it." We have yet to learn this lesson. A statement by a Klan leader or a Communist, by a civil rights worker or a pacifist, will be judged more by the source than by the content. The intrinsic truth or falsity of the statement is usually obscured by its origin.

This is the height of folly on our part. We can often learn more from our enemies than from our friends; those who disagree with us can, in many cases, help us broaden our own viewpoint and escape from a "closed system" of thinking that tends to entrap most of us.

We know this is true in personal relations. The astringent comment by someone who does not like us may reveal an unattractive part of our personality that we are unaware of, and that our friends would never disclose, even if they saw it.

Likewise, in social and political matters, if we take occasion only to like-minded people, we will hear nothing but what we want to hear, we will merely be confirming our prejudices and comforting our preconceptions. This is why any private club is so insular and so stultifying, whether it is a club of reactionaries or revolutionaries.

When we refuse to listen to our adversaries, or automatically discount their comments as "propaganda," we have relinquished a valuable tool for self-discovery and self-improvement. The best argument for full freedom of speech is a practical one: that clamping down on unpopular sentiments is as self-destructive, in the long run, as listening only to doctors who tell you that you are well, and repressing those who suggest you are ill.

Irish Coffee With a Smile

Sunday Times

Mrs. Pamela Crouch, of Mill Hill, caught the 7.30 a.m. express from Dublin to Rosslare. Once aboard, she asked the guard for the refreshment car. There was no refreshment car, the guard said, and agreed it was a scandal. But he would try to help.

He persuaded the driver to stop the train at Dun Laoghaire (as in "leery"). The buffet there was closed. So the train stopped again at Greystones. Again the buffet was closed.

Mrs. Crouch leaped out at the next station, Bray, but the buffet was again locked.

By this time, with three unscheduled stops, the express was running late.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said the guard. "The express coming the other way stops at the next station. It has a restaurant car. We'll get the coffee off them."

The Rosslare express edged itself into position beside the restaurant car. The driver leaned across and banged on the frosted windows. When a waiter leaned out he requested a cup of coffee. The waiter refused.

"Then we'll have to wait for the relief driver," said the guard. The relief driver had a billyrad full of hot sweet coffee. He gave Mrs. Crouch a big mugful, and refused all payment.

"I like Irish trains," says Mrs. Crouch.

Better Off As Shortstop

New York Times

Most symphony orchestras in the United States pay their musicians about $100 a week and offer them work for only 30 to 40 weeks a year. The musicians have to take other jobs, usually giving music lessons and working at odd jobs. The musical season is comparable in length to the major league baseball season, but salaries are not comparable. In the United States it is a wise mother who raises her boy to be a shortstop instead of a cellist.

Hard Yawn Can Cause Dislocation of Jaw

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Several months ago I yawned and there was a tiny noise in the jaw area. Then the side of my face, near the ear, began to pain like a toothache.

My doctor checked and advised me to see my dentist, who took X-rays but could find nothing wrong. He did say that the jaw might be dislocated but that it would probably return to normal eventually.

The jaw still seems to be out of place. Even though the pain has subsided, I have to be careful how I chew. What do you suggest? — Mrs. R. C.

This annoying business of having your jaw crack is by no means unusual. The question is how much pain results and for how long. A hard yawn can cause a temporary dislocation of the jaw, stretching the joint capsules and leaving a lot of tenderness after the dislocation has been corrected — or has corrected itself. (A comforted dissociation is unbearably painful.)

This sort of temporary dislocation and subsequent pain occurs often enough so that some elaborate studies have been made. In one such study, it was found that about 40 percent of cases of jaw pain (and crackling) were due to problems of the teeth and abnormalities of chewing. Thus your dentist's advice to see your dentist was very sound.

About 20 percent more of the cases were caused by joint disease (rheumatism, gout, etc.).

In the rest, no specific cause could be ascertained. It may have been just too big a yawn, or the jaw might have been out of position at the moment of strain, or some such thing. Whatever the cause, when the joint capsules are stretched, they can stay sensitive for quite a while.

It may be, Mrs. R. C. that your jaw will gradually return to normal. The lack of pain is an excellent sign. However, if you have any doubts, then have another look to see whether either of the two main causes is at work. Careful examination to make sure that a faulty "bite" isn't pushing your jaws slightly out of proper alignment, or X-rays of the jaw joint proper, to see if there are any signs of arthritic or similar disease.

Dear Dr. Molner: Enclosed are 20 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a copy of your booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." Can I get back to normal after having taken too many laxatives? — R. B. —

The booklet will explain — and yes, you certainly can return to normal. Depending on how long you have been using laxatives instead of letting nature take charge, you may have to be patient for a time before your rhythm returns, but return it will.

Dear Dr. Molner: Would minute amounts of calomine lotion ingested more or less daily, be injurious? Would they account for a prolonged bout of diarrhea? — V. F. P.

I cannot imagine why you would take this lotion internally. That isn't what it is for. And how small are the "minute" amounts?

Calomine lotion is excellent for the external treatment of various itchy skin conditions.

Not all calomine mixtures are the same. The base, however, is zinc oxide, known to have been used in the past as an astringent for the digestive tract. I don't know of any single reason for using it for that purpose now. The lotion also contains lime water as well as other materials to help keep the zinc oxide in suspension.

Some mixtures contain milk of magnesia, which has a laxative effect if taken internally. Others may contain phenol (carbolic acid) So my answer is yes, continued taking of the lotion may be dangerous, and it could cause diarrhea. Keep it on the outside of the body, where it belongs.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1915—the sheik of Persia declared himself neutral in the war, but ordered the Persian army to the Allies; the Serbian army regrouped around Monastir to bar the Bulgarian advance and the Ibar River in the face of advancing Germans and Bulgarians.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940—British bombers attacked Duesseldorf, Germania; Russia and Germany signed a trade agreement in Moscow arrived in Berlin for conferences with Hitler and other German officers; officials in London announced 4,354 civilians had been killed in air raids on the United Kingdom in October.

Consumer Credit

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

One of the consequences of the default of Atlantic Acceptance Corporation has been renewed concern about the awesome rise in the level of consumer credit in Canada. As deferred payment plans proliferate, and everything from canneries to European vacations can be purchased on "time," we are reminded of the facetious, but prophetic advice offered by Artemus Ward more than 100 years ago: "Let us all be happy and live within our means," he said, "even if we have to borrow the money to do it with." —

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 12th, 1945

Already there is talk about municipal organizations next year. The time of voting may yet seem afar off but though that is true, the weeks will glide by swiftly and almost before it can be realized nomination day will be at hand with election day just around the corner. Citizens are being suggested as possible candidates for municipal offices and if the interest already aroused provides any criterion, there is every assurance that there will be spirited local contests for office.

It is an opportunity of service right at home. The municipal field ought to be of special interest to citizens young as well as older. For the municipal field ought to be of special interest to citizens young as well as older. For the municipal field ought to be of special interest to citizens young as well as older. For the Fall Rains Almost Fill Dam Reservoir

Double the amount of normal fall rainfall in the northern reaches of the Moira watershed has almost filled water storage facilities at the Lingham Lake reservoir, according to Graham Bell, chairman of the water advisory committee of the Moira River Authority.

Mr. Bell said that the reservoir now stood at 15¼ feet or within two feet of the spring run-off level. Lingham Lake is on Black River about 20 miles north of Madoc where more than double the amount of normal rainfall was received during September and October.

Mr. Bell said it would be necessary to further open the Lingham Lake dam gate valve to bring the lake level down so next spring's run-off could be accommodated.

Key to Knowledge

Next week is Young Canada Book Week.

At a time when book reading has become to many a thing of the past, having a week in honor of the practice is going against the grain.

There seems to be no time now for people to read. There are too many other things to do, too many other places to go and too many other places to see. Yet, people should realize that through books, they can do and see and go all the places they dream of, and for practically no expense at that.

If people, all people, would only use their library.

A publicity release on Young Canada Book Week said, "a very wise person once wrote, 'it is possible that a child may pass from infancy to maturity without encountering one book that will satisfy him in his search for experience and pleasure'. This is a tragedy Young Canada Book Week seeks to avert.

"During the week, librarians, teachers and booksellers work their hardest to bring books and children together. Every child needs the time and opportunity to enjoy the pleasures of reading. Nobody is ever alone who can share the experience of a good book. Bear these thoughts in mind and do your share to introduce children and young people to the unlimited joys of books and reading."

The Belleville Public Library has cordially invited parents to bring their children to visit the children's library during the special week.

Young Canada Book Week offers parents a wonderful opportunity to really do something constructive for their children and for that matter, for themselves.

Most people take the ability to read for granted. Yet that ability is the most essential part of our existence. Without it, knowledge is almost out of reach.

Books offer an infinite variety of topics. And what is more important is they offer all points of view on all topics. We learn by reading. But if what we read is strictly one point of view then we do not learn as much as we could. On the other hand, if we encourage our young people to read all points of view, they will learn much more and if parents have instilled in their children the vital art of being able to distinguish between right and wrong, then young people will be able to weigh both sides and make conclusions.

Dr. William Kaye Lamb, patron of Young Canada Book Week commented, "No school or university can teach young people to day the things that changed circumstances, new knowledge and the advance of technology will make it essential for them to know tomorrow. They themselves must be ready and able to keep their knowledge and their skills adequate and up to date. They will find that books and reading are indispensable for that purpose, and that any time they may have spent acquiring skill in using them will pay handsome dividends."

Dr. Lamb concludes, "No skill Young Canada can acquire is more important—and none will be more important in the future — than the ability to read, and to use that ability for both pleasure and profit."

He is right.

And in Belleville we are fortunate our library facilities are what they are. The Corby Library and the Branch Library are excellent libraries featuring books and materials on every subject.

Book reading develops in people not only the ability to research and acquire knowledge by simple rote, but the talent of thinking . . . of reasoning things out. Books stimulate the brain into working.

If our young people are to go on to higher education, and indeed are to be continually educated, they must be trained to read properly.

And how can parents, in full conscience, ignore their responsibilities to their children's futures in the area of developing reading ability?

For that matter, how can a parent ignore his own responsibilities to himself and not practise reading?

Belleville has excellent library facilities. They are there for your use. Use them.

Fire Destroys Stirling Barn

RAWDON — A frame barn owned by John Klompmaker of Stirling which was converted a few years ago for use as a hennery, was destroyed by fire Thursday evening.

The hennery was empty at the time of the blaze but firemen were able to save a pony and some pigs from the basement of the barn before the building was destroyed.

Today Stirling Fire Chief Graham Moock said the cause of the blaze was unknown and that the loss had not yet been determined.

Stirling and Rawdon Fire Departments answered the alarm and were able to save a nearby hennery and other buildings at the edge of the village.

Mr. Klompmaker had ordered several thousand young chicks and these were to have been delivered to the barn today.

"A budget is just a sneaky way to keep a wife from having any money."

Young Belleville Couple Finds Life in Germany Novel and Interesting

(Ed. Note: Following is an interesting letter from Mrs. R. G. (Mary Anne) Day to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. (Bill) Bateman, 14 Holloway Street. Mrs. Day recently moved to Soest, Germany with her husband, Lieut. Day '56 the Royal Canadian Army.)

66 Westonhell Weg,
Soest, Germany,
October 21, 1965

Germany is much more European than I had ever imagined. The houses are made of plaster (usually dull brown, grey or green shades) with very steep peaked roofs; the roads are extremely narrow, the cars are all small and most often new; and the standard of living is low compared to that of North America.

The town of Soest is one of the oldest in Germany. One of its churches is nearly 2,000 years old. The main part of the town is so quaint it seems you are walking through a story book. Soest is completely surrounded by a stone wall and the streets all branch toward the centre of the town, market place is. The streets in the centre of town are so narrow that only the smallest cars dare to venture down them. All along the streets—side-by-side—are neat, peaked houses with colorful shutters and flower pots adorning the tiny windows.

Sundays in Germany, like in Canada, are family days, only to a much greater degree. The little Germany boys trot along beside their mothers and fathers in short leather pants and big sweaters whether the ten pensture is 40 or 70 degrees. The little girls wear long white stockings and aprons over their dresses the fathers and mothers look almost the same as Canadian fathers and mothers except they have better posture and seem to have more pride.

What is most amazing about Germany I think, is the proximity of industry and agriculture. Many of the homes in the centre of town over have farm fields beside them and chickens clucking around their front yards, whereas, outside the town you may see a large factory surrounded by fields of vegetables. Wherever there is water, there are ducks. You may even find them in mud puddles. The main crops grown here are sugar beets and cabbage. The vegetables you buy in a German grocery store are much smaller than those you buy in Canada.

VARIOUS CUSTOMS

The customs of the Germans seem rather unusual at first. Whenever you enter a conversation with a German, even when in his store, you shake hands. If you go visiting you shake hands when you arrive and when you leave. The Germans don't have parking meters —they just park their cars on the sidewalk. When they drive along the highway they think nothing of stopping along the side of the road to go to the bathroom. There are numerous other customs which I have yet to learn I imagine. These are just a few of Rod's and my observations since we arrived in Germany.

The trip over on the plane was fine except for one point when he went through a thunder storm. The main part of hour we all felt rather sick. No one ate much dinner. Other than that, it just seemed like riding on a train.

We arrived in Dusseldorf at 10.30 a.m. and immediately boarded a bus bound for Soest. The buses over here are very modern with tinted-glass roofs and windows. They are excellent for sightseeing.

When we got to Soest about three hours later we were taken to the Canadian Officers' Club where we stayed until Monday morning. By Sunday morning Ron and I were both very sick with colds from which we are still recuperating. We went for a walk around Soest on Sunday morning but spent nearly all the rest of our stay at the Officers' Club sleeping and trying to get over our colds.

NEW HOME

On Monday morning Major Owen and his interpreter took us to our new home to meet our landlady and get settled. We had strong doubts as to what our place would be like but were both sighed with relief after we had seen it. We have a large living and dining room combination with glass doors that open out onto a patio and a beautiful garden of roses and fruit trees. It is about the same size as our backyard at home. There is a statue of a little girl in the middle of the garden. We have a fireplace in the living room with imported tiles. Ron built one for Wolfe—and a large marble slab extending along the side of it. It is beautiful (as nearly as one of it) has class. The dining room suite is in black walnut. We have a china cabinet and with a pull-down lamp over it; a beautiful sideboard and cupboard with sliding doors in which to put our crystal and good things; and a huge walnut table with filing cabinet drawers inside it. There is rust velvet on the dining room chairs and a large oil painting hanging over the chesterfield. We even have a fireplace in the bedroom. It is very rich and European—at least Ron and I think so. Of course we have no central heat died. Some people may not find it quite so charming as we do.

The bedroom and kitchen are a slightly different story, but when we finish modernizing the bedroom, it should be something too. We have big plans. The kitchen is a riot with a European gas stove (it is very fast—much easier to burn potatoes) and no real fridge. The fridges over here are only half the size of the ones at home.

Hot water is a slight problem here. There is only one hot water tap in our apartment—that is in the kitchen, and the water is more lukewarm than hot. We have kept the furnace going without too much difficulty and the apartment is fairly warm. However, it is necessary to air the house out every morning which is rather cold process because the plaster walls make the house smell musty if you don't.

We have shutters on all the windows which we pull down before we go to bed, and that keeps the house lovely and warm They are also ideal for daytime sleeping. Another peculiar thing about German homes is that they keep keys in every door and cupboard. We have at least 25 keys in this apartment.

The couple upstairs seems quite nice. She is Canadian and home during the day so I have been talking to her.

MEET SCULPTOR

Herr and Frau Wolfe are wonderful. He is quite a famous sculptor. They had us over for drinks the other night and Herr Wolfe showed us his studio full of statues. For $1,000 each he would carve busts of Ron and me. Neither Herr nor Frau Wolfe speak English very well and we don't speak any German, but we managed to communicate quite well. They are very friendly people and always willing to help.

Yesterday was Ron's first day at work and he thinks he's going to like it here. He has been getting a ride with Wall Silvinsky and it takes only about six minutes to go back and forth. I inquired about supply teaching at the high school and there is a good chance that I may be able to work here. They are also giving night classes in German at the high school every Thursday night and I plan to start next week. I have to use my little German dictionary when I go shopping at the store next door.

We don't have a car yet but there are a lot of advertisements for sale that are very cheap, so we plan on buying one soon.

As far as social life goes, I am sure we can find plenty to do. The regimental has a curling club which Ron and I are thinking of joining. We would play on Friday nights. The Officers' Club holds dances on Saturday nights, and on Sunday nights they have an smorgasbord (which is supposed to be delicious) followed by a show. The whole thing costs about $3 for both of us. We are going with Walt and Bev on Sunday. There is also a theatre in the Belgic Camp just across the street that shows American movies every night. Our apartment is just perfect for entertaining, especially in the summertime with our patio. Between our working, our studying and our social life, we should be kept quite busy.

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH

The Women's Church Year

The November meeting of the W.C.V. was held in the Parish House on Wednesday. Mrs. Harold Crown presided and welcomed members and guests. The necessary business was passed to cover the Christmas welfare expenses. Members were asked to contribute gifts to the Mental Health Association for the Women's Hospital at Cobourg. Mrs. A. L. Gnaedinger thanked members for their contributions and support at the Hastings' Manor tea. Mrs. Mervin Jones presented the slate of officers for 1966 Year, Pres., Mrs. N. C. Fisher; 1st. Vice, Mrs. A. Port; 2nd vice, Mrs. V. Simonds; secretary, Mrs. M. Workman; treasurer, Mrs. G. Allen.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. A. S. Lewis who was in charge of the program. Mrs. Ransom presented a story on the life of St. Thomas the patron saint of architects. Our guest speaker, Mr. P. J. Beavis was introduced by Mrs. R. Boola. Mr. Beavis head of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board spoke on the necessity of preserving the three most precious natural resources water, air and land. If the public expects these commodities to last they must do all in their power to see that planning for their best possible use is carried out. There are six hundred sub-standard dwellings in Belleville and a small start has been made towards reducing this number. Forty subsidized housing units will be started in the near future.

A question and answer period followed in which Mr. Beavis explained that the large number of trees being cut down fell into three categories, diseased, dangerous and decayed. If the citizens wished to have these replaced they were the ones to do something about it. Let your representative know your wishes and pressure them to allot the Parks Board sufficient money to replace trees at a greater rate.

Mrs. A. S. Lewis thanked Mr. Beavis for a most informative and interesting talk. Mrs. W. S. Sine and her committee served a tasty lunch to close the meeting.

Ann Landers

No Reason to Delay Their Second Marriage

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a problem and since you caused it I hope you will straighten it out.

My husband passed away five months ago. This may sound terrible, but his death freed me from a living hell. We never had any children because he didn't want any. For 11 years I put up with his lying, drinking, gambling and philandering ways. On three separate occasions he brought women home to spend the night. I was quietly making plans to leave him when he was killed in an accident.

A long-time friend who lost his wife two years ago has asked me to marry him. I have ANN LANDERS said yes. He is a fine person and I want to be a mother to his two little girls.

Now — the trouble. I asked my clergyman how long it was proper for a widow to wait before she remarries. He said "At least one year." Then I wrote to you. Your reply was, "It's how you feel that counts."

Well, Ann, I feel like getting married tomorrow. Who is right, you or the clergyman? — DILEMMA.

DEAR DIL: People who go around collecting opinions should be prepared for a variety of answers. The "wait a year" custom is well and good if a widow wishes to pay real respect to her deceased husband. But why pay respect to 11 years of hell?

* *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I got married three months ago and already I am writing to Ann Landers. I think this is a bad sign.

Before we married Adelle she told me her mother would always come first in her life, no matter what. "Well, she's proving it.

My father-in-law's business takes him out of town every three weeks for two days. Adelle goes out, sleep with her mother whenever her father is out of town and I am left alone. I don't like this a bit and I have said so, but I might as well talk to the fire hydrant. Where do I stand? — HOUSTON.

DEAR HOUSTON: You stand second to your mother-in-law, which is exactly where Adelle told you you stood before you married her. So why are you surprised?

Buy a playpen for your mother-in-law and put it in the living room or the kitchen. Then nobody will be alone.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I didn't like your answer to "Crisis in Suburbia." A mother wanted to know if her sons were entitled to an increase in allowance because their father received a promotion and a pay raise. You said, "Yes — provided they take on extra chores and earn the increase."

I am a grandfather who is appalled at what is happening to the younger generation. I think it's disgraceful to pay children for doing what they should do. After all, they are a part of the family so why shouldn't they pitch in? Paying children for every little thing makes me sick. I say kids should help around the house because they live in the house and sleep there. That's reason enough. — THREE SCORE AND TEN.

DEAR THREE SCORE: Sorry, but the days are gone when you can give a kid a nickle and say, "Go have a good time." Children ought to have a little money to spend and to save.

Most kids today get an allowance for tying up the bathroom and hogging the telephone. I'm in favor of teaching children that there is some relationship between work and rewards. This can best be achieved by assigning specific chores and making it clear that the allowance is payment.

Are you at war with your parents? Do they have too much to say in your life?

Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

College Hill Bazaar Has Christmas Theme

Christmas was the theme on Wednesday afternoon when the members of College Hill U.C.W., assisted by other members of the congregation, held their annual bazaar and tea.

In a setting of Christmas garlands, poinsettias and silver Christmas trees U.C.W. president, Mrs. A. Dickens and Mrs. J. Vessey, wife of the minister, greeted the guests. Mrs. A. Kingston was the ticket convenor.

In Albert Hall the Explorer group had done the decorating, carrying out the theme in poinsettias and red Christmas stockings.

The home baking table convened by Mrs. D. MacMillan, featured bread and buns, tarts, pies and other kinds of goodies which were soon sold out.

The candy booth offered a tempting variety of home-made candy with Mrs. C. Smith and Mrs. C. Moore and Mrs. P. King in charge.

Embroidered pillow cases, mitts and aprons for all ages were sold by Mrs. C. Bailey, Mrs. D. Watson and Mrs. J. Rowe.

The doll booth, convened by Mrs. G. Wass, featured outfits for Barbie dolls, dressed baby dolls, quilts and evening dresses.

The white elephant table held a wide selection of articles which were sold by Mrs. D. Sine and Mrs. R. L. Vessey.

The handicraft table, convened by Mrs. L. Dafoe, assisted by Mrs. L. Byrd and Mrs. J. Barton, had many knitted articles, plastic piggy banks and novelties.

YOUNG PEOPLES' BOOTH

The Explorers' booth had Christmas favors, doll clothes, candy in boxes with Santa Claus faces made by the girls, and suckers covered with a poinsettia. These were sold by Mrs. A. Daniels, Mrs. D. Gelling and Mrs. C. Brown.

Mrs. G. Cannon and Miss Virginia Worden were in charge of the CGIT table where teddy bears, aprons, table centres and other gift articles were on sale.

The Cub and Scout booth was in the form of a country store where apples, vegetables and canned goods were sold by Mrs. L. Reynolds, Mrs. E. Fanton and Mrs. N. Fitzgerald.

Proceeding to the tea room the visitors were greeted and invited to tea by Mrs. R. Neal and Mrs. D. Hunter.

POINSETTIAS IN TEA ROOM

The tea room was beautifully decorated with silver bells hung from the ceiling and two poinsettia plants at the entrance.

The serving table was attractive with its Christmas centrepiece and silver services. Each tea table had a small replica of the centrepiece.

Those pouring tea during the afternoon were: Mrs. F. Ritz, Mrs. A. Treverton, Mrs. B. Stetabo and Mrs. J. Twiddy

The kitchen committee, headed by Mrs. A. Greenwood and Mrs. F. Walker supplied the guests with tea, sandwiches and cookies.

White Cane Club Holds Games Night

On Tuesday evening the White Cane Club met at Elmcrest Centre for an evening of recreation. President Vi Waite extended a welcome to the 24 members present and guests.

One minute's silence was observed in memory of the war dead.

Musical entertainment was provided by Artie Scott with his harmonica, accompanied by Ted Rowe at the piano.

The games enjoyed for the remainder of the evening were bowling, won by Doug Huffman, cribbage game won by Harvey Bailey, and euchre tables of euchre won by Betty Woods, Helen Wardbaugh, Harvey St. Onge and Artie Scott. These games were played with the aid of Braille cards having large figures and numbers.

Phil Burton played quiet music on his electric guitar while Elizabeth Edwards served lunch. Pat Baverstock expressed the appreciation of the club to the ladies and President Vi thanked Phil Burton and the drivers from the Lions Club.

Fashion Trends Ride to Fame On Movies

By PEGGY MASSUN

PARIS (Reuters) — Numerous recent Paris fashion trends have ridden to fame on waves of publicity evoked by successful movies.

Period and contemporary costumes from such pictures as Viva Maria, My Fair Lady, Harlow and The Knack are influencing everything, from sportswear to formal clothes and accessories.

Pierre Cardin spent three months on location in Mexico last year designing the costumes for Viva Maria. Subsequently, the "granny look" with long full skirts and ruffled turn-of-the-century shirtwaists emerged as a dominant trend in casual clothes worn on the French Riviera.

Marc Bohan of Dior combined the Middle Eastern - inspired themes of his last two collections in many of the clothes he created for Sophia Loren to wear in her film Arabesque.

Cecil Beaton's costumes for My Fair Lady are directly responsible for the current epidemic of ostrich feathers and the lavishly bejewelled and beaded evening sheaths.

The collections shown last July promptly produced numerous counterparts of My Fair Lady's Eliza Doolittle complete with egret feathers and wide choker collars made of pearls.

RECALL PAST ERA

Jean Harlow and the slinky bias-cut fashions of the 1930s have had a major impact on fashions.

The supple bias - cut crepe dresses, clunky buckled shoes, and shoulder - length platinum blonde wigs vividly recall the famous boudoir school of glamor.

Jacques Esterel shows all the formal clothes in his collection,

Successful Living
Happy Reducer Sings Praises of Regime

DEAR DORIS: I would like to pass on a suggestion to anyone wishing to lose weight. All it takes, gals, is some determination and common sense. I weighed 260 on New Year's Day 1965, with an appetite coming up which was a success, thank God! But the doctors wouldn't guarantee another if I didn't lose some fat.

Well, I am now 180 and feel wonderful. I didn't take one pill to help me. I just counted calories and ate high protein food. I was made fun of in many of the parties I attended, but thought: "You poor sapa, you should be doing what I'm trying to do only you don't know that so I'm not going to let your teasing stop me."

DORIS CLARK

Believe me I know what it means to go without cream, butter, cake, pies, doughnuts and candy, but I just shut my eyes and here I am. My clothes are all too large even to my shoes. I'll have to have my wedding ring made smaller and maybe my false teeth. (?) I am aiming for 160 pounds. — ON THE HOME STRETCH.

DEAR HOME STRETCH: More power to you! Many don't know that doctors experience great difficulty with excess fat when they operate. Not to mention the hazard to life and limb of being overweight. If you're overweight, someone else the will power to abut her eyes to pies and puddings.

Politics Mar Opening of World Contest

LONDON (AP) — Politics marred the opening of London's Miss World contest Thursday as word was received that Miss Spain, dark-eyed Alicia Borras, would not be allowed to compete.

Spanish officials pulled the 20-year-old beauty out of the contest when Miss World officials refused to let Gibraltar Via ales, the entry from Gibraltar.

The government of Gen. Francisco Franco claims Gibraltar, a British colony, is part of Spain and thus cannot have its own entry.

Thousands of failes away, in politically tense Salisbury, Miss Rhodesia, Lesley Bu a il a waited hours to depart for London.

A BOAC spokesman blamed the delay on "technical reasons" and said he noped he'd get aboard the next flight, s h e d u l e d to arrive Thursday morning, would arrive today.

Contestants from 48 other countries in the contest continued to arrive at London Airport to begin more than a week of hurry, interviews and competitions before the final selection of Miss World 1965 Nov. 19.

NOT ALLOWED TO SIT

MONTREAL (CP) — Singer Janet Stewart's husband is a courtierior so she has a particularly fine collection of clothes, but that has its drawbacks. In an interview here she refused to sit down, explaining: "Rudy always says, 'Never sit in your wardrobe.'" and added that she has become used to standing.

Susanna's Family Fare

ROLL UP TO SCRUB UP

Dear Readers: If it's twinges of conscience that are upsetting you — you know, that guilty feeling one gets at having to throw away great pieces of foil wrap after a single using"... cheer up, because peace-of-mind is right in the next paragraph:

Dear Susanna: Never throw away foil wrap just because it's no longer suitable for wrapping food. Instead, save the used pieces and roll them in a ball. You'll have a terrific pot scrubber that is capable of removing even badly burned-on food.

Here .s how to enclose a coin in a letter so that it won't slip around, and it won't be sticky from gummed tape and it won't be bulky from being folded in additional paper.

Turn up one corner of the bottom of your letter to make a triangle.

I keep a plastic squeeze bottle filled with cooking oil. Not only is it easier to handle than the large economical container that I buy, but a squirt or two in the breakfast egg pan will give just the right amount of oil — never too much. — Mrs. Marion Le Brash

. . . of course, as soon as we hear that old ship-fish trend the huge jug, right away we're almost sure we're going to get more oil than we need. — Susanna

SHORT SHIRTS?

Dear Susanna: When youngsters' cotton shirts become a little short I add a wide bean to them, thus forming a band, and place a couple of button holes close together with buttons for doing up snuggly in front. Results? Jac shirts! — N. W.

British Officials

sanctions which were imposed by Britain almost immediately after the break.

Censors strictly bottled up any word of the sanctions, which were regarded in Britain as likely to be ruinous to the Rhodesian economy.

Rarely before, and certainly never in Africa, has a country attained independence with so little fuss. There were no fireworks, no dancing in the streets, no crowd-gripping balcony orations.

TAKES REST

Smith, exhausted by the strain of weeks of almost non-stop cabinet meetings, vanished after his independence declaration until he reappeared for his champagne-waving cabinet attendance today. He was believed to have been resting in bed.

SEEM APATHETIC

White Rhodesians, shielded by strict censorship from angry world reaction, seemed amazingly apathetic to the crisis now confronting them.

Some white Rhodesians celebrated their new-found independence in bars and night clubs Thursday night, defiantly proclaiming their support for Smith.

One group staggered up a main city street chanting "Independent Rhodesia, independent Rhodesia."

The country continued calm and there were no signs of unrest in the Negro townships surrounding the capital. The Negroes seemed lethargic and almost apathetic as they faced the prospect of continued white supremacy.

SMITH IN CONTROL

Smith's white government seemed to be in full control of the situation as Rhodesia entered its second day of full independence.

Thursday the Rhodesian leader, with a portrait of the Queen at his back, signed the proclamation declaring Rhodesia independent.

"We will, I am sure, be able to face any difficulties which may occur, fortified by the same strength and courage which distinguished our forefathers in days gone by" he said.

Finance Minister John Wraith and Trade Minister George Rudland gave the first official Rhodesian indications of what difficulties are expected and what steps are being taken to face them.

Rhodesians were warned that they face the prospect of rationing if economic sanctions threatened by Britain and other countries are effective, Rudland said.

Wrathall announced that foreign exchange dealings have been suspended for a temporary period. Their resumption would be authorised in a day or so by the Reserve Bank of Rhodesia.

SET PRIORITIES

The first priority is to secure the balance of payments and so maintain international solvency, Wrathall said. The second was to tackle the internal problems that ensue, to sustain internal demand, and to deal with "urgent budgetary matters."

Control over imports and exports would be intensified and allocations of foreign currency for imports would be cut below the amounts envisaged when import control was introduced last week.

Exchange control would be tightened. Holiday allowances would be reduced to £100 ($300) from £300, non-cumulative, for each person annually. Automatic allocation of up to £20 a day for 21 days for business men would cease and each application be considered on its merits in future.

The post office would discontinue sales of money orders for payment outside Rhodesia.

Arrows of Friendship

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Of all the friendships in history, none was greater than Jonathan's friendship for David. Against the dark background of his father's insane jealousy of David, it shines out like a bright light. In spite of Saul's enmity toward David, "the soul of Jonathan was knit to the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul." (I Samuel 18:1 RSV) One of the dramatic moments in their friendship occurred when, by prearranged signal, Jonathan warned David to flee by shooting arrows beyond David's hiding place. (I Samuel 20:12-42)

Jonathan and David were two of a kind. Young, daring, idealistic, both distinguished themselves by their exploits against the Philistines. Jonathan showed his strength of character by resisting his father's attempts to break down his friendship for David. Repeatedly, he sought to reason with his father. Had Saul realized it, those efforts to reason with him were arrows of love shot to try to save him from himself.

MALIGNANT JEALOUSY

There can be no doubt that Saul's jealousy of David was pathological. It turned him at times into a raving maniac hurling his spear in uncontrollable rage at David or Jonathan, his own son. He was even willing to sacrifice one of his daughters to his jealousy, figuring that if one of them married David, the Philistines would hate David more because he was a son-in-law of the king.

The wonder is that Jonathan's friendship for David remained so firm in the light of his father's efforts to turn it into suspicion and hate. Saul was not only a poor king, he was a despicable father. By his jealous fits of rage, he set a bad example for his children. We hear much about juvenile delinquents, and all too little about delinquent parents. But parents can be delinquent, too, in failing to teach their children proper principles and attitudes, delinquent in the example they set for their children. How can children learn respect and love for others if they do not learn it in the home? What is a son to think when his own father insults his mother by calling him, "You son of a perverse, rebellious woman?" (I Samuel 20:30 RSV)

AN INSECURE KING

Much of Saul's jealousy was born of insecurity. Though David gave him no cause for it, he feared David as a possible usurper of the throne. Every new success of David, every new evidence of his popularity only served to deepen Saul's sense of insecurity. He tried to break up Jonathan's friendship for David by picturing him as a threat to the throne to which Jonathan should rightfully succeed.

This was the real test of Jonathan's friendship for David. It was only natural that he should want to inherit his father's throne. Saul played on this natural ambition if he could set up a conflict of interest in Jonathan's mind, and make him think of David as a competitor for the throne, perhaps his friendship for David would cool. But even this would not lessen Jonathan's love for David. He seems to have assumed that one day David would become the leader of Israel. Instead of resenting it, he wished David well. Like another great Israelite, he was willing to decrease that he one he loved might increase. (Jon 3:30)

The tragedy is that by his unsane jealousy, Saul deprived himself of so much he might have had. He split his family over the issue of love for David. He lost the undivided support of David's brilliance and courage. He dissipated the time and strength he needed to fight the real enemies of Israel by trying to destroy an imagined enemy. He lost the obedience of his son. He defeated himself long before he fell on his own sword to keep from being captured by the Philistines.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for November 14: "Jonathan", I Samuel 12:3 through 14:52; 18:1 through 20:42; 23:15-18; 31:-12: II Samuel 1:1-27.

The question might be raised as to whether Jonathan did right in obeying his father's demands that he give up his friendship for David. Recognizing Saul's burdens as king, recognizing the psychopathic nature of his jealousy, recognizing the worries he carried because of the threat of the Philistines, should Jonathan have submerged his own feelings and have given unquestioning obedience to his father? But Jonathan evidently felt there are some things a son should not be asked to do even by his own father. He should not be asked to descend to the level of suspicion and hate. He should not be asked to stand by in silence while his father threatens to commit murder. He must stand for what he believes to be right and good. So Jonathan goes down in history as a youth who stood for his principles in spite of opposing pressures from an enraged father.

A new type of snow tire.
It's not built just for snow.

Today, any good snow tire will get you through the snow.

But the fact is, a snow tire spends about 80% of its life on snowless roads. That's right, snowless roads. And snow tires can be pretty much of a nuisance when you're traveling down a snowless highway at a good clip. Not to mention how they feel on bumpy side roads.

That's why we built a new type of snow tire: the Dominion Royal Super Winteride.®

As a snow tire, the Super Winteride is a brute. It has the big, thick tread you need to go crunching through deep snow. But when the snow is plowed off the roads (which is usually right after a snowstorm) the Super Winteride doesn't behave the way you'd expect a snow tire to. Its tread is designed so that the sound frequencies cancel each other out. The result: a sound you can live with. And its ride is surprisingly soft and comfortable, right up there with "original equipment" tires in ability to absorb rough roads. In fact, in the Shell 4000 Rally, where cars were driven over some of the roughest roads (snowless roads, that is) in Canada, Super Winterides were used on the back wheels of the Ford Mustang that finished 11th out of 64 cars that started. In a nutshell, the Dominion Royal Super Winteride is a great snow tire when there's snow on the ground; a great all-round tire when there's no snow on the ground. You can't ask for much more than that. Dominion Royal

A snow tire spends most of its life on snowless roads.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Russ Whitfield and other Tweed District Lands and Forests Department officials, plus a coterie of conservation officers rubbed their eyes in amazement at the sight.

Last Friday and Saturday, Kalndar, the jumping-off spot of the deer-hunting fraternity "looked like Hollywood and Vine on a Saturday evening" with a column of trucks and cars pointing for the northland.

"All highways from Sharbot Lake, Tweed and Kaladar were jammed with the traffic," he said. "It looked like the political bigwigs were holding vote-getting fandangos where the deer and the antelope play."

By Sunday afternoon the woods had swallowed the colorful safaris. Fine weekend weather saw the nimrods busy cutting wood, cleaning camps, parking the grub and getting ready in general for the big day.

But the nor-westers' hush-dwellers got the brush-off from the weathermans as speaking guns. The rains deluged down at 10 a.m. and sent the trigger-men back to camp, tiddley-winks and sarsaparilla. Hunting was "wet" all day.

The rain didn't help depressions, swamps and creeks, already flooded by earlier rains. This affected to some extent travel on foot but on higher ground the conditions were good and dogging went fairly well.

Apparently there is plenty of venison on the hoof roaming the forest floors. Conservation officers reported many sightings (some of substantial number of the animals present throughout most areas of the district.

Hunter success for the first few days, so the hauls of 721 hunters checked, was 16.3 per cent, slightly lower than last year.

It seems the royal stags and their doe-fawns have indicated a yen for the Lingham Lake, Weslemkoon Lake and Madawaska River areas where reports state the hill has been the best so far.

Speaking of the Madawaska River all went very well in the vicinity of the hydro development. Hunters who normally have hunted camps here between Black Bonald and Griffith were deprived of their old hunting grounds because of safety measures imposed to protect workers clearing the lake basin.

Their co-operation was excellent, Mr. Whitfield points out, with no accidents reported from the area and so far no accidents reported for the district as a whole.

One hunting camp crew was destined not to be deprived of at least some of the comforts of home. A nimrod's spouse saw to that.

Apparently she felt the boys were not getting the proper nourishment, what with that peaky diet of mulligan stew three or four times a day. So she decided to go along to take over the culinary duties. (That was her story).

Among the packsacks of groceries were two large jugs of cream. It is presumed the boys are dining on venison steaks topped with whipped cream with huge cream puffs as chasers.

A trigger-happy and deer-hungry hunting safari could not wait until opening day so they resorted to subterfuge in an effort to get a pre-season venison dinner.

They took along a hound, whose grandpappy apparently was a member of Noah's Ark crew, to see if he would start a chase on deer.

The old hound had been on an exclusive rabbit hunt diet for the past decade so the boys (as they said), decided to wean him off the bunnies and take up the buck chase.

By mere coincidence they took along their rifles, hunting knives and a piece of rope "just in case we met up with a man-hungry bear" or were ambushed by a gaggle of blood-thirsty fawns.

The "hound trial" ended abruptly when two men garbed in red caps and red overjackets with khaki pants met them on the trail.

"Dammit," exclaimed one of the disappointed early free-loaders, "I should have known they were conservation officers by those cussed khaki pants."

Three-Way Battle Says Punch

TORONTO (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, looks for a three-way battle involving his club, Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers for playoff spots in the National Hockey League this season.

Imlach gave no firm answer when asked if the Leafs are willing to trade centre Mike Walton to Boston Bruins, who are in need of centres.

Tie Wings 3-3 ★★★★★ Unbeaten In Six ★★★★★

Blues Eye Spot In Playoff Country

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

NEW York Rangers may give up their fifth-place lease in the National Hockey League standings and buy some playoff property.

The Rangers, who dwelled in fifth paces for the last two years, have come alive early in the season and are giving the "first division" clubs a run for their money.

New York extended its current unbeaten streak to six games Thursday night, holding Detroit Red Wings to a 3-3 tie in the only scheduled game.

Don Marshall, formerly of Montreal Canadiens and who was a standout as a penalty killer during his Montreal days, paced the New York attack with a goal and an assist.

Bob Nevin, New York's leading scorer to date and formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs, put the Ranger's ahead at 1:04 of the first period when he banged in his own rebound past sprawled Detroit goalie Roger Crozier.

Defenceman Harry Howell gave New York a 2-0 lead at 13:46, just 15 seconds after Detroit defenceman Bill Gadsby was penalized for interference. Crozier grabbed Howell's drive from the point but the puck slipped out of his glove and dribbled into the net.

Paul Henderson put Detroit on the scoreboard with his fourth goal of the season with less than two minutes remaining in the first frame.

His goal climaxed a three-way play involving Bruce MacGregor and Billy Harris after MacGregor got the puck away from a New York forward and caught the Rangers skating the other way.

Marshall's goal at 7:23 of the second period climaxed New York's second successful power play of the night. The puck barely left the ice as Crozier and defencemen Wauren Godfrey and Gadsby tried to cover up.

Detroit came back with azeless Gordie Howe scoring his fourth goal of the season with less than a minute left in the middle period.

Howe's goal was also his 509th during regular season play and climaxed a power play. Howe passed the puck from the back of the net to Andy Bathgate, then deflected Bathgate's shot into the lower left hand corner.

MacGregor scored the only goal of the third period to tie the score and also snap the Red Wings' two-game losing streak. Detroit outshot New York 42-20 in the game with 18 of the shots coming in the final 20 minutes.

Nose Out Quinte In Overtime

Peterboro COSSA Champs

By ROBERT SNEFJELLA

Peterborough Collegiate powered its way to the COSSA Senior "A" football title yesterday afternoon with a 23-18 marathon victory over Quinte Secondary School.

The action-packed contest was decided in the second overtime. Peterborough's bruising fullback, Roger Sage, scored on a one-yard plunge to spark the valiant goal-line stand by the Quinte defense.

Up to that point the game had been a see-saw battle, with the two teams trading the advantage back and forth.

Fumbles were the order of the day, with Quinte ordering more often than Peterborough. Quinte fumbled on the first play of the game, and P.C.I. returned the favor soon after. This early pattern set the mood for the rest of the battle.

Paul Whalen began a Quinte drive in the first quarter with a fine punt return. Bill Leslie kept the charge alive with a 30-yard gallop on a faked punt, and, after the ball had been exchanged by both teams on consecutive fumbles, Grant Vanderroost sped across the goal line for a Quinte touchdown.

Whalen took advantage of several good blocks by his teammates to race 60 yards for another Quinte major on a punt return in the second quarter. He booted his own convert.

Peterborough then started to show some of the potency on offence that brought them to the COSSA finals. They continually ground out long yardage with a murderous running attack.

In five plays they rolled the length of the field, with Tom LaBranche capping the effort with a 17-yard touchdown run through the Quinte line. The convert split the uprights.

Immediately after Barry Donaldson intercepted a careless pass thrown by Quinte Q.B. Dale Duvall and dashed 55 yards to secure.

The half ended 14-13 for Peterborough.

In the second half, following several long runs by Sage, Dave Shaw booted a single to give the hometowners a two - point edge.

Late in the contest pass completions by Bill Leslie and Tom Meddings put Quinte on the 20, yard line of Peterborough. An attempted field goal by Paul Whalen went wide left, still gave Quinte a single point.

Trailing by one point with only seconds remaining in the game, Quinte's Leslie boomed a 40-yard single to tie the score at 15-15.

In the first half of the overtime, Whalen attempted another field goal and made good on it.

But the determined P.C.I. team fought back, with Roger Sage running over and through Quinte for a series of first downs. With seconds left in the overtime Lloyd Sarginson of Peterborough kicked a field goal to deadlock the issue again.

In the second overtime Sage scored his touchdown and Quinte could not manage the same. Later Shaw uncorked a 30-yard punt that was good for another point.

Junior COSSA Championship

Port Hope Defeats Moira

By DAVE BRAMMER

The Port Hope Spartans defeated the Moira Trojans 26-13 in a game played yesterday afternoon at the Fairgrounds. This gave Port Hope the C.O.S.S.A. junior championship for the first time in their history.

Port Hope, a team that scored 400 points and allowed only 12 during the regular season, opened the scoring midway through the first quarter when Jiggins sped 18 yards for the major. The convert was missed and Port Hope led 6-0.

In the second quarter Port Hope marched all the way down the field and scored on a 20 yards pass to Hodgson. The convert was blocked and Port Hope led 12-0. Moira retaliated quickly. Pete Bishop ran 15 yards around the right end for a Moira touchdown. The convert was good and Port Hope led 13-7.

About two minutes later Dalton Lambert drove 12 yards through the middle for another touchdown. The convert hit the post and the score remained 13-12 for Moira.

The rest of the game up until there was less than five minutes remaining was a see-saw battle. Jiggins scored his second touchdown also on a 3 yard run. Port Hope passed to Jiggins for the extra point and took the lead 19-13.

Moira took to the air in a last-desperate effort but an interception led to a touchdown by Cook and ended all Moira hopes. The convert was scored on a pass play to Jiggins and the final score was Port Hope 26 Moira 13.

The two outstanding players in the game were Curson for Moira and Backstrom for Port Hope. These two boys did everything but score touchdowns.

Stop Cats, And Score

Riders' Clair Has Twin Worries

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders have had a poor season at the gate this year, but good weather could bring a record crowd Sunday when they open their Eastern Football Conference final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Ticket sales have been brisk all week.

"It's one of the biggest rushes we've ever had," a club spokesman said Thursday.

The record was set last season when 32,683 persons turned out for a regular-season clash between the same two teams.

A record crowd would be a big boost for the Riders, especially after the way attendance plummeted this year.

Riders finished the regular season with average attendance of 16,800 for their seven home dates, down 3,360 per game from the 1964 average of 20,240.

While fans now are concerned about getting tickets, coach Frank Clair has other worries. He has to find a way to score against Hamilton's rugged defensive unit and try to stop Hamilton's offence.

He did it in the first game of the series last year with a 30-13 victory in the opener, but his team blew the 17-point lead the following week and lost the two-game, total-point round-by-one point.

He has 10 new faces in his lineup this year, and hopes they will make the difference.

Six of his rookies are linemen, but they have been the brightest spot of his rebuilding program.

His offence is experienced, although halfback Bo Scott is playing his first full year of professional football. He joined the Riders late in the 1964 season. Quarterback Russ Jackson and halfback Ron Stewart are eight-year veterans of the Ottawa squad, and while fullback Jim Dillard is in his first year here, he has the experience of his years in the Western Conference with Calgary Stampeders.

International Race

French Horses Score Upset

By ARCH MacKENZIE

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — The 14th running of the Washington International wound up on something of a shocker Thursday when French horses finished one-two in the $150,000 turf classic.

The $90,000 winner's purse went to Diatome, third choice at 4 to 2 odds, with Carvin, a 56-to-1 longshot, collecting the $25,000 second-prize money.

Roman Brother, one of the two United States entries favored to capture the 1½-mile race, finished third.

Canada's George Royal is a big four-year-old bay who had been rated second at 3 to 1, came in fourth.

Diatome, owned by Baron Guy de Rothschild of the famous banking family, crossed the finish a nose ahead of Carvin, owned by Jean Bontillier and ridden by Jean-Claude Desaint. Carvin was 1¼ lengths ahead of Roman Brother.

COASTS AT REAR

George Royal, owned by Ernie Hammond of Vancouver and Robert Hall of Aldergrove, B.C., had been coasting at the rear of the seven-horse field until the top of the stretch, and finished 1½ lengths behind Diatome.

Finishing in order behind them were Hail to All, the second American entry, Argentina's Berenjenal and England's Super Sam.

George Royal's co-owners said a bump with Berenjenal starting the stretch might have made a difference.

Rollins In Oshawa Tonight

Rollins Construction get their first look at Ted O'Connor's Oshawa Crushmen in OHA Eastern Junior "B" action, in Oshawa, tonight.

The game is a big one for both clubs since Oshawa holds down first place and Belleville is three points back, tied for the runner-up spot with Peterborough.

And Rollins continue their three-game "road trip" on Sunday afternoon when they meet Peterborough in a two o'clock tilt in the Hastings Arena. Both tonight and Sunday's games are two-point affairs, the loads' first after spliting four four-pointers.

Due to a lack of ice time, Peterborough is playing a number of "home games" in Hastings and Lakefield arenas this season.

Belleville has no home date this week but after Sunday next two action here against the Kingston Frontenacs next Friday, November 19. Kingston visits the surging Trenton Apple Kings in another game tonight.

WARFIELD OUT

CLEVELAND (AP) — Paul Warfield, Cleveland Browns' top receiver who has been sidelined since he broke a collarbone in an exhibition against the College All-Stars, Aug. 6, will not be ready for action for another week.

Cat Worry; What Will Jackson Do?

Roll-Run Or Pocket

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger - Cats concede that Russ Jackson, quarterback of Ottawa Rough Riders, is more dangerous when he rolls out to pass or run than when he drops back into the pocket to throw.

The Ticats, busy preparing for Sunday's opening game of the Eastern Football Conference final in Ottawa, aren't afraid of Jackson, but they respect him.

Kickoff Sunday is 2 p.m. EST and the game will be carried on the CBC television network. The second game of the two-game total-point series will be back here the following Saturday.

"We've never gone into a game with Ottawa that we didn't expect Jackson to run," Ticat coach Ralph Sazio said.

"When he rolls out he has two assets. He can run or he can pass. But it has a minus, too. When he rolls out he narrows down his passing area. Any rollout quarterback is going to ally committed, on pass plays, to the area he's running toward. He must give up the side of the field he's running away from."

But there's one aspect of Jackson's rollout game that worries Sazio.

"It's the busted play that makes Jackson most dangerous," said the Hamilton coach. "We've handled rollouts before, but when something goes wrong and his improvised running can be real dangerous."

Sazio's opinion of Jackson as a runner is shared by almost everyone who has seen the Ottawa signal - caller in action. Many observers feel he's the most sure-footed quarterback in the Canadian Football League.

But many of those same observers figure there is no club better equipped to cope with Jackson than the Tiger - Cats rated the strongest team in the East defensively.

It's unlikely that Jackson will choose not to run. And it he rolls out, the pressure will be on Hamilton's corner linebackers and defensive ends to contain him.

The Ticats are exceptionally well off at those positions. Billy Ray Locklin and Dave Viti are defensive ends while Ted Page and Zeno Karcs are the corner linebackers.

Habs, Petes Tie

Generals Defeat Wings

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers and Oshawa Generals are fighting for first place in the Junior A Ontario Hockey Association, but there's a blistering battle going on in the rest of the circuit.

Only four points separate the clubs with one game each remaining seven teams.

Wednesday night's results were typical The Generals downed the eighth-place Hamilton Red Wings 7-4 to move within a point of the leading Flyers. Montreal Junior Canadiens battled Peterborough Petes to a 2-2 draw, leaving the Habs tied with St. Catharines Black Hawks for fourth place, and the Petes tied with Kitchener Rangers for fifth.

Four games tonight have Hamilton at Niagara Falls, St. Catharines at Toronto Marlboros, Peterborough at Kitchener and Montreal at London Nationals and the leading clubs could be in for a major shuffle.

Centre Danny O'Shea, the top point scorer in the circuit, picked up a goal and three assists for Oshawa. Bill Little had two goals and two assists, Wayne Cashman two goals and Bill White and Bobby Orr one each.

The Red Wings, who outshot Oshawa 40-31, only to be thwarted by goalie Ian Young, got two goals from Renald Lecler and one each from Keith Comeau, Kevin Pettet and Freddie Speck.

Danny Grant scored both Peterborough goals while Jacques Lemaire and Larry Pleau countered for Montreal.

Snow, Near Zero Temperatures Calgary Could Be Winter Blunderland

CALGARY (CP) — Weather conditions may force Calgary Stampeders and thumping Blue Bombers to play a slogging defensive match in the first game of the Western Football Conference best-of-three final Saturday, despite their good offensive records.

Driving snow continued to sweep Calgary Thursday and forecasts called for much the same type of weather today. Temperatures were to hit the five-degree mark.

The Stampeders, under freshman coach Jerry Williams, are looking for their first WFC championship and Grey Cup since 1948.

Bud Grant's Bombers are after their first WFC title and Grey Cup since 1952, earning the chance by eliminating Saskatchewan Roughriders in the WFC semi-finals.

Men with shovels and snow-blowing machines have been removing snow from McMahon Stadium nearly all week. But the field, although not covered by a canvas, was in good condition.

At least eight inches of snow — some of it melted — has fallen since early Tuesday. The weather office predicts a "slight chance of snow" Saturday, with light winds and a game - time temperature of about 25 degrees.

SOLD OUT AGAIN

The game, to be televised nationally by CTV, marks the fifth straight sell - out here. Closed-circuit TV was to be set up at the Stampede Corral to accommodate other fans at $3 a head.

The second game of the series will be Nov. 17 in Winnipeg and a third, if necessary, in Calgary Nov. 20.

Quinte Hockey League Results

SACO pulled away from the pack in Quinte League hockey last night by turning back the Ter-Haar Daubers 5-3.

Both clubs were undefeated in their first two starts thus the key victory bolsted SACO into first place, undisputed, with a 3-0 record.

In the other contest, Stinson-Horlock Combines notched their initial win of the campaign with a 6-4 nod over Grant Realty. The losers remain winless.

SACO jumped into a 2-0 first-period lead and Daubers cut it to 3-2 going into the third. Art Delline scored twice for SACO in the third to wrap up the decision. Larry Potter, Gary Greenwood and Ray Allen had a goal each. Ray Lucas helped on two, Harry Reid, Deline and Potter on one apiece.

Frank Chris, L. Hamlin and Ron Urch were the Ter-Haar marksmen. Ron Polster, Hubert Polster and Jim Muir gained assists.

The Combines led 2-1 at the end of the first and 4-2 after two heats while Grant's held them to a split of four third - frame markers.

Keith Dickey starred for Stinson - Horlock's with three goals. Bob Fraser, Bill Greenwood, Larry Soule, Wally Istead, Bob Wannamaker and Fred Polesky collected one each.

Jack Boulter was a two - goal man for the losers while "Widge" Adams and Doug Hull potted singletons. Keith Outerbout and Bernie Boulter had two assists each. "D" Hull one.

Virna Lisi, Elke Sommer Give Views on Husbands

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Do European men make better husbands?

If you were Virna Lisi, with pale blonde hair and emerald eyes, you would favor the Europ pean male. But then, she is married to Italian builder Franco Pesci.

If you were Elke Sommer, ice-blonde with Germanic good looks, you would advocate the American man. Naturally, since she is wed to American journalist Joe Hyams.

The two were working a block apart—Elke at Producers' Studio with Bob Hoins in Boy, Did I get a Wrong Number! and Virna at Paramount with Frank Sinatra in Assault on a Queen.

"American men are more patient with their wives and more affectionate," Elke said. "They are very glad when you let them be the boss, because they aren't used to that. In Europe, the husband is always the boss."

ARE FOSSESSIVE

On the latter score, Virna agreed. She added: "Italian men are very Possessive. In Italy it is difficult for a wife to work, or even to go shopping. Her husband wants to know where she is at all times."

"Naturally the system is better for the man. But women in Italy don't-think anything about it. They have always lived that way, and in some respects it is good for them. They remain feminine. And it is very important for a man to be a man and not try to be the man."

Elke conceded: "It is bad when a woman tries to dominate the man. Men like feminity. In Europe there is more femininity."

Said Virna: "What happens between a man and a woman when they fall in love is something beautiful. That is why they get married. But in America the relationship can change after marriage. If the woman tries to take over the husband's role, they become like brother and sister. That is bad."

Elke admitted that is bad.

SHOULD PLEASE

"A wife should please her husband as much as possible—make him think it's a big deal when he comes home at night. That's the way to hold him."

Virna doesn't hold that a woman's place is entirely in the home. She admits to being "not the kitchen type" and enjoys her independence as an actress.

"But when I am home, my husband is the boss," she added. "An Italian man will have it no other way, and I think that is right."

But, said Elke: "In Germany, things are beginning to feel the need for more independence. They are no longer content to remain merely the bourfrau."

MAY RETIRE

SAN JUAN (AP)—Carlos Ortiz, Puerto Rico - born New Yorker, says if he doesn't regain the world lightweight title Saturday in his return fight with Ismael Laguna of Panama, he will either retire or campaign as a welterweight.

AT THE BELLE — Rex Harrison portrays a suave British aristocrat who is "Caught Between Two Women" in Twice Told Tales, the picture filmed in color and wide-screen, depicts the extraordinary adventures of a Rotis-Royer, and its various owners and occupants over a period of years. Also in the cast are Sandra Dee, Harold Gerd-man, Alain Delon, Janice Morrow, George C. Scott, and Shirley MacLaine. The Color film is now showing at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

AT THE PARK — The childhood romance between Peter Mann and Barbara Lake blossoms when, as adults, they discover each other again in the Cinemascope and Technicolor production of "The Sword of Ali Baba", showing today and Saturday at the Park Theatre. On the same program in color "McHale's Navy Joins The Air Force". Tonight comedy shows 8:00 and 10:00 p.m. Saturday show 2nd, then 1:00 p.m.

AT THE PARK — Vera Lid plays a newlywed whose honeymoon conversations with her husband (Peter Sellers) are recorded in the new Royal Films International presentation, "Bombcat". This comedy also stars Clive Lolnbert, Eric Sommer and Monica Dahlberg. Showing today at the Park Theatre for a three day engagement only.

'Sugar' Quits For Good

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sugar Ray Robinson, soundly whipped by young Joey Archer while reeking to earn another shot at the world middleweight crown, said Thursday he is quitting the ring for good.

"I hate to go on too long campaigning for a million dollars," said Robinson, who lost a unanimous decision to Archer Wednesday night. The veteran was floored for a nine-count in the fourth round.

"I had hopes of fighting for the championship again if I had beaten Archer," Robinson said.

The setback was the fifth in 14 bouts this year for Robinson, who says he is 44 although the record books carry his age as 45. He retired in 1952 and stayed away for two years. He returned to win and lose the middleweight title three times.

The Archer bout was Robinson's 199th in a brilliant career that began in 1940. His record is 175 victories, 19 losses, six draws and one no contest.

"I've got to get back to show business," announced Robinson, the past time lightcloth entertainer. He said he will take part in two upcoming movies.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Americans are migrating to Canada by increasing numbers, the Canadian immigration service reported Thursday, but more Canadians are coming south. More than 13,500 persons have entered Canada from the United States for permanent residence in 1965, compared to 12,965 in 1964. But three times as many Canadians annually settle in the United States.

Radio Special Will Bring Back Fred Allen Humor

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The wit of Fred Allen since his death nine years ago has assumed somewhat legendary proportions. The famed Fred Allen Show with its Allen's Alley succumbed—to competition from a radio quiz show — almost 17 years ago.

But next Sunday youngsters and mature television fans who look back on the gold years of radio with nostalgia will have a chance to sample and assess the sharp-tongued brand of Allen humor.

The coffee company (Chase and Sanborn) that sponsored Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy on radio had such success it now has signed Allen's kids as a person's looks back on the old days with great affection.

"You could do so many things on radio that are impossible on television," he said. "There could never have been a Charlie McCarthy on television. But Charlie on radio could do anything—go to town by himself, drive a car, visit the dentist. It all had a dream quality and the audience was there supplying the background in its imagination."

Perhaps Allen's Alley with its assorted comedy inhabitants—Senator Claghorn, Mrs. Nussbaum, Titus Moody and others—would never have achieved show business immortality as a television show.

Recommended viewing Saturday — Hollywood Palace, ABC, 9:30-10:30 p.m. EST with Judy Garland a hostess.

Sunday—Defeat of the Armada, NBC, 6:30-7:30 p.m. EST; third in the Of Men and Freedom series, dealing with the 16th-century English sea victory over the Spanish.

Leads Senior Points Race

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winger Jack Price of Oakville Oaks leads the scoring derby in the Ontario Hockey Association after a series after three weeks of play.

Statistics released today show Price with 17 points on eight goals and nine assists. Price shares the lead in assists with team-mate Norm Sibbick and Earl Balfour, playing-coach of Galt Hornets.

Sibbick has six goals which gives him 15 points for second place. Balfour is third with points.

Mustangs Meet Blues For Title

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

University of Western Ontario Mustangs and University of Toronto Blues renew their rivalry in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association Football Conference Saturday when they clash in London, Ont., in a playoff for the championship.

The way the coaches have it lined up, the title will be decided on the ground.

"Western's running is the best part of their game," said Blues' coach Dalt White Thursday, "but I think we can control it."

"If we can tie up their running offence I'm sure we can handle their passing attack," Western coach John Metras said.

Many observers look on the game as a battle between Toronto's strong passing attack led by Bryce Taylor and Western's powerful ground offensive led by Art Froese.

TICKET TO BOWL

In addition to the conference title, the winner gets a crack at University of Alberta Golden Bears from Edmonton in the Save the Children college bowl at Varsity Stadium in Toronto on Saturday, Nov. 20.

Police said Mrs. Wong stepped from the curb into the path of a car driven by John Courmier of Six View Court, Trenton. She is reported to be in satisfactory condition today, suffering from a minor head injury.

Mayor Tells Legion To Be in Forefront Of Community Life

TRENTON — Mayor Ian Beresford of Gananoque, guest speaker at last night's Remembrance Day dinner at the Trenton Legion Hall told his audience of veterans that the Royal Canadian Legion had contributed greatly to the unity of Canada, because it had "not tolerated any person or effort that threatened that unity.

"Since this is the 40th anniversary of the Canadian Legion there are a few things about our great organization which we should remember at this time," said Mayor Beresford, "There are many things we take for granted and we tend to leave the responsibility to a few. Every able bodied Legionnaire should be in the forefront of community affairs. Our Remembrance Day service at the Cenotaph is a hollow mockery unless during the other 364 days of the year we strive to make Canada a better land in which to live. Of course, we should remember our glorious dead . . . that is a vital part of our organization . . . but we ought also to remember we have a duty to the community in which we live and to the country of which we are a part."

This year's Remembrance Day banquet was the best attended for many years.

In replying to a toast to the armed forces, G/C C.R. Thompson, Commanding Officer at No. 6 RD, said: "The armed services owe a debt to the Royal Canadian Legion, especially to those men who never returned home from the wars,) for their loyalty and interest. The members of the Legion have built up a great tradition which the armed services honors and will try to sustain."

Chairman of the annual memorial get together was Branch 110 president, Russell King. Grace was said by the Very Rev. J. G. Clancy of St. Peter's Church.

Toasts were proposed by Deputy Zone chairman, Carman Livingstone, (The Queen); branch 1st vice - president, Ross Brummell; 2nd vice - president, G. Briggs, and Rev. James Payton, (Fallen Comrades), chaplain.

In replying to a toast to the ladies of the auxiliary, president Margaret Weese presented a cheque for $200 for the Poppy Fund to the president of the branch.

A civic welcome was given by Mayor James MacDonald, and the guest speaker was introduced by past president Kenneth Craddock and thanked by immediate past president Victor Burtt.

Legion Padre Pleads For Greater Tolerance

TRENTON — In a hard-hitting Remembrance Day message to those who gathered around the Cenotaph in Trenton yesterday, Rev. James Payton, chaplain of Trenton Royal Canadian Legion Branch 110, told his audience that every citizen of Canada who exhibited selfishness, intolerance and "blundering" towards his fellow citizens, was "a traitor to the fallen."

Speaking with the voice "of those who paid the supreme sacrifice," Mr. Payton said: "We don't want sentiment, or glory, or memorials . . . we want your dedication to the things for which we died."

The padre said that Legionnaires could lead the way to greater tolerance, goodwill and brotherhood in Canada.

This is not just the responsibility of government," he said, "it is the responsibility of all of us towards those with whom we live and work."

Albert and Quinte Streets, in the vicinity of the memorial gates to Fraser Park were jammed with Trenton residents, young and old for the Remembrance Day service.

Music for the solemn parade to the Cenotaph and through the streets following the service, was supplied by the No. 8 Repair Depot Volunteer Brass and Reed Band, under the direction of Sgt. Howard Kelly.

Taking part in the ceremony were Legion members; Legion Ladies' Auxiliary members; members of the RCAF, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the Trenton Sea Cadets and Trenton clergymen, Rev. H. E. A. Ashford and F/L William Graham (RCAF). The benediction was pronounced by the Very Rev. J. G. Clancy of St. Peter's Church.

Wreaths were laid by Group Captain C. R. Thompson, Commanding Officer at No. 6 Repair Depot, representing the armed services; Silver Star Member, Mrs. H. Mennie; Mayor James MacDonald; President Audrey Hamilton of the Quinte Branch, 579, Royal Canadian Legion; President Margaret Weese of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and President Russell King, Branch 110. Other memorial wreaths were laid before the memorial gates, prior to the service.

IN REMEMBRANCE — Trenton Royal Canadian Legion President Russell King and Legion member Audrey Hamilton lay wreath at Fraser Park as Trenton residents pay tribute to their war dead at Remembrance Day services.

Members of firing party of 1st Battalion Canadian Guards yesterday fired three salvos during Memorial Day services held at Cenotaph in Picton. Some 300 to 400 members of the battalion participated in impressive parade and the ceremonies.

No Parade, But Santa Will Appear

PICTON (Staff) — The Retail Merchants Association of Picton is arranging for Santa Claus to visit here, but there will be no parade as in former years.

Instead the association will arrange for Santa to arrive in town the first Saturday in December when he will personally greet the children and dispense treats.

So that parents may be free to shop in the afternoon, a variety of attractions have been planned for that day. There will be two free shows at the local Theatre and free skating at the arena as well as the usual film shows at the public library.

During the summer the town had a large parade in many Loyalist days, and the association found it difficult to secure sufficient people to build floats in cold weather. Merchants are to be asked to assist financially with the costs in connection with Santa's visit.

Kiwanis Club Will Sponsor Carol Festival

PICTON (Staff) — The Kiwanis sponsored Carol Festival will again be staged in Picton United Church this year. The Kiwanis Club is hoping to make this event, which was a successful last year when it was presented for the first time, an annual affair. Choirs of both Roman Catholic Churches will unite with Protestant choirs for the community carol festival.

This year's festival will take place on Monday, December 6, at 8.00 p.m. and so far ten choirs from Picton area churches have announced their intentions to participate. Kiwanis Club officials say that there may be more than this number taking part, choirs enlisted so far are: Wellington United Church, Bloomfield Red Church, Bloomfield First Baptist Church, Bloomfield Christian Reformed Church, St. Mary Magdalene Church, Picton, St. Gregory's Roman Catholic Church, Picton; St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton, The Salvation Army choir of Picton, Picton United Church and Cherry Valley United Church.

Instrumental support is expected from the Salvation Army band.

In view of the huge crowd that attended Picton United Church for the event last year, club officials are making preparations to have the program piped to the basement auditorium in case of an overflow crowd.

Colorful Parade, Service Held at Town Cenotaph

PICTON (Staff) — Good weather and the addition of some 400 members of the First Battalion the Canadian Guards provided the town of Picton with one of the most colorful Remembrance Day services and parades the town has seen in a long while.

Canadian Guards, members of the Royal Canadian Legion and hundreds of citizens crowded around the war memorial to attend services in memory of those who had fallen while in services for their country.

The service began and ended with a parade through the streets of Picton led by the band of the 1st Canadian Guards. Following the band were members of Branch 78 of the Royal Canadian Legion, officers and men of the 1st Battalion Canadian Guards, The Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps, Boy Scouts and representatives of St. John's Ambulance Nursing Division.

Traditionally, the four corners of the cenotaph were guarded by members of the Services with bowed heads and inverted rifles.

As the moment of silence approached a firing party fired three salvos into the air and promptly at 11 a.m. a quiet fell over the gathering as the two minutes silence was observed. Following the 'Reveille', sounded by Gdsm. B. R. Thomas, wreaths were laid by A. Douglas Aikenbrack, M.P., for the Dominion; Norris Whitney, M.L.A., for the Province; Warden Bernard Hepburn for the County and Mayor H. J. McFarland for the Town of Picton. Service Clubs, members of the Royal Canadian Legion and private citizens also laid wreaths.

The march back to the Legion Hall was along Main Street where the salute was taken by Lt. Col. J. G. W. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the Canadian Guards. Also on the stand for the march past were A. Douglas Aikenbrack M.P.; Norris Whitney, M.L.A.; Warden of Prince Edward County, B. Hepburn; Mayor H. J. McFarland and other dignitaries.

The annual Remembrance Day banquet was held in the Legion Hall Thursday night where Lt. Col. J. G. W. Haynes was guest speaker.

Harness Men Have Troubles

MONTREAL (CP)—A controversy concerning the recent ruling by the Canadian Trotting Association that Gilles Lachance's 16 victories scored in the United States will not be credited to his number of wins in this country took on an added turn Thursday.

Sebastien Brisson, secretary of the United Harness Horsemen's Association, said his group will award the Maurice Michaud Memorial Trophy to the leading dash winner.

"The trophy will go to the Canadian-born driver who has scored the most wins, regardless of where he may have won these races," Brisson said.

"The only stipulation attached to this award is that a driver must have at least one start for every racing day in this country throughout the year," Brisson added.

Lachance is currently battling Ronnie Feagan of Goderich, Ont., for leading dash winner honors.

Feagan, competing on the Ontario circuit, had 192 victories to his credit compared to 190 for Lachance, prior to Thursday's racing. Lachance has been driving at Richelieu Raceway here.

Both Feagan and Lachance are striving to become the first Canadian to ever win 300 races in a year.

Few Nigerians Go to School Belleville Teacher Finds

NO. 2

Mr. Don Lockyer, a former principal of Prince of Wales School, is now teaching in Nigeria under the Canadian Government's External Aid scheme for assistance to Commonwealth countries. The following is the second of two articles sent to pupils of Prince of Wales School in the form of an open letter.

By DON LOCKYER

Last week the rainy season came to an end. We shall probably have no further rains until next May. When you're enjoying the ice and snow and cold, clear winter days, we shall be having dusty, dry weather, with temperatures going as low as 50 degrees at night, but rising to the mid 80's during the day. From November to March a wind, called the Harmattan, blows off the desert and will make the air very dusty, and cause the sun to appear as a hazy light.

Some friends in Belleville wrote to us a few weeks ago, mentioning that you had experienced some rather hot temperatures in September, going up to 85 degrees. Did you really think it was hot? How would you have liked Bichi—the temperature was over 100 degrees! Wouldn't it seem strange to have your teacher walk into the classroom wearing a sports shirt, shorts and sandals. That's what I wear to teach in, every day.

Very few children go to school in the northern region of Nigeria, just about four out of every 100. Schools and teachers are needed desperately. I am helping to train 240 Nigerian students at Bichi Training College, in the methods of teaching elementary school. These students, all of whom are men, are anxious to learn how to teach, so that when they graduate, they can serve their country's development, by teaching the young children.

These children attend school six days a week, from 8 a.m. to 1.30 p.m. Most of them are Moslem, and Friday, their holy day, they visit the Mosque to worship Allah.

FEW SCHOOL SUPPLIES

I hope that you appreciate the well-trained teachers that you have, and the many wonderful books and materials which are provided for you at school. The girls and boys that I have seen here consider themselves fortunate if they each have a pencil, an exercise book, and a reader. Some of the classrooms are fairly well equipped, but there are many where books and teaching aids are far short of your supply. The Nigerian children are very hard workers, and show great respect for their teachers. They are very pleased when I visit their classrooms, and are pretty slow to show me how much they have learned. Classes usually begin to learn English in grade 4, and when I am with the children in the lower-classes, it is much fun for them and for me—they try to understand my English, and I try to understand their Hausa.

My three daughters are having a marvellous time. They have an extremely firm teacher—their mother. What things they have seen already: the magnificent Kano mosque, the ancient dye pits, where cloth for the ruling families is dyed a deep blue in open pits that have been in use for hundreds of years. They have even visited at the home of a Kano merchant—a city house with low narrow doorways, which would remind you of the type of dwelling that we read of in the Bible. The second day after our arrival, I stopped at a service station for some gasoline. Suddenly, at the car window, appeared a snake charmer, with a huge python wrapped about his neck, its head within his mouth. You should have seen the look upon the girls' faces - and upon mine, too!

Nigerians are fond of children. In fact, the manner in which entire families move along together suggests that parents and children have much love for one another. When we walk among them, they will often reach out a hand to touch our children, to feel their fair skin and straight hair. Many of these people, especially those who live far out in the bush, have never seen white children. Thus, when they see Lindsey, Jennifer, and Paula, they crowd around, laughing, giggling, and at times, just staring. Our girls smile back, and say "Sannu", the Hausa greeting for "Hello". Perhaps, sometime in the future, when you are older, you will have a chance to experience some of the things that I have described to you. This letter should tell you that I am very happy here in Northern Nigeria, sharing in the growth and development of this great land. You, too, might wish to imagine yourself doing something similar later in your life.

Parliamentary Notebook

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Parties in the next Parliament will have a lopsided language composition that may interest the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

The Liberal caucus will have an unusually strong French-speaking contingent, consisting of 58 MPs out of 129, or 44 per cent. Nine cabinet ministers are French-Canadian.

Across the aisle, the 99 Conservatives will only have eight MPs whose mother tongue is French.

The Conservatives' two leading French-speaking spokesmen in the last Parliament, Leon Balcer and Paul Martineau, both are gone.

Mr. Balcer bolted his party last spring and did not seek re-election Nov. 8, charging there is no room for French-Canadians in the Conservative party as long as John Diefenbaker remains leader. Mr. Martineau lost his Pontiac-Temiscamingue seat by 255 votes to Liberal Marcel Lefebvre.

Theogene Ricard, 56, folksy MP for St. Hyacinthe - Bagot, was named chairman of the Conservatives' Quebec caucus after Mr. Balcer's departure, but he could have competition in the next Parliament.

SKILLFUL DEBATER

His colleagues will include Martial Asselin, 41-year-old lawyer and skillful debater who was named forestry minister three weeks before the Diefenbaker government was defeated in the 1963 election.

He was defeated in the 1962 election and again in 1963, staging a successful comeback to the Commons in Charlevoix last Monday.

Other prominent Conservatives from Quebec are Paul Beaulieu, 63, long-time commerce minister in the Duplessis government who defeated ex-minister Yvon Dupuis, and Russell Keays, 52, bilingual Gaspe businessman who sat in the Commons in 1958-62.

The Liberals elected this year include 49 French - Canadians from Quebec, six from Ontario, two from New Brunswick and one (Veterans Affairs Minister Roger Teillet) from Manitoba.

The 21 New Democrats all are English-speaking due to the party's failure to elect any of its 72 candidates in Quebec. The Social Creditists are French-Canadians and all five Social Credit members are English-speaking.

The "B and B" royal commission conducted a survey of bilingualism and ethnic origins among members of the last Parliament and drew heavy criticism from opposition MPs for straying from its terms of reference.

Results of the survey will not be known until the commission publishes its final report, which is not expected for another year.

"Terrible Sight" - - 94 Missing As Bahamas Cruise Ship Burns

NASSAU, Bahamas, (AP) — The cruise ship Yarmouth Castle, razed by a fierce, quick-spreading fire, plunged to the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean today and 94 persons were reported missing.

The cruise ship Bahama Star radioed that she was en route to Nassau with 360 survivors. The Finnish motorship Finnpulp rescued 90 others, and U.S. coast guard helicopters flew 12 badly-burned persons to Nassau.

A spokesman for Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., owner of the Bahama Star, said the remaining 94 persons listed as being aboard the Yarmouth Castle were presumed lost.

"We have searched the area and we have found no more," the Bahama Star reported.

At least 11 Canadians were on a partial passenger list issued in Miami, Fla. There was no immediate word as to their safety.

Murray and Stella Bell of Burlington, Ont.
Simone Belyea of Montreal.
Irene Langyel of Flin Flon, Man.
Andrew and Gladys MacPhail of Milliken, Ont.
William and Lavigne Pudifin of Toronto.
Phyllis Watt of Flin Flon.
James E. and Winnifred I. Walter of Montreal.

It was not immediately known whether any other Canadians had been aboard the ship.

The cruise ship Bahama Star, which was trailing the Yarmouth Castle and had her in sight when the fire broke out, picked 250 passengers and 110 crew members out, of the water.

"It was a terrible sight," said W. R. Cooper, a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter pilot who flew into Nassau with three of the survivors. "Fire and smoke shot 4,000 feet high."

The first two helicopters arriving here brought in six badly - burned survivors, four men and two women. They were taken by ambulance to Princess Margaret Hospital.

Cooper said the six persons were picked up by another cruise ship, the Bahama Star, and the vessel had six other badly-burned passengers awaiting evacuation by helicopter.

The Yarmouth Castle burned to the water line and sank at 4:30 a.m. EST, about four hours after the fire broke out.

The Eastern Steamship Co. owner of the Bahama Star, said the vessel was heading for Miami with 237 survivors.

Communication with ships and aircraft on the scene was hampered by atmospheric conditions.

The 205-foot Yarmouth Castle, a 38-year-old vessel, makes a twice - weekly run between Miami and Nassau.

The Finnish motor ship Finnpulp, first to reach the brightly blazing vessel 80 miles northwest of Nassau and 110 miles

Liberals Gain Two Seats In Service Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals raised their Commons strength today by two seats to 131 on the turns from the armed forces vote.

The two additional victories were registered in the Nova Scotia riding of Antigonish-Guysborough and the Quebec riding of Shefford.

In the former, Liberal John Stewart overtook the 19-vote lead Conservative D. Hugh Gillis received in the Nov. 8 civilian vote. With the service vote added, Mr. Stewart won by 57 votes.

Mr. Stewart received 136 service votes, compared with 60 for Mr. Gillis.

In Shefford, Liberal Louis-P. Neveau had been in third place, behind Conservative and Creditiste candidates on the strength of the civilian vote. With the service vote added, Mr. Neveau won the seat by 47 votes over Conservative Paul O. Trepanier, the civilian - vote leader, and by 61 votes over Creditiste Gilbert Rondeau.

On election night, Mr. Trepanier led Mr. Rondeau by nine votes and Mr. Neveau by 12.

The Shefford service vote went 78 Liberal, 18 Conservative, 13 Creditiste and three to independent Liberal Lucien Pelrson.

As usual, the service vote was heavily pro-Liberal but not to the same extent as in 1962 when the Liberals received 70.5 per cent. This time they got 63.3 per cent compared with 40 per cent in the civilian vote.

The Conservatives took 23.5 per cent of the service vote compared with 32 per cent of the civilian vote.

The New Democratic Party received 8.8 per cent of the service vote, compared with 18 per cent in the civilian count.

PC Head Offers Advice

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Diefenbaker is back in the capital today after offering advice on a variety of subjects to the Liberals during a 2½-day post-election whirl.

Mr. Diefenbaker and his wife arrived Friday evening and about 75 persons and a piper were at the Union Station to greet them.

The offerings of advice began in Prince Albert Wednesday night just before his private car was attached to a way freight leaving the northern Saskatchewan town for Saskatoon.

In a press release, he accused the Liberals of following a "made - in-Washington" financial policy and concealing until after the election the temporary halt to Canadian borrowing in the U.S.

In Saskatoon, Mr. Diefenbaker's car was hooked onto the CNR's Transcontinental Panorama for the ride to the capital.

During the trip, which had campaign overtones, he issued seven releases recommending that:

1. Canada not join Britain in imposing sanctions against white-ruled Southern Rhodesia

Pearson Says Forces' Vote "Gratifying"

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said in a brief statement today the results of the service vote, which, increased Liberal standing to 131 seats, a gain of two, are gratifying.

"These results are gratifying in that they increase the chances of stability in the House of Commons and the prospect of effective action on a program of constructive legislation which the government will be putting forward," the statement said.

Mr. Pearson's government remains three seats short of a majority in the 265-seat House despite the two gains.

Eisenhower Seems on Way To Recovery

FORT GORDON, Ga. (AP)— Doctors watched for any change today in Dwight D. Eisenhower's condition that could alter their belief that the former U.S. president will recover from his second heart attack and may play golf again.

From the evidence of his physicians, Drs. Thomas Mattingly and Harry Thomas, the 75-year-old five-star general seems to be on his way toward another victory.

And Eisenhower himself appears to be taking in stride the diagnosis revealed Friday, that the chest pains that sent him to the hospital from the Augusta Golf Club Tuesday signaled his second heart attack since 1955.

An army spokesman said in a statement Friday night that Eisenhower "spent a very comfortable evening. He went to sleep early, having spent the earlier part of the evening reading."

Despite Eisenhower's age and previous heart attacks, the feeling around the hospital is one of optimism.

Gordon's Resignation Opens Gate for Major Cabinet Shuffle

OTTAWA (CP)—The resignation of Walter Gordon from the finance portfolio makes possible a major reorganization of the cabinet, in the opinion of some informed sources, here.

But whether there will be sweeping changes remains in doubt. Prime Minister Pearson may appoint Trade Minister Sharp to the finance portfolio and ministers for the agriculture and mines departments and let it go at that.

Mr. Pearson said Wednesday he doesn't contemplate any cabinet changes until after the election writs are returned Dec. 8.

Until Mr. Gordon's resignation, he had only two posts to fill. Agriculture Minister Harry Hays and Mines Minister J. Watson MacNaught were defeated Monday.

It is believed Mr. Pearson has wanted to shift one or two of his Quebec ministers but felt he couldn't do so unless there were some departures from among his Ontario ministers. This situation was made even more acute when Quebec was the only province to return more Liberal MPs than in 1963.

In this sense, Mr. Gordon's withdrawal has opened the gates for a major cabinet shuffle.

There were reports even before the election that Privy Council President Guy Favreau would retire from politics.

At his press conference Friday, Mr. Gordon said that if a senior minister gives advice which is accepted but which doesn't work out he should offer his resignation.

Mr. Gordon was asked whether Mr. Favreau, co-chairman of the Liberal election campaign, had also advised Mr. Gordon to call the election.

"I haven't seen Mr. Favreau," Mr. Gordon replied enigmatically.

He added later that Quebec, where Mr. Favreau ran the Liberal campaign, "did pretty well." That province sent eight more Liberals to Ottawa, though he would have liked to have seen 13, he said.

It seems agreed here that Jean Marchand, a former labor leader, must be given a top portfolio. Quebec appears no longer satisfied with only one big job—justice.

Mr. Gordon, without being asked, said Mr. Pearson should continue in office for "many years" and that there would be great "resentment" against anyone who challenged him for the party leadership.

FIRST CALL with Bowslie

"Hi Ho, Hi Ho . . . it's off to work we go . . ."

PAGE, Ariz. (AP)—Even a princess — Britain's Princess Margaret — couldn't shake the reputation for western hospitality of Page, population 1,800.

A royal party is a little special, though.

Take, for instance, Irene Johnson of the Lake Powell Motel.

The princess, her husband, the Earl of Snowdon and their royal entourage and guests stayed there Friday night.

"We didn't have silverware," said Mrs. Johnson. "So my sister, Grace, and I pooled our wedding sterling. Other people loaned demitasse cups. They didn't match, and we were going to use old-fashioned motel coffee cups, but at the last minute we used the neighbors' anyway."

The royal party today tours scenic Lake Powell, created by the new Glen Canyon dam on the Colorado River between Utah and northern Arizona. They planned to return to Tucson, Ariz., later in the day.

The princess and her husband and their guests arrived from Tucson Friday, to be met by almost everybody in town, including the Page High School band, and a sign which, for the fourth time at least on the royal tour, misspelled the name of Snowdon. The earl doesn't seem to mind.

The visitors drove over the dam, opened last year, and rode across the reddish sand plateau six miles out of town to the motel, operated by Art Greene, 71, who for nearly 30 years was a river boat guide on the turbulent Colorado.

Celebrities with the Snowdons included actress Dorothy McGuire and her husband, photographer John Swope, actress Rose Lange and husband, producer Alan Pakula and actor Roddy McDowall.

Margin of 255 On Service Ballot 545 for Hees

Although his election night winning margin of 719 votes was considerably reduced the election of Progressive Conservative Lee Grills in Hastings South was confirmed this morning with the receipt of the armed services vote.

With the addition of the service vote Mr. Grills' majority over Liberal Robert Temple was reduced to 255 votes.

The vote now stands Lee Grills, 14,824; Thorld Hoskin, NDP, 1,338, and Mr. Temple, 14,569.

In Northumberland the winning margin of Conservative George Hees over Liberal Paul-ine Jewett was reduced to 545 votes after the addition of the service vote. This compared with the difference of 840 election night. Miss Jewett received 139 service votes to Mr. Hees' 95 with 15 going to the NDP

OFFICIAL NEXT WEEK

Hastings South returning officer William VanTassel said that today's figures might still change slightly when the official count is taken next week. The above figures are taken from election night preliminary figures received by deputy returning officers.

A total of 1,066 votes were polled by service personnel in Hastings South — down about 200 from the 1963 election.

Liberal candidate Robert Temple had this statement following receipt of the service vote.

"I offer my congratulations to Mr. Grills," Mr. Temple said.

"Now that the election is over we must all do our very best for the country and I am sure Mr. Grills will represent us well in Ottawa."

This is the 11th election I have been in during the past 15 years. I have lost, and I have

U.S. Auto Pact Calls for Big Machinery Order

TORONTO (CP) — Additional production machinery worth $100,000,000 will be bought by Canadian auto parts manufacturers in the next 14 months, D. S. Wood, executive vice-president of the Automotive Parts Manufacturers' Association, said Friday.

In an interview, Mr. Wood said the increase figure was established by a survey of the Association's 183 member firms.

Companies with need the "whole gamut" of machinery to compete effectively in the enlarged market created by the Canada - United States auto trade agreement, he said.

The agreement provides for abolition of duties on new autos and original parts between the two countries.

One fear of the parts industry is that if machinery supplies have a glut of orders, they may not be able to meet the required deadlines of the parts companies, said Mr. Wood.

If this happens, Canadian parts makers may have to import the necessary machinery from the U.S. for a higher price because of a 22½ cent tariff. The tariff applies to goods imported into Canada that are also produced or are available in Canada.

Smith Firmly In Control Rhodesia Ousts Governor

SALISBURY (CP)—What do you do when you are the Queen's representative and you get fired by a prime minister the Queen has already fired?

British Governor Sir Humphrey Gibbs faces that problem today. He was fired Friday by Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith.

But as far as the Queen and her government are concerned, Gibbs remains the only legal power in Rhodesia. The British fired Smith as soon as he declared the British colony independent two days ago.

But Smith remains firmly in control.

Gibbs' ouster was the latest move in the struggle between Britain and Rhodesia over independence. Negotiations foundered over Britain's insistence that Rhodesia's 225,000 black Africans be given a voice in the government.

Rhodesia's 225,000 whites control both the economy and the government.

In seizing independence to preserve white rule, Smith swore his allliance to the Queen. She is countered by ordering the ministers to remain.

Smith said he was determined to remain loyal to "this gracious lady the Queen" whether she liked it or not.

His newly - declared 1965 constitution provided for the Queen to appoint a governor-general "on the advice only of the ministers of the government of Rhodesia." If the Queen did not do this within 14 days, Smith would be appointed to represent her.

As well as being stripped of his executive powers, Gibbs was asked to vacate Government House — apparently to make way for a Smith - appointed regent.

The Associated Press quotes sources as saying that Gibbs, a

Rivard Given 20 Years

LAREDO, Texe. (CP-AP)—Lucien Rivard of Montreal, described by the prosecution as the key figure in a vast heroin-smuggling operation, was sentenced here Friday to 20 years in prison.

U.S. Federal Judge Ben C. Connally also slapped a $20,000 fine on him.

Connally sentenced three Rivard associates to lesser prison terms and smaller fines.

Rivard, 50, had been convicted here Sept. 21 on two narcotics charges. One charge was of conspiring with other persons, including the three Canadians convicted with him, to smuggle heroin into the United States.

The other was of causing, with two men still uncaught, the smuggling of a 76-pound heroin shipment seized here in 1963 and estimated to be worth as much as $16,000,000 on the illegal market.

During Rivard's trial, the U.S. government maintained he was the man behind large shipments of narcotics into the United States from Mexico and Canada.

The three other men sentenced Friday, all of them also Montrealers, were found guilty on single convictions.

Julien Gagnon, 36, a former beauty parlor operator, got 15 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Joseph Raymond Jones, 28, a former salesman, also got 15 years and a $10,000 fine.

Wilson Gains in Stature During Rhodesian Crisis

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—The Rhodesian crisis has given James Harold Wilson the aura of statesmanship that hitherto eluded the British prime minister with the computer - like brain.

The personal performance of the 49-year-old socialist leader, mixing moments of grave toughness, has won the admiration of critics even though some have reservations about aspects of his tics.

Near-flawless speeches in the House of Commons and on television were praised by Tory newspapers. The apparent depth of his feelings on this issue involving the Commonwealth may have convinced some true-blue Tories that here, after all, is a socialist who understands British's greatness.

Wilson's trip to Rhodesia before it seized independence demonstrated his determination not to stand on dignity but to do everything possible to avoid a break. He ignored those who argued that a British prime minister should not run like an errand boy to bargain with an upstart colony.

Another criticism of Wilson, whose political agility has been acknowledged since he took power in October, 1964, is that no one can fathom where his heart lies on a particular issue.

JUST SHOWMANSHIP

So fixed is that impression in some minds that they wonder whether Wilson now is staging a dazzling piece of political showmanship. Just how far and how long will the Labor government persist in efforts to break the Rhodesian stand?

Most sources have no doubt that Wilson is perfectly sincere in his campaign to restore British's rights and also to safeguard the rights of the white population in Rhodesia. They also point out that there are incidental political benefits that Wilson can gain from the situation.

—By his tough line, he can placate the left wing of his own party which periodically has been on the verge of revolt over what they regard as his unsatisfactory stand on points of socialist principle. These include his support of the United States in the Vietnam war and his delay in nationalizing steel.

—These sources also believe Wilson might bring about a split in the Tory opposition. If sanctions really hurt Rhodesia, elements of the opposition might rebel, putting Edward Heath, the new Tory leader, in an awkward position.

Above all, it is felt that the Rhodesian affair gives wilson an opportunity to restore his "image" as a man of the left, the one he enjoyed in earlier days.

EDINBURGH (CP)—The ordinary postage stamp may be a dangerous piece of sculpture at Edinburgh University. Dr. S. He suggests a non-toxic disinfectant be added to the gum.

Purchasing Agents Hold Meeting

Mr. J. Hilson, Purchasing Director of the Turbine Generator Division of Canadian Westinghouse Company, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Purchasing Agents Association of Eastern Ontario, this subject, "Management View Point—Where Do We Go" was appropriately timed, as it gave the viewpoint of management and outlined the advantages gained in pursuing the professional development programs. Mr. Hilson pointed out the importance of taking direct action to generate a profit within the industry for whom you work, in surpassing the government of goods stage. The importance of purchasing function and the responsibilities in the management team is now an accepted fact.

The speaker placed particular emphasis on the importance of experience, education and ability on the part of today's purchasing executive in order to enable them to forecast price and delivery of commodities on future basis rather than on a day to day basis.

The present professional development program in the education being carried on by all purchasing associations in Canada would not help but be a stepping stones to greater responsibilities, the speaker said.

Also purchasing agents should be up to date on vital information presented by representatives calling on them, while a careful study of economics presented in periodicals and papers must become a basic activity of people in the profession.

Under the direction of Peter Stalker of Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. the members were divided into groups of six people for discussion. Buying and purchase orders used by the individual companies were exhibited. The advantages and disadvantages of these forms were thoroughly discussed.

Members attending from Belleville were:

P. R. Huddleston, Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co.; F. Laundry, Wilson Concrete Products Ltd.; L. G. McBrien, Mead Johnson of Canada Ltd.; F. W. Newman, Stewart-Warner Corp. of Canada Ltd.; H. M. Burley, International Hides, Co. of Canada (1963) Ltd.; E. E. Palmer, Northern Electric Co. Ltd.; J. R. Peoples, Johnson & Johnson of Canada Ltd., and P. Stalker, Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co.

$3,000 fine. He had been described by the prosecution as Rivard's "executive officer."

No notice of appeal was made immediately on behalf of any of the convicted men. Earlier Friday, the judge had turned down an appeal for new trials for the four.

Key witnesses in the September trial were--Joseph Michel Caron, a convicted smuggler serving 10 years in prison, and Roger Beauchemin, a former waiter at Domaine Ideale, a resort lodge Rivard once owned in the Laurentian Mountains north of Montreal. Beauchemin was granted immunity from prosecution.

Caron and Beauchemin testified that at Rivard's direction, they transported more than $150,000,000 worth of heroin from Mexico and Canada to Bridgeport, Conn., and Flint, Mich., in 1963.

Caron's arrest at the international bridge between Mexico and the United States in Laredo Oct. 10, 1963, broke open a smuggling operation. U.S. customs agents seized 76 pounds of heroin in the car Caron was driving.

Frank Cappola of Bridgeport, Conn., is free on $100,000 bond awaiting separate trial on a conspiracy charge arising from that incident. No trial date has been set.

Before coming to trial here, Rivard was the centre of a political storm in Canada. While legal proceedings were under way against him in Montreal to have him extradited to the United States to face the narcotics charges, it was alleged that some high-placers Ottawa had been made to get him out on bail.

Raymond Denis, former executive assistant to the Canadian immigration minister, now is before the courts on a charge of offering money to Montreal lawyer Pierre Lamontagne, who represented the U.S. government in the Rivard proceedings, to get Lamontagne to drop his opposition to bail for Rivard.

Earlier this year Rivard escaped from Bordeaux prison in Montreal, while awaiting extradition. He was recaptured in Montreal.

which broke away from Britain.

2. Immediate action be taken to correct a slowdown in Prairie wheat deliveries to the loading port of Vancouver.

The trip was climaxed Friday morning when Mr. Diefenbaker invited the corporal's guard of reporters left with him from the election into his car.

He said the Liberals had a constitutional responsibility to resign along with Walter Gordon, who quit as finance minister.

With this out of the way, he confirmed that he is thinking of taking a week-long vacation in Jamaica.

For the next few days he has no precise plans. He will catch up on his correspondence and then go to Jamaica.

PLANS SPEECH

He also said he plans to fill an engagement made "a long while ago" to speak at a high land society function in Sydney, N.S.

Mr. Diefenbaker, sometimes referred to as the last of the whistle-stop campaigners, was doing it again on the way back to Ottawa.

He stepped off his car occasionally at station stopovers to say hello and shake the hands of well-wishers who heard he was coming along.

Arriving in Ottawa, Mr. Diefenbaker, still buoyed by the Nov. 8 federal election count which gave his party 99 seats and denied the Liberals their sought-after majority, said he doesn't expect Parliament will be called into session until early the new year.

He repeated his statement made earlier in the day at Caprool, Ont., that the proper constitutional course for the government is to resign along with Finance Minister Gordon.

ELECTION NOT CERTAIN

He also said if the Liberal government is defeated in a non-confidence vote in the Commons there wouldn't necessarily be an election.

The prime minister, he said, would have to recommend to Governor-General Vanier that some other party could form an administration "and that would be Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition."

Mr. Diefenbaker suggested during his trip that the government has a constitutional responsibility to resign along with Mr. Gordon.

Terming the Gordon resignation a vote of non-confidence against the Liberals by themselves, he told reporters "the wrong-doing of a minister becomes the wrong doing of the cabinet."

Mr. Diefenbaker said that "constitutionally" no one minister can vicariously accept responsibility for the wrongdoing of the cabinet.

They "all go down the drain," he said, terming the situation a "travesty of parliamentary government."

CALLS IT MISTAKE

Prime Minister Pearson had made a "big mistake" in calling the election in the first place, it cost the public treasury $13,500,000. This amount does not include what the political parties spent on campaigning.

Mr. Diefenbaker also contended that the campaign he gave bad advice to the prime minister, Mr. Gordon had violated the rule of secrecy as a privy councillor.

The resignation of Mr. Gordon and campaign manager for the Liberal party would have been an internal party matter, Mr. Diefenbaker said, not to resign his cabinet post is a different matter.

The government as a whole must bear responsibility if it is admitted it has been following wrong policies.

Mr. Diefenbaker compared the Gordon resignation to those of Soviet leaders who step down and confess to error and thus absolve the head man. Nothing such as this has happened since the modern cabinet system began with Britain's Sir Robert Peel, he said.

won my share. I want to thank my many workers and supporters for their wonderful efforts. They did truly a fine job on my behalf and on behalf of the Liberal party."

"So closes the federal election scene. I intend to remain active in the Liberal party and in the area will render any assistance I can regardless of political inclination."

The winning candidate in his statement said:

"I am very happy with the news we received this morning. I am sure the welcome news to all my supporters.

"I want to express my sincere thanks to the people of Hastings South who supported me at the polls.

"I am indeed grateful to the many many people who worked so hard on my behalf in the election campaign.

"To all it is my sincere desire to serve every citizen in the riding; I ask your co-operation and give you my assurance when I go to Ottawa this riding and its people will receive my full representation.

"The campaign is now in the past--let us work together for the betterment of the riding and for all Canadians."

Crude Card Inspires System for Retarded

By ROBERT HOLTON

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Weber wonders if it's a beautifully crude Christmas card. But he says it changed his life.

Weber was given the homemade card by a 15-year-old mentally retarded boy who admired his talents. He was a popular, young jazz pianist then.

"When that boy handed me the card, something inside me changed," Weber recalled. "I suddenly realized how self-centered my life was and I vowed to do something about it."

That was seven years ago.

Today, far from the small Illinois town where he was handed the card before giving a Christmas recital in a mental institution, Weber has set into motion at Columbia University Teachers College a revolution in the education of severely mentally retarded children.

He devised a six-note method of instructing the mentally retarded in the playing of musical instruments, using letters on sheet music which correspond to letters pasted on the keys of a piano.

CONDUCTS CLASSES

Weber, 38, is working on his doctorate in music at Columbia and conducts regular weekly music classes for mentally retarded children as part of his research for the degree.

Among his pupils is Peter Connelly, 27, who mentally retarded youngster who, up to several weeks ago, couldn't sit still at a piano, much less play a tune.

"Today, Peter walks up to the piano and he plays such tunes as Jingle Bells, Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star and many others," said the boy's widowed mother, Catherine Connolly.

"It's not merely a end there," she said. "Probably the biggest benefit for Peter is the fact that he has at last he realizes he can do something. He feels needed and wanted among other people."

Nicolia Maranen has been bringing her retarded son, Scorpio, 7, to Weber's classes for a month.

EASIER TO MANAGE

"Scorpio is hyperactive," she said. "Until these lessons came along there was nothing that could hold his attention for over a few seconds.

"Now, he is much different. I don't say he is normal. He'll never be that with the brain damage he had at birth. But he's so much easier to manage and he gets a little something out of life now."

Scorpio was among about a dozen youngsters gathered recently for a Saturday afternoon class under Weber. About 10 teachers at the school stood around the room as Weber put the youngsters through their paces.

"You must realize that up to now children like these were considered unteachable," he said. "They can't even keep themselves or talk much better than a mumble or grunt.

"Yet, with this method I have proved that they can learn if someone will give them learning in little doses such as 7 to 10 with only six notes of music."

When Peter Connolly finished playing a tune on his clarinet, he turned to Weber.

"You're my teacher," he said. "My nice teacher. I like you."

east of Nassau, reported at 2:30 a.m. EST that she was "burning right to the water line."

The Finnpulp had 90 survivors.

At Nassau, Charles Badeau of the Bahamas Sea Rescue Association said reports from the scene were confusing and "it is possible that some of the missing persons are on the rescue boats."

"There are no more survivors in the water," he said.

The twelve badly - burned persons were flown here from the Bahama Star and were taken in ambulances to Princess Margaret Hospital.

The Eastern Steamship Co., owner of the Bahama Star, said the vessel would sail to Miami, arriving some time this afternoon. There was no word on where the other rescue ships would make port.

The Bahama Star had sailed from Miami a few minutes after the Yarmouth Castle and had her in sight when the fire broke out.

Coast guard planes flew out of Miami and the U.S. cutters Cape Knox and Cape Shoalwater sped toward the blazing ship. The planes dropped flares to aid rescue workers.

The Yarmouth Castle, a Second World War troop ship, left Miami Friday for the 12-hour overnight run to Nassau. She carried 371 passengers, most of them Canadian members, and 175 crew members.

STARTS FORWARD

Reports reaching Miami said the fire broke out in the forward part of the vessel and the passengers were evacuated from the stern.

The Yarmouth Castle was built in 1927 for the Nova Scotia Steamship Corp. and operated for a time between Boston and Nova Scotia.

In 1956, she was renamed Queen of Nassau, but three years later was re-christened Yarmouth Castle. She was purchased by Yarmouth Cruise Lines Inc., a Panamanian corporation, a year ago.

Last Oct. 13, the Yarmouth Castle broke loose from her moorings at Miami during Hurricane Betsy and slammed into a sister ship, Yarmouth. The Yarmouth was due to dock at Nassau after a run from Nassau.

Gall Midge On Increase In Maritimes

FREDERICTON (CP) — The federal forestry department officer here says the balsam gall midge, an insect whose attacks on balsam fir Christmas trees may seriously affect their market value, is on the increase in the Maritimes.

Extension officer C. C. Smith has warned woodlot owners, who will soon start to cut trees for the Christmas market, to examine new needles carefully for small swellings or galls before any fir trees are cut in 1965. The galls are caused by tiny midge larvae within the needles.

He says infested needles are usually shed in the fall and trees cut with a large number of galls may be rejected at the

Liberals Gain

In recent years, only the Liberals have picked up seats on service vote turnovers. There hasn't been more than two changes in any one election.

The Liberals picked up two seats in 1963 on the service vote, but lost one of them on a judicial recount. They also picked up two seats in 1962 but lost one of them when irregularities were found in the service vote.

A total of 79,148 servicemen, their wives and veterans in hospitals cast ballots out of 122,816 eligible. This was a turnout of 64.3 per cent, compared with a civilian turnout of about 74 per cent.

Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay sent telegrams to all returning officers at 8 a.m. EST today reporting to each the votes cast for candidates by servicemen, who voted during the week before the Nov. 8 voting in Canada.

CONFIRMS SQUEAKS

The service vote confirmed the narrow civilian wins of Liberals George E. Nixon and Jack Roxburgh over Conservatives in the Ontario ridings of Algoma West and Norfolk, respectively.

In Toronto Trinity, Defence Minister Hellyer, who has implemented armed forces integration, received 80 votes compared to 26 for his Conservative opponent and six for the NDP.

Three party leaders won the service vote in their ridings and lost out.

Prime Minister Pearson got 112 service votes in Algoma East compared with a total of 26 for his two opponents.

Conservative leader Diefenbaker got 91 votes in Prince Albert, compared with 99 for the Liberal, 23 NDP, and nine Social Credit.

Robert Thompson, Social Credit leader, received 104 votes in Red Deer. His nearest opponent, a Liberal, received 91.

T. C. Douglas, NDP leader, got 113 service votes in Burnaby - Coquitlam compared with 91 Liberal, 31 Conservative and 32 Social Credit.

In Villeneuve, Credit ister Real Caouette received only 54 service votes compared with 118 for the Liberal, 13 NDP, and seven Conservative.

OVERSEAS FOR LIBP

Servicemen in Europe who cast ballots for Algoma gave Mr. Pearson 27 votes and 20 opposition candidates none. Service. men in Europe voting in Trinity gave Mr. Hellyer votes, the Conservative votes, and the NDP candidate none.

The service vote was heavily Liberal in Ontario ridings where ministers who were defeated election night: Agriculture Minister Hays and Veterans Affairs Minister J. Watson Macnaught. The service vote did not turn the Tory defeats into victories, however.

In Calgary South, Mr. Hays received 1,633 service votes compared with 210 for Conservative winner Ray Ballard, 91 for Social Credit and 53 for the NDP.

In the Prince Edward Island riding of Prince, Mr. MacNaught received 1,240 service votes compared with 114 for Conservative Victor David MacDonald, and 20 for the NDP.

In Terrebonne riding, Associate Defence Minister Cadieux swamped his three opponents. He got 122 votes against their 13 across the country, there were 10 votes for Communist candidates compared with eight in 1963.

VOTED IN RIDINGS

The service vote was taker between Nov. 1 and Nov. 6. Servicemen voted for candidates in ridings where their home towns are located and their ballots are simply added to the civilian count by ridings.

The most famous turnover caused by the service vote was in 1945 when Liberal Prime Minister Mackenzie King was defeated in Prince Albert, Sask. he entered the Commons later through a byelection in Glengarry, Ont.

The official count in all ridings begins next week. Any candidate can request a judicial recount within four days after the official count is announced.

The election writs, the final official count, are to be returned Dec. 8, one month after the civilian vote.

Liberal candidates led the service vote in all except six of the 265 seats.

These six were: Prince Albert, where Mr. Diefenbaker won; Red Deer, where Mr. Thompson won; Oxford and in Ontario, Brandon-Souris in Manitoba and Kamloops in British Columbia, all won by Conservatives.

Mr. Gordon Resigns

Appearing on television on election night, former Finance Minister Walter Gordon appeared unusually buoyant when he answered questions on the progress of the vote.

At that point it was fairly clear another minority Liberal administration would be the ultimate result. However, if it had not been for the fact that Mr. Gordon has now resigned, accepting responsibility for what he termed his "bad advice" in the calling of an election, his casualness might have been construed as an unnecessarily flippant way in which to regard such a long and costly—and as it turned out, futile, campaign.

Mr. Pearson, always anxious to please, said in reply to Mr. Gordon's letter of resignation that he could not "accept your assumption of responsibility for the decision to hold the recent election . . . You and others advised me to hold the election at this time, for reasons which seemed perfectly valid, but the decision was mine and the sole responsibility for the decision remains mine."

The prime minister is not very convincing. Clearly he was under pressure—led by Mr. Gordon—to call an election, but failed to think the situation through for himself. Instead of rallying his party to continue governing the country, he surrendered to this pressure. Hence the country's unhappy position today.

It is ironic to recall that this unnecessary election might never have been called had Mr. Gordon, after the fiasco of his first Budget nearly three years ago, when changes were forced upon him after its provisions were made public, resigned then and there.

Mayoralty Race

Alderman Whalen's bid for the mayoralty represents an interesting start to the municipal election campaign. The seven-year veteran of city council is running against Mayor Jack Ellis who is seeking another two-year term as chief citizen.

In deciding to enter the mayoralty race Mr. Whalen said that "after seven years in council I feel that I should either step up or make room for someone else."

Whatever the outcome there is room on council for men of the experience of both Mayor Ellis and Alderman Whalen. Whoever fills the office after the election December 9 is already aware that it is demanding on both time and stamina. No federal representative is any busier than the Mayor of this city.

Mayor Ellis has been here, there and everywhere, often attending two or more functions on the course of an evening.

The city faces the kind of problems attendant upon rapid growth. This is perhaps the most important factor in Canadian life today. Nationwide, the population is expected to reach about 35 million within 20 years. There is proportionate growth in this and other communities, and as we have noted before there is need for planning in the areas of housing and industry, education and recreation.

There are the problems of the downtown area —parking and so on.

The period ahead is going to be one of the most significant in Belleville's history. It will demand a firm hand in leadership, as well as continued conscientious service on the part of the people's representatives.

Water From the Ocean

One of the problems of water conservation is the fact that nearly three-quarters of the annual rainfall in the world is either lost by evaporation or finds it way back to the ocean. Yet increasing demands for water mean that the oceans of the world will have to be exploited more extensively as a source of fresh water.

Representatives of 58 countries met in Washington recently. They discussed water needs at the first International Symposium on Water Desalination, which means simply the production of fresh water from salt water.

Practical methods, based mainly on distillation, are already well established, but means are being sought to improve them and reduce costs, now running at between 20 and 50 cents per thousand gallons.

Since the first successful desalination plant —for marine use—was made in Glasgow in 1884, Britain has been in the forefront of development. Three-quarters of the world's desalination equipment is British.

Much store is being placed in the production of low-cost nuclear energy to bring down costs. The Washington symposium was told it should now be relatively simple to design nuclear stations which would work in conjunction with the existing multiple flash distillation equipment (by which heated sea water is vaporized to produce pure water) and produce both power and water.

Who's Who in Canada's "Classless Society" in 1965?

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—After all those weeks of being courted with pledges of future favors with promissory notes of great and good things to come—all, of course, drawn against your own tax money—it understandably may come as a bit of a let-down to learn that actually you're a nobody.

Or, perhaps more accurately, not enough of a somebody to rate above the official status level defined by the ruling bureaucracy as "unworthy".

And just think how, until last Monday, you were the centre of attention, flattered with honeyed phrases as the great and mis-so-great...the big men and small, the political leaders and the coat-tail-riders sought your favor.

Well, you served your primary political purpose last Monday, so have the good grace to retire, uncomplaining, to your proper place — at the very bottom of the totem pole of national status.

For now, with the votes cast and counted, preliminary work begun on revision of something few people beyond the parochial bounds of the National Capital likely ever dreamed existed.

It's what's known as "The Order of Precedence," a sort of official pecking-order, a national who's-who ranking in this supposed classless society of ours.

IN CARBON

As with most things in the Capital, it comes in duplicate.

First in the Parliamentary Guide, the semi-official progress and score card of the Commons and Senate, and then published by the Secretary of State.

Both prescribe in rigid progression who gets slapped and in what order.

All men are created equal, both President Lincoln and the Bill of Rights once decreed. But that was more than a hundred years ago, and equality has become relative.

For if you're just an ordinary taxpayer, a mere unbelonging Smith, Brown or Jones, nobody is less equal than you at the bottom of the national bin.

Who, then, at the top?

Both the Parliamentary Guide and the Secretary of State agree officially — and probably nobody except a swinging Separatist would quarrel with it — that the Governor General, The Queen's Man, is No. 1.

Second in line is the Prime Minister, and you scarcely can fault that rating. Then follows the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, and unless you're Lucien Rivard, that is OK, too.

But then, and get this, who should come next but the high fallutin' gentlemen of the Diplomatic Pania Brigade, the ambassadors extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary who not only aren't citizens — so what are they doing rating for rank with us supposed relatives home-grown Canadians — but are exempt from all the laws and regulations the taxes that we less exalted beings must obey and pay.

WHERE'S "JOE?"

Next in the bowing-and-scraping order come Members of the Federal Cabinet, Provincial Lieutenant Governors, Privy Councillors, Speakers first of the Senate and then the Commons and the Leader of Her Majesty's Official Opposition.

The Provincial Premiers rank a surprisingly low thirteenth — surprising to you remember the muscle they pack in putting The Big Stick to our No. 2 Man, the Federal Prime Minister.

Number 18 in the queue, standing behind the Senators, Commissioners and Chief Cads Joe."

He may be a great hero, with every house from a VC down the line to a perfect-attendance medal in the luncheon club; he may be a multi-millionaire wheeler-dealer creating industries, manufacturing jobs and expanding the Gross National Product; and he can still be just one of our 19,000, 00 or so nobodies.

What is Heaven's name is this Precedence?

It is, the Parliamentary Guide has pronounced: "The priority of place, or superiority of rank in the conventional system of arrangement and in which the more eminent and dignified members of the community are classified . . . an ordinary sense of decency, not to speak of dignity, demands that the monopoly of the places of honor be placed beyond the accomplishment of the assumable upstart and unworthy elements."

So there!

Soloist Was On Overtime!

Christian Science Monitor

We confess to a fondness for weddings and other ceremonies which retain the color of ancient customs. But in all such ceremonial occasions, well rehearsed, there is, admittedly, sacrifice of drama, suspense, and the element of surprise.

There still are, of course, several opportunities for the unexpected to occur. There is the initial suspense: Will the groom actually appear? There remains at least a tinge of doubt.

Will someone leap to his feet when given the opportunity to show cause why this man should not marry this woman? There is always a remote possibility that a possessor of special knowledge will exercise his prerogative, but we no longer really expect it. The question has become rhetorical. The clergyman passes quickly to the next line.

Will the best man misplace the ring? Even the best man seems to have improved. He invariably turns in a flawless performance.

Given the rarity of the unexpected on such occasions, we were taken with the report of Miss Virgie Waggle's wedding in Little Rock. It seemed that, moments before the wedding, a girl entered, spoke to the organist, and then sang two songs for the assembled guests. As the ceremony reverently progressed, the soloist's uneasiness increased. It was only after the ceremony that he hurriedly explained she had sung at the wrong wedding. With the help of friends, she arrived at the right wedding in the nick of time.

This serves to remind us that, in spite of our delight in the unexpected, we are, in retrospect, glad that we managed to appear at the right wedding the time we were cast in the role of the groom. (We would not, in any event, have qualified as soloist.)

As for the Little Rock soloist, she doubtless be singing, "Get me to the (right) church on time."

Packages Mean Garbage

Brantford Expositor

No previous age has had so much garbage. One man's trash is another man's problem, and sometimes his own. What else can we expect when almost everything we consume either wrapped, packaged, canned, bottled, jarred, cartoned or tinned and we are interested only in the contents?

Once most of our trash was ash. Now it is almost anything we don't want. And as our wants expand—think of those 300 different items on a groceteria's shelves—so does our garbage dilemma. The more things we use the greater the refuse. The Chinese invented the junk. Modern civilization invented junk and is bedevilled by its own invention.

Those of us who are fortunate enough to be able to unload our weekly garbage problem where it is out of sight, mind and smelling distance will follow sympathetically the quest of Tutela Heights Park for an alternative to the site selected by Township Council for a new dump. It is one of the oddities of this sanitation saga that the old one, now full, is at Mount Pleasant. A dump by any other name ...

What they are looking for is some place, as the poet said, without a habitation and a name. Certainly not Davern Road. When they find it they might think of dedicating it to T. S. Eliott, author of The Wasteland.

This affair will have been of service if it draws public attention to the cost of getting rid of our mounting garbage. The propose site of 100 acres cost $20,000. This, as residential land, it would be worth $400,000 by one estimate. How much longer can Canadian communities afford to take up valuable land to dispose of their rubbish?

Victims of Crime

Montreal Gazette

The feeling grows that the victims of crime are becoming the forgotten people.

The British government has taken the initiative in setting up a Criminal Injuries Compensation Board. It hears the pleas of persons who have suffered permanent injury, or disability, as the victims of crimes. In the first eight months it has awarded compensation amounting to nearly $100,000. Examples of those helped are the police constable blinded by shotgun pellets when trying to make an arrest, and the mother of a young man killed by a gang of youths.

To Your Good Health

Some Criticism Due Goddess Mammalia

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please tell me how to contact a plastic surgeon regarding breast implants, and the cost of such an operation. — J. W.

* * *

I've briefly answered this type of question frequently, but since inquiries keep coming in, some further elaboration is in order.

It isn't just about breast surgery — although at times I think the writers who have invented against the god Mammalia might devote a few words to the goddess Mammalia.

However, whether the purpose of plastic surgery is to improve ears, noses, wrinkles, cleft palates, etc., ask your regular physician to refer you to a specialist. It's as simple as that. If you don't have a regular physician (although everyone should) you can get reliable advice from your county medical society.

Do not assume, as many people do, that plastic surgery is something apart from the world of medicine. True, there are occasional charlatans who claim to have "secret" ways of removing wrinkles, just as there are even more dangerous o a new miracle and faith healers.

But, a certified plastic surgeon is just as much a member of the medical profession as a heart surgeon, brain surgeon or other specialist. He must have standard medical training, then specialized training, first in surgery and then in plastic surgery. This takes some years of work.

His prime goal is not making people prettier. Reconstructing faces mutilated in accidents is one example of the very seri ous responsibility of plastic surgery . . . and correcting cleft palates with which some children are born. Some heart surgery is, in a very real sense, plastic surgery. Those are just a few examples.

Some interesting work has been done with certain criminals who were influenced by particularly distorted features, and correction of their appearance, I've been told, has in diverted cases changed their outlook on life.

Correcting protruding ears is one of the most frequently performed plastic surgery procedures. Ears have saved a good many youngsters from thoughtless ridicule. Children's ears are a disfiguring degree can be built up. There have been cases of people with shrunken pneumatocy, who have found they did much better in the business world after a face lift. This doesn't produce perpetual youth, but it can be a valid means of not appearing old by years older than you really are.

Building up or trimming down or reshaping noses is often done and when eliminating true disfigurement, it is a blessing — just as is the repair of the mutilated mouth of a baby who has chewed through an electric cord. (I still shudder at some cases I have seen.)

Where the expectation exists that plastic surgery can turn an ordinary face into a beautiful one — look out. Be realistic.

I'm often asked about surgery to build up breasts. First, the rule of beauty by tape measure is overdone these days. Materials can be inserted surgically but what the results will be some years later is a question. I'm conservative. And besides unsightly scarring, as demonstrated by any number of fashion models, can provide more feminine charm than mere bulk.

Cost? This is major surgery, and requires special train in g and exceptional care and judgment. It will cost accordingly, but varies dependin on difficulty. If in doubt, ask the surgeon. And remember to find out the hospital cost as well as the surgeon's fee.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is a 2½-year-old child too young to eat all the popcorn he wants? — M. P.

Nutritionally, popcorn is fine in food value, but it is rough, doesn't dissolve readily, and is deadly if a child gets a piece of it jammed in his windpipe. I wouldn't give popcorn to a child 2½ under any circumstances.

Over 2,500 residents of the city from all walks of life, took advantage of the free tuberculosis clinic sponsored by the Belleville and District Shrine Club in conjunction with the National Tuberculosis Association here this week.

This figure in conjunction with 3,000 examinations conducted in factories of the city and 1,000 examinations of duty personnel brings atotal of 6,500 examined for T.B. this summer.

The clinic was made possible by finances derived from the annual sale of Christmas seals, a yearly social service work conducted by the members of the Shrine Club here.

The Clinic here was a decided success, Shrine officials stated today, "The response to the offer was more than gratifying and the Shrine Club is justifiably proud of its efforts in bringing this free service to the people of Belleville," one stated. Examinations are conducted by medical and technical experts of the Department of Health.

Belleville Hydro Electric System is mighty free of its debenture debt, the Commission having voted to pay off the outstanding debentures, amounting to $14,000. The whole cost of this debt will mean a large saving in interest. The local distributing system has purchased in 1929 from the Ontario Hydro Commission and taken over by the first commissioners at the beginning of the year 1930. The debentures issued for the system totalled $176,000. Not only have these been retired within the past five years but there have been reductions in rates and replacements and improvements to the system. The early shining out of the indebtedness is believed to set a municipal record for Ontario.

Mineral Rights

Hamilton Spectator

Some lakehead citizens have perceived a threat to the Board of Transport Commissioners decision regarding that the Canadian Pacific relinquish its claims on oil and mineral rights if it discontinues one of its two transcontinental passenger train services.

There will be many who will agree that the brief makes sense. When the CNR first crossed Canada in 1885, it was a magnificent public service enterprise that would link the Atlantic to the Pacific. There was no hint of profit being the most important consideration in those days.

A Lift for Living

Earth's Grievious 'Goodbyes' Are Heaven's Glad 'Hello'

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

LETTER TO A FRIEND IN GRIEF

Dear Friend:

Only a few hours ago I learned with sadness of your husband's sudden passing. My sorrow is for you, rather than for him because he is all right now. He lived fully, effectively serving the world well, and he is now in Good Hands. But you and your family have been sorely hurt by the wrench of his unexpected departure and by the loneliness that gives grief its aching anguish.

I pray that your Christian faith will support you now with the assurance that death is not fatal to our loved ones. It cannot destroy them. It only fulfills them, so that all that is partial becomes complete, all that is but seed becomes flower, and all that is imperfect becomes perfected.

If we had our choice as to when we would die, many of us would choose an autumn day for this is a time when our passing would seem natural and appropriate. The quiet busyness of summer is past, and all things that have had their brief hour of growth are now ripened and fulfilled.

SWEET AUTUMN

Autumn is sweet with harvested fruits. Now the colorful leaf drifts to its bed, a kind of sacramental act signifying resignation and obedience to a Power beyond itself. Swallows have clustered and have prepared southward. Wild geese now fly in wedges toward their winter homes. And above all else, late autumn is a time when we dream of coming holidays and of homecoming.

In these days of autumn beauty it is some comfort to know that we are all a part of a plan that autumn symbolizes. The passing of a dear one is a sacred reminder that our brief stay here is intended for the nurture of our souls, for growth and maturing, and when seed becomes flower and fruit, and when the fruit of life has ripened, God has other, higher purposes for us.

As the leaf returns to the soil from which the parent tree has come, as migrant birds feel the tug of a distant home and fly toward it, as wheat are drawn homeward at harvest time, so the soul has a destiny toward which it moves. Death is the fulfillment toward which all human life secretly, uncon sciously yearns. Death is homecoming. So we all rise and follow the homeward call that sounds in our souls as softly as a half-heard sigh.

TOO EARLY ?

Has death come to your loved one too early? Does death ever come too soon? Nearly always, death is premature for those who must bid a loved one "goodbye" for a little while. But death can hardly come soon enough for those who say "hello." You know how it is when large families gather for holidays. Some travel by automobile, some by bus, some by train and others by airplane. Many get there when expected, but there is often one who especially gladdens the hearts of the folks at home by arriving a day or two earlier than planned. Or, a similar way, sometimes one of our loved ones gladdens those already in our Eternal Home by arriving earlier than expected. While those he has left behind for a while suffer grief sooner than they intended, those he greets at our Father's House, and the traveller himself, rejoice at the glad surprise of his early arrival.

May God comfort and strengthen you and yours with the assurance that in His good time He will translate all earth's grievous "goodbyes" into glad greetings of "hello."

You are in my love and prayers. Affectionately,

Ann Landers

Habitual Tab Grabber Behaves Selfishly

DEAR ANN LANDERS — One evening last week we invited a couple to join us for dinner. We called ahead and made reservations, picked up Mac and Jane and were all set for a wonderful evening.

ANN LANDERS

Just before the dessert Mac excused himself to make a phone call — he said. When my husband asked for the check he discovered that Mac had paid it.

My husband was non-plussed when Jane thanked him profusely for the evening. Obviously she was unaware that we had been their guests. What should a person do when he is placed in a spot like this? It spoiled the evening for us — LET DOWN.

* *

DEAR LET DOWN — The habitual check-grabber may think he is behaving generously, but in a curious sense he is behaving selfishly by depriving others of the chance to be generous.

Tell Mac that if he pulls that stunt on you again it will be the last time you'll go to dinner with him. And make it stick.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My daughter and I are having a serious disagreement over her approaching marriage.

Carman is 41. She has been married and divorced three times and has had two children by each of her three husbands. Now Carmen is in love with a man she says was sent from heaven. She insists he is the only man she has ever loved and this marriage is the only real marriage of the lot.

Her previous marriages were civil ceremonies. Now she wants a church wedding, complete with bridal gown and the works, with her six children as attendants.

My husband says it will be a farce and that people will be laughing so loud nobody will be able to hear the organ music.

What do you think? — MOTHER OF THE BRIDE (?).

DEAR MOTHER — A three time loser with six children is no bride. I agree with your husband.

* *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I started to date a 17-year-old boy several weeks ago. We get along just fine, but something about our relationship bothers me. Bennett (made up name) is very affectionate and is always wanting to hold my hands or put his arm around me. He kissed me three weeks ago and it was the first time I had ever been kissed like that. The most unusual feeling came over me. I like melted in his arms.

Bennett has never tried anything but I'm afraid if he did I would be weak. I always thought I would win every boy-battle. Now I'm not so sure.

Don't tell me to speak to my clergyman. The boy is his son. Thanks for your help. — BUTTER.

* *

DEAR BUTTER — The fact that you are aware of your weakness is a great big help. Overconfidence has done in more girls than stupidity.

Now that you are aware of Bennett's overpowering charms and your own vulnerability, resolve to avoid situations which could lead to trouble.

Stay out of dark rooms. Impose a rigid curfew on yourself. Double dates are a protection, and don't just "cruise around." And never park with him in a car "just to talk," or you'll run out of conversation mighty fast. Toots.

* *

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Sent for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

U.C.W. Meetings

SPRINGBROOK U.C.W.

The November meeting of the Springbrook U.C.W. was held in the church hall with 22 present. The president, Mrs. M. Mason, opened the meeting with an appropriate verse. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. H. Haslett using the theme "perfect trust and perfect peace."

The Bible study period was led by Mrs. G. McFall on Saul the persecutor became Paul the Apostle. Those taking part in the scripture reading were Mrs. S. Downer, Mrs. G. Broadworth, Mrs. H. Haslett and Mrs. C. Burnhill.

The theme, "Being a Christian in Brazil" was given by Mrs. J. Thompson. She told of what the United Church has done there in the last five years by sending missionaries and money.

The secretary, Mrs. M. Bateman, read the minutes and correspondence. Spring Creek U.C.W. are invited to a bazaar and tea at Bethesda and a bazaar and dessert tea at St. Pauls in Stirling. A card was signed for a member, Mrs. Silzer, who has been ill. Mrs. George Thompson had a report from Fred Victor Mission on sales sent. She also reported on old aylons and 2 pounds of stamps sent to Korea.

The chairman of each committee handed in her report. The nominating committee under the leadership of Mrs. K. Thompson brought in the new slate of officers. They will be installed at the December meeting. Mrs. G. Appe presided.

The tables for the Church Hall have arrived. The treasurer Mrs. G. Broadworth reported on the financial success of the anniversary supper and a sale at Hordz.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. G. Appe. The hostess group served refreshments.

Alpha-Lambda Prepares for Future Ball

A meeting of Alpha Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. Arlene Boretski, Tuesday evening, to finalize plans for the Black and Gold Ball to be held at the Commodore this coming week.

The main undertaking each year of the chapter is the nursery dance started 17 years ago. Committee reports showed that all plans are complete and ticket sales are going well.

A most rewarding program was presented by Mrs. Margaret Bakay entitled "Personality and Relationship." Mrs. Bakay implemented her talk with a tape recorder and two telephones. All of the members had their turn speaking over telephone and listening to the recording of the conversation. It was revealed how important it is to speak directly into the receiver, and how the tone of voice, as well as the responses, presents a personality to the listener. Mrs. Bakay is a retired operator and occasional lecturer with the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada in Belleville.

Following the meeting refreshments were served by hostess Mrs. Boretski and co-hostess Mrs. Alice Wood.

WAS STILL AT WORK

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — A television documentary on crime in Britian was to have included an interview with a retired criminal. Plans had to be changed at the last minute when the man was arrested on a fresh charge of theft.

Librarian Elected Fifth Fed. Secretary

At the recent annual meeting of the Film Federation of the Film Council of Eastern Ontario, held at Morrison House, Combermere, Miss Olive Delaney, Corby Public Library librarian was elected secretary of the Federations.

In the recent library report submitted by Miss Delaney the total circulation of books for September and October was listed at 52,746. There are five school libraries within the total number of books circulated listed at 8,227. The library in the King George School was withdrawn in the summer and a new location will be opened in the Park Dale school at the end of November.

Also in the report it was stated that the Harry J. Clarke School has grown to such an extent that it is impossible to service the school in one day. To overcome this problem the teachers of the junior students bring pupils to the East Branch Library in the mornings, once every two weeks. If this system works out satisfactorily it will be continued until the end of the school year.

REPORT ON FILMS

In the report on films it was noted that 130 films were booked during the last two months. In addition to the films in the library there are eight blocks of films on deposit until the end of December. During this time the library assistant in charge of films, prepared a list of all the titles available and sent it out to all the members of the Film Council.

Mrs. H. Orr became a full time member of the library staff the first of October and her duties will be in the Boys' and Girls' section of the main library and in the libraries of the H. J. Clarke and Park Dale schools.

The auditorium has been used for meetings of the Camera Club, the Quinte Stamp Club, The United Empire Loyalists, and the Belleville and District Film Council.

ART EXHIBITIONS

There have been two art exhibitions—one a junior art display by two students of a local art teacher, Philippa Faulker, who was in Europe recently has an attractive exhibition of European sketches in the library auditorium at the present time. This exhibition will remain for a few more weeks and is well worth seeing.
